NO. 183—EIGHTY-SECOND YEAR | VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, JULY 14, 1940 | THIRTY-EIGHT PAGES

WILL PROCEED WITH SCHEME OF INSURANCE

Government Gives Notice of Intention to Provide Unemployment Protection

TO BE COMPULSORY AND CONTRIBUTORY

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP).—Unemployment insurance was slated as among the Government's legislation with tabling in the House of Commons today of notice of intention to introduce an unemployment insurance bill. Notice of the bill was given by Labor Minister Norman McLarty.

Following to some extent along the lines of the Employment and Social Insurance Act passed by the Government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett in 1935, the bill will call for raising of a fund by contributions from the Government and partly by levies on certain persons, presumably employers and employees.

NEW BILL MORE LIMITED

Like the 1935 act, the projected bill calls for administration by a commission, but unlike the Bennett legislation—which was held ultra vires by the Privy Council subsequently—it makes no provision for old age and sickness benefits.

The 1935 act carried authorization for the commission to study and work out a scheme extending its operations into those fields.

The constitutional difficulties which brought failure of the 1935 act were overcome recently by passage of an amendment to the British North America Act through the British Parliament.

TEXT OF RESOLUTION

The resolution preceding introduction of the bill said:

"It is expedient to introduce a bill to enact a scheme of national unem-

MANY FIGHTING MONTANA FIRES

Thousands Mobilized to Meet Menace of Hundreds Of Outbreaks

MISSOULA, Mont., July 13 (AP).—Thousands of men were mobilized hastily today to fight at least 400 fires started by a rainless electrical storm in Western Montana and Northern Idaho.

Regular forest service men who had been extinguishing lightning-started fires sometimes by using parachutes to descend from planes, were overwhelmed by the new outbreak. Thousands of citizens were enlisted to save the forests.

Thirty small fires were burning in Glacier National Park this afternoon. One, at the head of Bowman Lake, spread over about 100 acres. Park Superintendent D. S. Libbey said the lightning storm, during which no rain fell, accounted for the fires.

It was difficult to estimate the number of spot fires because of the changing situation.

There were at least 100 new fires in the Kootenay Forest of Northwestern Montana.

Use Insurance to Gain Information

BERNE, Switzerland, July 13 (AP).—International espionage has found a new way of getting information and the Swiss Government has had to issue a decree declaring it unlawful for the duration of the war to insure Swiss factories and properties abroad.

It seems that the prospective customers had to give so much detailed information about the size and location of their properties that this sort of "insurance" was no longer compatible with the interests of national defence.

BOY TAKES CHARGE

PORTALBAN, Switzerland, July 3 (AP).—The village of Portalban, in French Switzerland, lost every one of its village fathers on account of war. All the councillors have been mobilized. A local high school boy is handling the correspondence and "current affairs" during their absence.

Churchill to Be Heard at Noon Over Local Radio

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill will broadcast an address tomorrow night at 9 o'clock (noon P.S.T.). His speech will be broadcast to North America. It will last about fifteen minutes.

VANCOUVER, July 13 (CP).—Prime Minister Churchill's speech tomorrow at noon, P.S.T., will be carried by station CBR here, C.B.C. officials said today.

GATHER FOR CONVENTION

Democrats to Name Presidential Candidate—Roosevelt's Decision Unknown

CHICAGO, July 13 (AP).—Democrats determined to "draft Roosevelt," some happy and some unhappy about it, but nearly everyone convinced that he will accept the nomination, poured into this convention city today to join in a carnival prelude to next week's national convention.

Bushels of red and white and blue buttons bearing the motto "Just Roosevelt," and the silhouette of a rooster rampant adorned hundreds of lapels, proclaiming in advance the keynote of the big party gathering.

ONLY TWO KNOW DECISION

Whether the President would accept the nomination, two men knew, and they, secreted in the fastnesses of the huge Stevens Hotel, the convention headquarters, were in busy conference with their aides and casual callers. The two—Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee, who had been adverse to a third term for the President, and Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, the President's confidant and personal convention representative—went into conference with each other during the day.

Farley is a candidate, and one whose name is to go before the convention whether the President is presented or not. He has been planning to relinquish his post as national chairman. However, much pressure was being exerted upon him to continue for a time, as a gesture toward party harmony, and many considered it an open question whether the expert political technician, who directed the 1932 and 1936 Roosevelt campaigns, would also get the President's 1940 drive started, at least.

INDIAN IS KILLED IN THUNDERSTORM

Tree Crashing Across Buggy Breaks Man's Neck—Child Has Arm Broken

KAMLOOPS, July 13 (CP).—An Indian was killed and an Indian girl was injured during a heavy electrical storm which swept the Kamloops district last night.

Francis Danault, thirty-two, one of a party of Indians riding in a buggy between Vidette Mine and the reserve at Deadman's Creek, was killed when a tree crashed across the vehicle. A limb of the falling tree broke Danault's neck.

A bus skidded from the road between here and Vernon during the height of the storm, which was accompanied by heavy rain. One passenger suffered a minor head bump. The bus remained upright and passengers were transferred to another to reach Vernon an hour and a half late.

New Members of Canadian Cabinet

HON. ANGUS L. MACDONALD

HON. C. W. G. GIBSON

HON. WM. P. MULOCK

In a Cabinet shuffle last week, Prime Minister Mackenzie King shifted several portfolios, announced several new departments, and added three ministers to his Cabinet. The newest members are Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Premier of Nova Scotia, as Minister of Naval Defence; Col. C. W. G. Gibson, M.P. for Hamilton West, Minister of National Revenue, and Col. William P. Mulock, M.P. for York North, Postmaster-General.

Expects 100,000 To Pass Through Camps This Year

Unmarried Men Between 21 and 24 Likely to Be First Called for Compulsory Military Training In Canada—Ottawa Estimates Country Has 2,000,000 Men of Military Age

(Special to The Colonist)

OTTAWA, July 13.—High sources indicated today that virtually every unmarried man in Canada in the age group from twenty-one to twenty-four, who is able to march five miles, will be called up for training between now and next Spring.

An estimate shows that there are 240,000 physically fit men in categories "A" and "B" in the twenty-one to twenty-four class. The first 50,000, it is expected will be called to training either by September 15 or shortly after. The training period will be about six weeks.

Once started, the compulsory service home defence training centres will be operated continuously. It is planned that 100,000 men will complete training and that another 50,000 will be in the course of instruction by the end of the year. Once called up, every man will be posted to the militia reserve and will be on instant call either for duty in case of disorder or for military

MAKE ARRESTS BY THOUSANDS

French Realizing Their Betrayal as Petain Moves To Versailles

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—The Exchange Telegraph reported today it had learned reliably that 17,000 political arrests had been made in the Nazi-occupied sections of France.

"It now seems quite possible," the British news agency said, "that moving of the Petain Government to Paris will be followed by the Germans occupying the rest of France to restore order by methods of the machine gun."

REALIZE BETRAYAL

Stating there is a growing realization by the French people that they had been betrayed by the Bordeaux Government, the agency said the Petain-Laval decision to move from Vichy to the Chateau Versailles "where the Swastika still flies, and to Paris, shows they are aware of the growing storm."

The Exchange Telegraph dispatch, which did not disclose the source of its information, continued:

"The Germans are removing everything of value on which they can lay their hands. They are not content with looting banks and paying for the upkeep for their armies with worthless paper money. Livestock is either taken from France or killed for immediate consumption and in this way agriculture, the basis of French economic life, is being ruined. Next Winter will see famine in France, the like of which has not occurred since the sixteenth century."

PLANES DRIVEN OFF

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, July 13 (AP).—Coastal batteries and anti-aircraft guns drove Italian planes away from Alexandria today. The air raid alarm lasted only a few minutes.

GIVE DENIAL TO LYING CLAIMS

Air Ministry Draws Attention To German Manipulation of Figures

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—The Air Ministry announced tonight:

"An Air Ministry communique, issued on July 4, drew attention to the claim of the German High Command communiques that seventy-five British aircraft had been destroyed between June 23 and July 4.

"Actually a total of thirty of our aircraft were lost by enemy action during that period. The enemy only admitted the loss of twelve aircraft, whereas the Royal Air Force destroyed forty.

"From July 4 to July 12, a total of 175 British aircraft were destroyed, according to communique of the German High Command.

"Actually fifty-six of our aircraft have been lost by enemy action during this period. The enemy admits the loss of thirty-five aircraft, in fact destroyed seventy-nine.

"Thus from June 23 to July 12 inclusive, the enemy claims to have destroyed 250 of our aircraft while admitting the loss of less than fifty of his own.

"The interesting point about these figures is the artificial ratio in his favor of five to one or better which the enemy is seeking to establish.

"A careful study of German High Command communiques shows that figures are being constantly manipulated in order to obtain this purely imaginary result."

Island Youth Gives Life in Saving Other

ALERT BAY, July 13 (CP).—William Hunt, sixteen-year-old son of Vivien Hunt, lighthouse keeper at Scarlet Point, Balaclava Island, drowned in Hardy Bay yesterday after rescuing a small boy who had apparently fallen from a log into the water.

Young Hunt sank to the bottom after assisting the boy out of the water and did not revive although rescuers worked over him for three hours.

Funeral services will be held on Sunday.

TWO DIE IN PLANE CRASH

Instructor and Passenger Killed When Aircraft Falls In Field Near Brandon

BRANDON, July 13 (CP).—A member of the Canadian Active Service Force and an instructor at the Brandon Flying Club were killed instantly today when their two-seater Aeronca training plane hurtled nose-first into a ploughed field four miles west of Brandon.

Pte. F. J. Hunter, twenty-nine-year-old member of the R.C.O.C. unit in training at nearby camp Shilo, died in the crash with his instructor, Simon Rosenman, twenty-seven. Hunter held a private pilot's licence and was taking additional training in the hope of being transferred to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

NO EYE-WITNESSES

Ideal flying weather prevailed when the two took off from the flying club grounds this morning and no one saw the plane hit the earth. It was some time after Hunter and Rosenman took off that two young men found the twisted wreckage, partly buried in the furrowed fields of R. McPherson's farm.

Both men were dead, apparently killed instantly by the terrific impact which drove the plane's nose more than a foot into the ground. The instructor had been hurled out of the cockpit while the soldier remained pinned to his seat, lashed there by a leather safety belt.

INVESTIGATION OPENS

Royal Canadian Mounted Police officials were notified immediately of the crash and opened an investigation in co-operation with Inspector T. M. Shields of the Winnipeg Civil Aviation Branch, Department of Transport.

An experienced flyer, Rosenman was engaged as flying club instructor two years ago. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Rosenman of Brandon, and leaves a widow and a child.

Hunter joined the No. 10 detachment, R.C.O.C., last April and before going to Shilo Camp for Summer training had been stationed at Winnipeg, where his widow lives.

LEGLESS AIRMAN DOWNS DORNIER

Leader of Squadron of Canadian Pilots Wins Victory Over German Raider

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—The story of a legless pilot in the Royal Air Force fighter command who shot down a Dornier bomber, was told today in the Air Ministry's news service. The pilot himself is a Briton, but at present leads a squadron of Canadians.

Injured in a plane crash before the war that cost him both legs, this flyer "refused to die." After being fitted with artificial metal limbs he resumed sports like tennis and squash.

At the outbreak of the war he argued his way back into the Royal Air Force and passed his flying test.

In the course of a week-end raid he took up a Hurricane fighter and sent an invading Dornier crashing down into the sea.

Swiss Students Are Playing Host

All communications have been cut off and the students are stranded and penniless in Zurich.

Eighty Invading Planes and Probably Another Fifty Shot Down in Eight Days Over Great Britain, First Lord Declares

LONDON, July 13 (AP).—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, said in a broadcast to Canada and the United States tonight that the Royal Air Force has shot down at least eighty invading German planes, and probably fifty more, in the last eight days.

He added:

"To America, I say in the words of your Paul Jones: 'surrender? Why—we're only beginning to fight.'"

"I have only begun to fight!" was the historic message of John Paul Jones, when his squadron was overwhelmed by superior British sea power in August of 1780. It was his answer to a demand for surrender by the British man o' war Serapis, when Jones' ship, the Bon Homme Richard, was crippled by explosions of her own guns and sinking in battle.

Mr. Alexander declared that "preparation of defences on our beaches and elsewhere" has pro-

DOZEN NAZI PLANES SHOT DOWN; GERMAN NAVAL BASES DESTROYED

From Europe Day by Day—

THE TIMES, London

News and Comment on International Events selected from The Times daily and published in The Daily Colonist by special arrangement with The Vancouver Daily Province.

(Copyright, 1940, by Southam Co.)

LONDON, July 13 (By Cable).—While the German and Italian radio and press are still bawling threats against Britain, Hitler, for the moment, says The Times' diplomatic correspondent, appears to be busy working out plans for the domination of a continent freed from British influence.

Hungary's claims against Rumania for the return of Transylvanian territory apparently are to be satisfied at a future date.

Hitler is likely to do nothing to antagonize Russia at present any more than Stalin is likely to interfere in German plans for the domination of Central and Southeastern Europe.

The Soviets like the German advance just as little as the Germans like the Soviet advance into the Baltic republics, but both sides are avoiding quarrels. Hitler wishes to keep his hands free to deal with Britain.

Stalin is playing for time and rushing out defence posts.

* * *

Only for the fact that Britain is determined to fight on to the last for Europe's liberties Hitler could feel reasonably sure of having and keeping the continent helpless under him.

He sees Norway and Denmark stripped of livestock and foodstuffs and regards them only as springboards for attacking Britain by air and water.

As for France, after plundering all French stores and taking over armament factories, Hitler will make the country an agricultural appendage of Germany of little more importance than the Balkan states.

* * *

Hitler wants also an enlarged Hungary from which he can draw wheat supplies and a subservient Rumania from which he can obtain dwindling supplies of oil.

Turkey has made it clear that any threat to her independence will mean war. At the same time Turkey will try to keep good relations with all countries and avoid war if possible. German intrigues intended to embroil Turkey and the Soviet Union have caused much resentment in Ankara, especially as the German propaganda machine maintains a vituperative campaign against the Turkish foreign minister because he stands out against German attempts at domination of Turkey.

Enemy Raiders Meet With Little Success in Attacks On British Coast—At Least Eighty-Four Destroyed and Many More Crippled in Week of Heavy Fighting

Twenty Tons of Bombs Are Dropped on Works at Emden

LONDON, July 14 (AP).—Early this morning German bombing planes flew over Northeast England for the third successive night, but they dropped no bombs and were driven off by British fighter planes which yesterday had accounted for a total of twelve Nazi planes.

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Repeated Nazi air raids have failed to soften Britain for invasion and the hour-by-hour growth of British power to resist was obvious tonight as another week of ceaseless air war ended. At least twelve German raiders were shot down today in raids which have become part of the daily pattern along Britain's coast.

British fighter planes shot one bomber down into the English Channel early today. Another bomber and three fighters went the way of the first off the South Coast this evening as the Nazis tried another raid on the last and most powerful stronghold of freedom in Europe.

OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE

Tonight's Air Ministry communique said:

"Fighters of the R.A.F. engaged a number of enemy aircraft over the Straits of Dover this afternoon and shot down three bombers and three fighters.

"It can now be stated that one of our fighters engaged and shot down another enemy bomber this morning.

"These additions bring the total of enemy aircraft destroyed today to twelve (six bombers and six fighters). Only one of our aircraft has been lost during the day."

TOLL MOUNTS STEADILY

Several others appeared to have been damaged. The twelve definitely brought down brought to eighty-four the number of German planes accounted for by the Royal Air Force in the past week. In a broadcast to Canada and the United States, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, said that air force and ground defences in the last eight days had bagged eighty planes, and damaged fifty more.

NEW SPLIT IN BALKANS

Rumania Threatens to Sever Balkan Entente Ties With Turkey

BUCHAREST, July 13 (AP).—Rumania was reported authoritatively today to be ready to sever her Balkan Entente ties with Turkey unless officials responsible for Turkey's mutual assistance pact with Britain and France are replaced.

The German Legation here told King Carol's Government that the latest Berlin White Book "proves conclusively" that Turkey planned with the Allies for an attack on Rumania as well as Soviet oil fields.

The Government censor approved an editorial in Bucharest's German language newspaper Tageblatt charging Turkey with "treason" to the Balkan Entente, consisting of Turkey, Rumania, Greece and Yugoslavia, by "conspiring against the sovereignty and integrity" of Rumania.

LEADER STILL IN PRISON

King Carol's new totalitarian regime put into effect today anti-Semitic orders forcing Christian wives of Jews to give up Government jobs.

The Rumanian General Staff today ordered farm workers and industrial technical experts demobilized, beginning tomorrow. The number to be sent back to their civilian jobs was not given, but it included both officers and men.

CUBAN VOTERS GO TO POLLS TODAY

Election May Affect United States Plans for Defence of the Western Hemisphere

HAVANA, July 13 (AP).—Cuba will choose a president on Sunday in an election that may affect the hemisphere defence plans of the United States.

Chief candidates are Colonel Fulgencio Batista, the island's "strong man," and Dr. Ramón Grau San Martin, the man Batista once pushed in and out of the presidency.

Laredo Bru, a Batista man, is president now. He cannot succeed himself.

Enemy Flyers Are Captured By Villagers

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, July 13 (CP).—Two villagers, armed with a hayfork and toy pistol, were credited today with capturing the crew of a German bomber.

The village innkeeper and a house painter saw the bomber crash in a field last night near where they stood.

They found one of the crewmen dead and the other four injured. The innkeeper substituted one of the Germans' revolvers for the toy pistol he carried and led the injured men at gunpoint until a passing motorist obtained military assistance.

Eire Will Agree to British Troops' Aid In Meeting Invader

Will Dispense With Formality of Declaration of War in Event of Hostile Raid—Invasion Must Precede Troop Movement

DUBLIN, July 13 (AP).—An amicable arrangement between Britain and Eire, under which British troops will be given the right to cross Eire's frontiers in the event of a raid by a hostile power was reported today in quarters close to Premier de Valera's office.

In this event Eire will align herself with Britain without the formality of a declaration of war on the original invader, these sources reported.

But no British troops will move to Eire soil from Northern Ireland or from the shores of the Irish Sea until an invader has first violated that soil, the reported agreement stipulates.

If a hostile raid should throw Eire and Britain together in defence, Britain will have the use of important ports on Eire's West Coast, closer to America than her own, at which to receive munitions and sup-

FIRES STARTED BY LIGHTNING

Kootenay Forest Officials Find 130 Outbreaks After Electrical Storm

NELSON, B.C., July 13 (CP).—The lightning storm which passed over the Kootenay and boundary districts late Friday afternoon, started 130 fires in this district, check-ups by the forestry officials show. Of these most are burning, but some have been controlled.

One fire, started from another means than lightning, burned the mill and planer operated by Michael Dumont at Galloway. Some 200,000 feet of lumber and two freight cars also were burned. The remainder of the lumber in the yard and the creosoting plant were saved.

SETTLEMENT IN DANGER

The fire burning on Corn Creek above West Creston, swept six miles down the hill before strong winds and endangered the settlement. Seventy-five men are fighting it.

In all about 1,200 men are battling the flames in this area. Rain continues to hold off, and the weather remains hot and the forest are tinder dry.

The fires started by the lightning Friday are: Invermere, four; Fernie, six; Cranbrook, five; Creston, seven; Kaslo and Lardeau, twenty-seven; Nelson and Ymir, eight; New Denver, twelve; Nakusp and Arrowhead, forty-two; Rossland, four; Grand Forks and Boundary, seven. The fires at Rossland are out.

SWISS MUST USE TEA SUBSTITUTES

Leaves of Berry Plants, Mint and Lime Blossoms to Take Its Place

With overseas communications getting more difficult, it is not certain how long the Swiss will be able to get tea from Ceylon and China.

Consequently the Swiss office for war provisioning has appealed to all gardeners to gather the leaves of blackberries, strawberries, mint and lime-tree blossoms so they may be used as substitutes for tea.

BRITISH WOOLENS ARRIVE IN CITY

VISITING TOURISTS AND TEACHERS NOT TO BE DISAPPOINTED

LOCAL FIRM MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT

For many, many years, ladies visiting Victoria from all over the Continent, and indeed from all parts of the Orient also, have looked forward to selecting the Coats of British Woolens for which the old-established firm of Scurrah's has become quite noted. Many of these visitors had fears that conditions this year might interfere with the arrival of these fabrics, and we at Scurrah's were not at all sure that we would be able to make our usual display. But our fears were groundless, and we are happy to say that our display of imported Fabric Coats this season is as large and varied as ever. Among the lovely models on display are Tweeds, including the famous Harris Tweed and other outstanding weaves. Llama Wools, bearing the well-known Printzess label, Camel's Hair Coats, all of British make. We have been most fortunate in deliveries so far, but of course no one can predict anything about the future, so that while visitors must buy now if at all, it is very obviously good advice to Victoria ladies also to make a selection now—when our stock is larger than it can possibly be again this year. The prices on these wonderful Coats are little, if any higher than in former years, and we need hardly remind our American friends the exchange situation makes a purchase now a bargain they will remember all their lives. Among them are plain colors, all shades of blue, checks, stripes, herringbone, broken stripes and mixtures, and practically all are beautifully satin lined. Prices range from $29.75 to $45.00, and even at the lower prices we have a splendid selection. Ever hear of a Camel's Hair, made by A. Goyarts Zoon. Well, that's one of the coats that is not of British fabric. This Camel's Hair is Holland Dutch make, and the experts say that it is the very finest that is made anywhere at any price. And yet we have priced this aristocrat of coats at only $45.00. And, oh yes, just a reminder that most of our new Fur Coats also have arrived, and every one is a beauty. And every woman in Victoria knows that you can buy your Fur Coat at Scurrah's with complete assurance and safety. The well-known Scurrah Store is at 720 Yates Street, near the corner of Yates and Douglas, the corner with the three bank buildings.

AILMENTS FIT IN BUSINESS CHART

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13 (AP).—Dr. M. Felix Cunha, San Francisco gastro-intestinal specialist, in a report to The American Journal of Surgery, said "it is possible to chart the incidence of certain stomach ailments against the Dow Jones averages or other business indices."

Although the pains constituted a very real illness, the chances are the disorders were due to prolonged mental or nervous torture over bad business conditions rather than to the presence of some actual disease agent in the digestive system, Dr Cunha added.

When the patient learns there is nothing pathologically wrong with him, he usually recovers nicely. Another business slump comes along and a new crop of ailing brokers, speculators and business executives shows up at the doctors' offices. Once in a while this new group contains a few previous "graduates," Dr. Cunha said.

When business booms, an upward curve would represent the business indices and the downward curve the decreasing number of persons with these ailments.

Several international or political crises and even difficulties concerning love or marriage can cause these disorders, Dr. Cunha reported, but in the United States they are mainly due to money or business worries and they affect particularly the broker, the speculator and the big business man.

BRITISH YOUTH ON HONOR ROLL

Wins Fame for Gallant Act Of Saving One Thousand Troops

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., July 13 (CP).—Harold Porter, eighteen-year-old hero, considered he had been a failure at school because ill-health prevented him winning a prize in the classroom or on the sports field, but he told his father "One day my name will be written on the roll of honor there."

Malvern College will honor his memory because, with three other men he gave his life so that 1,000 men of the British Expeditionary Force evacuated from Belgium could live. The youth had been in the Merchant Navy only three months when the epic evacuation took place.

"Your son lost his life helping to evacuate troops from the coast of Belgium," the ship's captain wrote Porter's parents. "He was serving with three local fishermen who had volunteered a few days before to help in their fishing boats. They had saved 1,000 lives and were being towed by another boat when they struck a mine and were blown up. Your boy had always done well and he died doing his duty and he truly laid down his life for his fellows."

DENTISTS NEED MONEY TO PAY OWN BILLS

BERNE, Switzerland, July 13 (AP).—The association of Swiss dentists just appealed to the public to pay dentists' bills in cash because dentists have to pay their bills, too.

A REAL SHEPHERD

RAGAZ, Switzerland, July 13 (AP).—The minister of the Protestant Church of Tagaz has proved himself a real shepherd. When he heard that one of the farm houses of his community was abandoned, its occupants all mobilized, he took time off to tend the sheep and milk the cows. He kept at it for over two months.

Militiamen to Have Artillery Training In New Coast Unit

Lieut.-Colonel J. Chester Harris Will Command 5th (B.C.) Coast Brigade N.P.A.M. Unit—Motorcycle Regiment on the Mainland

PART-TIME army training under the Defence Department's N.P.A.M. plan is not to be limited to infantry instruction. Two artillery militia units, one in Victoria and the other in Vancouver, are to be mobilized immediately, Brigadier C. V. Stockwell, D.S.O., district officer commanding M.D. No. 11, announced yesterday. They will receive their training on coast defences.

Lieutenant - Colonel J. Chester Harris, V.D., former commanding officer of the 5th (B.C.) Coast Brigade, R.C.A., has been appointed to command a militia unit of that brigade, to be formed immediately, and Lieutenant-Colonel Cyril Beeston will command a similar unit to be recruited in Vancouver for the 15th (B.C.) Coast Brigade.

Both new artillery units will be recruited on the same basis as the 3rd Battalion, the Canadian Scottish Regiment, and other units forming the militia training scheme. They will begin recruiting in the very near future. Colonel Harris will open a recruiting depot in the Bay Street Armoury. He announced yesterday the appointment of Major P. T. Stern as his adjutant, but the full slate of officers is not completed.

MOTORCYCLE UNIT

Early mobilization of a British Columbia motorcycle regiment of the Canadian Active Service Force, offering a field of service that is expected to attract large numbers of young men, also was announced at headquarters here yesterday.

To be known as the 5th Canadian Motorcycle Regiment, it will be commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel G. C. Oswell, O.C. the British Columbia Dragoons, with headquarters in Vancouver. He will launch an immediate campaign to recruit 450 other ranks, all of whom must be category "A" men and able to ride motorcycles.

Tomorrow, Major A. E. Parlow will begin recruiting here for the 6th Forestry Company, C.F.C., at the Armoury, and will continue his campaign to find 187 men skilled in logging, lumbering and allied trades on the Mainland later in the week.

Lieutenant - Colonel F. Brooke Stephenson, O.C. the new 3rd Battalion, the Canadian Scottish Regiment, also will begin recruiting here this week.

In Vancouver where mobilization of the new N.P.A.M. units started last week, training is expected to begin tomorrow.

ARTILLERY OFFICERS

Lieutenant - Colonel Harris, to command the new Coast Brigade unit here, is an officer of wide and distinguished artillery service. Before the last war he served in the ranks of the brigade, then the 5th Regiment, Canadian Garrison Artillery, under Colonel John A. Hall, and later under Sir Arthur Currie, then as lieutenant-colonel in command of the regiment. He went overseas in 1915 from New Westminster with the 47th Battalion, and served for the duration of the war and during demobilization.

After the war he rejoined the 5th Regiment, reorganized as the 5th Coast Brigade under Colonel F. A. Robertson, and took command of the brigade in 1926, continuing in command until 1931, when he was posted to the reserve brigade. Batteries under Colonel Harris' command carried off the Governor-General's prize for general efficiency in five consecutive years.

His adjutant in the N.P.A.M. unit, Major Stern, has seen considerable service with the Imperial and Canadian forces, and has held many staff appointments. His war service includes the South African War, Zululand, 1906, and Great War. Major Stern was adjutant of the 5th Regiment, Canadian Garrison Artillery, under Colonel Currie from 1910 to 1912, and held the same appointment under Colonel Harris from 1926 to 1930.

Major Stern commanded the first troops to leave Victoria for the Great War in August, 1914, a detachment of the 5th Regiment. At present he is commandant of the Officers' Voluntary Training Association, with which he has been associated since its inception in January last.

THREATENED BY ANGRY CROWDS

Adherents of Jehovah's Witnesses in Two Towns Refuse to Salute Flag

MOORESVILLE, Ind., July 13 (AP).—State police today escorted forty-seven adherents of Jehovah's Witnesses from the second-floor Odd Fellows' Hall here where they had spent the night and morning refusing steadfastly to salute a United States flag.

A group of men identifying themselves as war veterans set up a flag at the exit last night and demanded that those meeting inside pay allegiance to it before they left. A member of the sect who complied said many of its disciples believed the Bible taught them not to revere "any man-made thing."

No violence occurred as the congregation walked through a big crowd. Officers took the men, who numbered twelve, to Martinsville, Morgan County seat, for safe keeping. Thirty-five women and children went home.

Earlier an eight-year-old girl was cut by glass when a window of the hall was broken by an egg and lemon bombardment from outside. Night Marshall John Swintz arrested two boys for throwing things and took two members of the sect into custody for questioning.

DETAINED SIX HOURS

FREMONT, Ohio, July 13 (AP).—Held in their meeting hall at nearby Gibsonburg for six hours by a crowd of townspeople, sixteen members of Jehovah's Witnesses, religious sect, returned to their homes at 3 a.m. today after sheriff's deputies escorted them to their automobiles.

The sect members, including men, women and children, were leaving their hall after a weekly service last night as the crowd of 400 persons confronted them, Sheriff H. L. Myers said. At the head of the crowd war veterans carried a large United States flag and demanded the sect members salute it.

The group returned to its hall upon the advice of Mayor John W. Henline. Authorities reported no violence.

Anxious to Keep Out of Any Fight

CHICAGO, July 13 (AP).—A platform promise to "keep America out of war" was demanded of the Democratic party today by a parade of witnesses come to tell the resolutions committee what they want.

Like the Republican convention, one of the developing rows promises to circle about foreign policy.

Joseph Cadden, secretary of the American Youth Congress urged that the committee adopt a programme which would keep America out of the war and away from intervention in South America.

DOMINION HAS FINE HOSPITAL

Canadian Red Cross Institution in England Nearly Ready for Service

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—The finest military hospital in Britain shortly will be ready to receive members of Canada's fighting forces wounded in war.

Officers of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps are convinced that the Canadian Red Cross Hospital, nearing completion in the quiet of the countryside, surpasses anything else of its kind here.

Built and fully equipped by the Canadian Red Cross Society, it will shortly be turned over to the R.C.A.M.C., which will staff it. The property, situated on a private estate, has been leased for a nominal rental of one shilling yearly.

Costing approximately $1,000,000, it has accommodation under normal conditions for sixty officers and 480 men. If necessary it can take as many as 750 men.

Canadian newspapermen on a visit to the hospital found it occupied by an army of workmen. Construction began last January but frost delayed the foundation work for a month after that. Packages of equipment were being unloaded by men of the R.C.A.M.C.

PRAISE FOR UNIT

Officers paid tribute to the work of the men of the unit—No. 5 General Hospital, R.C.A.M.C.—in helping convey tons of freight from a nearby railway station. Captain Alec O'Hara, from Kenora, Ont., quartermaster of the unit, pointed to the big comfortable beds and described how they had been shifted from trains onto trucks, then onto trolleys, then taken on handcarts into the wards. All the packing cases were being salvaged, he said, and were fetching more money for the Canadian Red Cross than they originally cost in Canada.

The array of equipment includes tables and chairs from Stratford, Ont., and mattresses from Montreal; wheel stretchers from Woodstock, Ont., and an operating table from Toronto. Sterilizing equipment was brought from Madison, Wis., because none was available in Canada.

Especially impressive was the up-to-date kitchen. Its modern fittings were pointed out with pride by Captain O'Hara. They include a battery of coke-burning ovens, giant steam kettles in which anything can be cooked, electric hot plates, and a cold room with capacity for a fortnight's supply of food. Heating, ventilation and humidity are controlled by special apparatus fixed to the ceiling.

In the kitchen, ready to go into action when the hospital opens, was a veteran soldier and chef, Corporal John W. Sharley, who used to live in Winnipeg. Corporal Sharley was a chef of the Royal Fusiliers in the first Great War and has resumed his old job for the R.C.A.M.C.

"I'm as ready as the kitchen is," he said.

EQUIPMENT WORK

Colonel George Nasmith, of Toronto, deputy commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society in London, mentioned the complexity of the task of obtaining equipment and supplies for a hospital of this kind. He paid tribute to the way in which this had been accomplished. This purchasing job has been in the hands of Major C. A. Scott, of Toronto, well-known civil engineer who served in the last war with the Canadian Engineers.

Colonel C. L. T. Arthur, well-known Winnipeg doctor who served with the Canadian forces in the first Great War, will staff the hospital.

GENERAL DESIGN

The imposing white-pillared entrance to the administration block is surmounted with the Canadian coat-of-arms. A long, enclosed corridor connects it with various departments. These include a special laboratory for Sir Frederick Banting, which will be completed to his own requirements, X-ray department, dispensary, operating unit, dining-room and kitchen and officers' wards. There will be three operating theatres.

Back of the administration block is an enclosed courtyard and back of it again a corridor 865 feet long—the full length of the hospital. It connects all the fifteen wards for men.

Officers of the R.C.A.M.C. are confident of one thing in addition to having the country's best designed and equipped military hospital. They're going to have the best baseball team in the Canadian Active Service Force.

Defence Minister Visits Valcartier

VALCARTIER CAMP, Que., July 13 (CP).—Defence Minister Ralston paid an unexpected, informal visit—his first since assuming his new post—to the military training camp here today and made a hurried automobile tour of the grounds.

Accompanied by camp commandant Brigadier P. E. Leclerc and Brigadier-General T. L. Tremblay, inspector-general of military units in Canada, the Defence Minister rode through the camp, dotted with countless canvas tents, eagerly asking questions about the various buildings and units.

Young Pilot and Companion Flyer Perish in Plane

LODI, Calif., July 13 (AP).—Howard White, twenty-seven, Stockton student pilot, and Mrs. Meta West Daniels, twenty-four, perished in flaming wreckage when White's plane crashed as he sought to land it at Lind Airport.

White had only a student's licence and sheriff's deputy Andy Hasten said he apparently got into difficulty as he sought to land with the wind, instead of into it.

LEARN OF GREAT WAR'S ARMISTICE

White Colony in Peru Jungle Hear Events of Last Twenty-Five Years

PUERTO MALDONADO, Peru, July 13 (CP).—A white colony found after more than a quarter century in the jungle fastness of Peru wants to stay there, but would like to keep in touch with the rest of the world now with that "new-fangled thing" called radio.

Two Peruvian army flyers, accompanying a Swedish-American expedition exploring to Colorado River, found the group. The flyers said the settlement, made up entirely of Peruvians, is at the mouth of the Pinquen River, a tributary of the Colorado.

The inhabitants, offspring of families of rubber collectors who remained on the Pinquen after the crash of the rubber industry, welcomed the flyers jubilantly. They plied the two pilots with an endless stream of questions concerning events during the last twenty-five years. The first Great War peace and the new war were news to them.

Germans Try Tricks To Lure Britons to Listen to "Haw-Haw"

Nazis Endeavored to Revive Waning Interest in Broadcasts of Inserting Names of British War Prisoners Held in Germany

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—German propagandists formulated a new plan to "compel" Britons to listen to Nazi "news" broadcasts. It was to intersperse propaganda with names of British prisoners of war and thus "force" the folks at home to listen nightly to Lord Haw Haw, the mysterious German voice believed to come from at least four different announcers.

For months all Britain had heard with amusement the radio voice of Lord Haw Haw who used to prove "so entertaining" with his subtle tit-bits of news which always contained suggestions that Germany knew exactly what was transpiring in Britain at all times.

Each night the repeated plaintive bars of Haw Haw's "signature" advised British listeners that he was about to start unpacking his "bag of lies." Still, prior to and even in the earlier days of the war his nightly broadcast proved entertaining. "Of course we know," people would say, "it's a pack of lies, but he is funny. And sometimes there may be something in what he says."

That belief was just what Haw Haw has been endeavoring to establish. It began to appear that listeners were not laughing as much at Haw Haw's jokes. In fact his jokes were weakening if not disappearing. Strict propaganda was fast becoming his theme. And that is what started to turn people against him. Today, Haw Haw's audience is reduced to those curious enough to hear "what lies they have on hand tonight."

CAMPAIGN SPREAD

Newspapers began to admonish the public to ignore Haw Haw. Under the sponsorship of The London Daily Mirror, anti-Haw Haw groups were formed. In many parts of England the campaign spread with rapidity. All kinds of dodges were suggested to avoid Haw Haw. In Cardiff, Wales, a girl walked the streets days on end, carrying a sign-board, "Don't listen to Lord Haw Haw. Give him the air. He's full of wind anyway."

In other parts of the United Kingdom, school children went from door to door, getting neighbors to sign pledges that they would ignore the broadcast. Many other means were formulated to make the German "news" broadcast unpopular. Haw Haw was losing ground rapidly.

But the German propaganda officials quickly thought up other plans to demand attention. The German radio began broadcasting names of prisoners of war. In each nightly "news" broadcast they would announce a few names of British prisoners.

British propaganda authorities became aware of the fact that people were spreading the word that names of their relatives might be heard if one listened nightly to the German broadcast.

So inquiries were made and the British propaganda bureau discovered that instruction had been given German radio announcers to "compel" listeners abroad to tune in, in the hope of hearing prisoners' names and learning the fate of their relatives.

HELD UP LETTERS

To make sure people did listen German authorities ordered that letters written by prisoners were not to be posted until after the writer's name had been announced on the radio; that foreign correspondents must not be allowed to interview prisoners until the radio had announced the names and that prisoners' names were not to be forwarded to the Red Cross until the radio had fulfilled its work.

But to counter this stroke, the British advised listeners the propaganda department would have "official" listeners to copy down the names of all announced prisoners and then would notify the next-of-kin.

CITY TO FACE COURT ACTION

Gainsboro Apartments, Ltd., Seeks Permit to Remodel Single Family Home

Action of Gainsboro Apartments, Ltd., vs. the city of Victoria will commence in Supreme Court at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning. Gordon A. Cameron will appear for the company, which seeks a permit to convert a dwelling at 906 St. Charles Street into an apartment building.

Notice of application for an order by way of mandamus directed to the building inspector and city to deliver a permit was received at the City Hall yesterday.

At 3 o'clock Monday afternoon the City Council will meet to pass an amendment to the zoning by-law requiring the consent of 65 per cent of the property owners in select single-family districts before a permit may be granted to convert a house into a duplex or apartment building.

RESIDENTS OBJECT

Last week the council instructed the building inspector not to issue a permit to Gainsboro Apartments, Ltd., for a period of fifteen days. Plans and specifications were recently conditionally approved by the zoning board of appeal. Residents of St. Charles Street, represented by Herbert W. Davey, have appealed to the council not to allow conversion of the house in question.

The council is also scheduled to pass a zoning by-law amendment to alter the classification of a lot on the northwest corner of Cook Street and Fairfield Road from apartment to commercial to allow erection of a grocery store.

R. B. BENNETT HELPS AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP).—Former Prime Minister R. B. Bennett has assumed a full-time post in the British Ministry of Aircraft Production, it was learned today.

Mr. Bennett went to England in February, 1939, and while over there has been active on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross Society. It is not known just what position he is filling in the Aircraft Production Ministry, headed by Lord Beaverbrook.

Offers to Supply Crew Without Pay For 'Mercy Ship'

NEW YORK, July 13 (CP).—The National Maritime Union, a Congress of Industrial Organizations' affiliate, offered to furnish a crew without pay to man a "mercy ship" to evacuate children from Europe.

In a telegram to Marshall Field, chairman of the United States committee for the care of European children, Joseph Curran, president of the union, made the offer on condition that there be "no discrimination" between children of wealthy and poor families and that a steamship company provide the children with free passage.

RAIN LESSENS FOREST HAZARD

Brief Showers in Island Areas Bring Four-Day Lull For Fire Crews

Vancouver Island's three-hour rain came at the right time last week, according to Provincial foresters. The showers passed over the Island from South to North, wetting down the forest cover and insuring a four-day lull in the fire hazard when it was most needed. The rain was reported fairly general on the Coast section of the Vancouver Forest District.

The log closure was continued yesterday in the Fraser Valley area, but logging and milling was about to be resumed in other areas after the recent shutdown caused by the Provincial order under the Forest Act. Expecting a longer closure, some of the camps let their crews go on a vacation.

While present hot weather lasts, foresters said, conditions in the bush will be reviewed from day to day. Existing fires were reported well under control at all points.

PLANE BEING BROKEN UP

LONDON, July 13.—In Britain's drive for aluminum, the famous British air liner Hercules, which has flown more than 1,500,000 miles and carried more than 100,000 passengers in her nine years' service, has been broken up. The aluminum parts are to be turned over to the Minister for Aircraft Production.

PANIC TALK HURTS CAUSE

Mounted Police Journal Calls Attention to Dangers of Untrue Reports

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP).—All Canadians have a duty to be on the alert against subversive elements and to report reasonably suspicious incidents, says, an article in the current issue of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Quarterly, "but everyone is urged to refrain from conjuring up bogeymen out of wild rumors and untrue reports."

The article, entitled "Panic Talk," recalls a recent warning of Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, against the folly of yielding to fifth column hysteria.

SCARE STORIES

"Malicious falsehoods are often started by Nazi hirelings in order to engender an atmosphere of tension, distrust and fear, to distract official attention from essentials and weaken national morale," the article says. "Thoughtful citizens would do well to confirm scare stories and note their origin before giving them credence."

"Patriotic but often misinformed persons and organizations sometimes make a nuisance by allowing imagination to override common sense," the article continues. "They envisage a spy lurking behind every lamp post, fancy villainous and hidden motives behind the innocent acts of every foreign-looking stranger.

SHUN ALARMISTS

". . . Recollections of normally harmless events, second-hand gossip, a German or Italian sounding name—almost anything now assumes a sinister aspect to these alarmists who imperiously demand immediate and drastic action by the authorities.

"Every reasonable precaution is being taken to cope with the situation," the article continues, but, "by loose and irresponsible talk, rumormongers retard the work of the police and advance the odious aims of enemy propagandists."

Loyal citizens can do much to remedy the situation, the article says, "by ignoring street-corner babble and discouraging the circulation of falsehoods by others."

The article urges persons having complaints to put them in writing and not use telephones so that information may be more easily transmitted and police offices will not be hampered with calls.

Given Medal for Discovering Comet

EDMONTON, July 13 (CP).—Lewis V. Smith, of Sedgewick, has been awarded the Comet Medal of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific for the discovery of a new comet now known as Comet 1939D last April 15, Dr. J. W. Campbell, professor of mathematics at the University of Alberta, announced today.

Smith recorded its path with nine other astronomers in various parts of the world. He is listed third in reporting the discovery.

POSTPONING CONSCRIPTION

One aspect of how the crisis confronting the British Empire is viewed at Ottawa is illustrated by the fact that the first summons to man power under the mollilization authority granted to the Government is not to be made until September 15. The summons then will be to single men between the ages of 21 and 24, and it is expected to be answered by some 60,000. In the meantime, in calling men to the colors, Great Britain has reached the age class of 32 yeears, and new classes are now being summoned up weekly because of the strain imposed by the capitulation of France. In view of this, the procrastination at Ottawa is not understandable, except as a pursuance of the policy of but moderate participation in the War.

Speaking in Parliament, Mr. D. K. Hazen (St. John-Albert) said: "No Government in our history has had to shoulder such heavy responsibilities, and the people of the Dominion look to it, not without some feelings of uneasiness, for greater effort and more action." Senator Arthur Meighen has, and with every justification, made caustic comment on the delays so dangerous in War. He asks what the Government is doing to get through with "co-ordination" and get down to fighting? In referring to national registration, he says that "we are going to see developments that will shape the destiny of mankind before we're through with this registration," and he accuses the Government of a "systematic" and "tenacious" effort to see that the public do not get the facts. The slackness and the complacency of the Government are positively pitiful, even tragic, in the face of the great emergency that exists. The Prime Minister urged that the powers of mobilization of men and material resources should be granted to the Government with the utmost speed because of the crisis. They were, some weeks ago, and under them a beginning of the mustering of man power is not to be made until mid-September. There could be no more patent arraignment of the Government's persistent procrastination and of its failure to realize the gravity of the present crisis.

After over ten months of War, the Government, in its military preparations, has hardly touched the fringe of assembling and training motorized columns, motor cycle corps, tank corps, anti-tank corps, and, as to the dive-bombers that are now a recognized part of modern warfare, they are wholly absent in this country. The troops being assembled are ill-equipped, or not equipped at all, with anti-aircraft guns, just as many of the forts established for coastal defence are similarly lacking. The mechanism of up-to-date training for latter-day warfare is conspicuous by its absence in the country, and the Government continues to emit propaganda of what may yet be but which is not yet. Evidently, too, it thinks that conscription can wait, and that when it comes it is only to provide half-fledged Militia spasmodically trained in drill halls and camps.

It is hard to determine if the influences behind the Government's half-hearted efforts in the War are political or economic, or both. Certain it is that all the dire events in Europe of the past few months have only served in a minor degree to awaken the Administration from its lethargy. If Parliament adjourns, the likelihood is that Mr. Mackenzie King and his Ministers, who regard themselves as a law unto themselves, will revert to the state of complacency which has marked their conception of Canada's part in the War up to date. That is why Parliament should remain in session, but there is little hope of this. The Government, under mobilization legislation, as well as because of the War Measures Act, has now autocratic powers, which, as all indications illustrate, it is wielding for party political effect. It has refused to agree to Canada's war effort being a national effort decreed by a National Government. The result is that a qualified participation in the War will continue. That is indicated by the wholly inadequate measures contemplated in the matter of conscription, and the lengthy postponement of putting even these into effect.

THE SHIELD OF FAITH

The War is looked upon by Dr. Winnington Ingram as "a great crusade for the Spirit of Christ against the spirit of antichrist." That is why those combatting a tyranny worse than death have great need of a vitalizing faith that will teach them to persevere, to endure and to attain; that will steel their wills and keep the fire of spiritual endeavor alive in their hearts. Spiritual faith, says The Herald, Glasgow, "tells us that, however immense the sum of suffering in the world may be, there is a residuum of goodness that makes it worth while to live . . . Dark days are to be faced in the belief that the assault upon the finer feelings, aspirations and achievements of human civilization launched by the Nazi reaction will not escape its own Nemesis."

It is not to be wondered at that the issue of this War should be the theme of so many spiritual discourses. It has come to be recognized as a challenge to the vision of life's true values and possibilities; because of this there is, even if unknowing of the reason, the determination among British peoples to reinforce themselves with the spiritual armor of the cause for which they fight, however grievous the burdens that must be borne; to take upon them the mantle of faith that will stretch out as a sheltering wing over their own home front and over the field of battle, wherever it is. Deep in their consciousness, however they may refrain from expressing it, there is the knowledge that all the best that is treasured in civilization has been built up, perhaps not strictly on Christianity, as Bishop Barnes expresses it, "but on belief in God as Christ revealed Him." That revelation has as one of its tenets the value of human personality, which implies faith in individual redemption. This is what is denied by Totalitarian conceptions. That denial is the blight and the disease being combatted in the effort to keep intact the mainspring of that civilization which has been nourished and developed with the ever-recurring message and the eternal hope of friendliness, joy and peace.

There are those who may ask what are spiritual powers in such a crisis as that now confronting humanity when evil, in all its panoply of strength, is bent upon the destruction of what is valued most in so many hearts. The answer is that those powers are inherent, but the need is to exercise them. It is undoubted that men vary in their responsiveness to spiritual impressions. There are diversified physical conditions, antagonistic environments, changing circumstances and exposure to deteriorating moral influences. No matter what the conditions may be, favorable or unfavorable, there is need always for discipline and cultivation of spiritual powers. If these factors are not brought to bear there is the danger of decay into a state that is without religious experience, and therefore a denial of what has made for all the best there is in civilization. Since, however, the great majority of men have spiritual gifts, it only remains for them to exercise them in response to the supernatural, and, by self-discipline and training, plumb their capacities of spiritual apprehension.

St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Ephesians, pointed the moral of recurring crises through the centuries, and his words have a resounding significance today: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take upon you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, and having done this, to stand . . . Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God." That is the way to exercise spiritual powers—to put on the whole armor of God. Having done this, the Christian can never desert his own place in the battle-line. With this invincible armor he knows that, no matter how terrible the power of sin and misery may appear, these forces are only transient. He is persuaded that the fruits of Christian character will be renewed perpetually, that the leaves of the tree of life are for the healing of the nations, as well as of individuals, and that there is the certainty of God's ultimate triumph, however inexplicable may seem the woes that man inflicts on man.

The cardinal message of Christianity is that evil is temporal, and good eternal; that there is a Day of Redemption where sorrow and suffering cannot come, where all tears are wiped away, where greed of gain, where lust and pride are relegated to the limbo of forgotten things. It is the open vision of God and of the impregnability of His armor that those standing in the path of aggression need today. They can have all this if they will but exercise their spiritual powers. With those powers as their fortress, they can bring all their physical strength to bear on the struggle. In no way may the challenge of ferocious nationalism be met in better fettle than by hearts reinforced by religious enthusiasm, hearts determined that "greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends," if the cause in which he believes is to have a triumphant issue.

Putting on the shield of faith, in times like these, calls for unremitting sacrifice, both of body and of soul; it calls for the exercise of all spiritual faculties and their perpetual observance. No one may doubt then, thrqugh the experience of the ages and the promise of that Eternal Life which is the lodestar summoning men to a higher plane of living, that God's angel, in the words of De Quincey, will follow them "through storms, through desert seas, through the darkness of quicksands, through dreams, and the dreadful revelations that are in dreams—only that at the last, with one sling of his victorious arm, He might snatch thec back from ruin, and might emblazon in thy delivcrance the endless resurrections of His love."

"IT'S WELL TO REMEMBER"

"However important mechanism may be it is the quality of the human element that will tell in the long run. It is well to remember this when we are worried by events that for the moment look so grave."

Note and Comment

By SANDHAM GRAVES

—R.F.C.

How splendid they are, these new Knights of the Air! Lads of twenty and twenty-one playing the war game within the rules, flying above the oxygen limit of man, on patrol for hours at a stretch, flying across half the span of Europe by night and by day, taking all of the enemy's fire, holding their gun buttons open regardless of the odds, and dismissing it all with a wave of the hand as routine. The wings of the Lion were never brighter than they are today.

• • •

The motto of the old Royal Flying Corps was well chosen. It was retained and perpetuated, after union with the Royal Naval Air Service, in the Royal Air Force. It is by effort that achievement comes. It is through travail that man himself may reach the heights. The odds were never counted by the R.F.C. or the R.N.A.S. They mean even less to the R.A.F. Dunkerque proved that, if it had required any proof. In the air, the Lion attacks on sight.

• • •

The air is a score of oceans. There is a battle level in every 1,000 feet of it, from the ground clear up to 25,000 feet and more. Clouds sift across that battleground like pieces of a moving jig-saw puzzle. Action comes from the sun, with split-seconds of a warning. This is war at 300 miles an hour, and over. It requires co-ordination, teamwork, vigilance, initiative in degrees not often called for from mankind. Pilot, navigator, gunner, each must do his part. Gloriously, they are doing it; trained to the minute.

• • •

There are no prouder people in the Empire today than the flying alumni of 1914-18. They had a tradition to hand on. They have seen it preserved, added to, exceeded in every and in all directions. The youngest arm of the service has earned its wings, many times over. It wears them modestly, but they are none the less bright for that. Nor is it alone those who fly. It takes several hundred men to put one squadron in the air. Each one has an indispensible part. Brilliantly these parts are being played.

• • •

Warfare is sweeping on into the days of air battles, and air battle fleets. Ninety-mile-an-hour flight has little relation with flight at 350 miles or 400 miles an hour. Modern air armadas have their scouts, their destroyers, their light cruisers, their battle cruisers and their battleships even as have the surface fleets of the sea. Every thousand feet of altitude is a new surface, a new ocean. Action is instantaneous, and three-dimensional. But the men have not changed, unless it is that they have improved. There is evidence as to that.

• • •

It is the men this column wishes to talk about. They are putting up such a magnificent showing. They are coming from behind in the air armament race, as was the case in 1916 and 1917, but with a vastly more difficult and complicated task. And they are going to win. Man for man and machine for machine, they have outmatched the enemy. They have brought into 300-mile-an-hour battle both the direct tradition of 1914-1918, and the older, undimmed and undying tradition of the Lion at bay.

• • •

Yesterday they were lads at school. Today they are carrying the honor of the British Commonwealth; carrying it higher than it has ever been carried before. They are playing the war game within its rules, flying above the oxygen limits of man, on patrol for hours at a stretch, off again as soon as their machines can be refuelled, watching by day and by night, and never refusing battle. They are doing in the air what British arms has ever done doggedly on land, and magnificently at sea. And they are making a splendid job of it. The motto at the top of this column belongs to men who hit and who never run. That is truer of today than it ever has been. The alumni of 1914-1918 will tell you that.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

(From The Daily Colonist of July 15, 1890)

The New Cathedral—The new Roman Catholic Cathedral will be roofed over about November if the terms of the contract are adhered to, and then the interior will be proceeded with as speedily as possible so as to have the entire structure ready for divine worship by next June. It is not the intention to use it at all until finished in every detail. After it is taken possession of, the present church will be utilized as a lecture hall, Sunday school and for church entertainments.

Improvements—Considerable and much-needed repairs are now being carried out on Douglas and Discovery Streets, the piles of broken stones on the latter evidencing that the work is to be well done.

New Westminster Fire—A fire broke out in West Prevost Street, New Westminster, early this morning, and before it could be checked Sully & Bryson's large carriage warehouse, Manson's dwelling house and twelve Indian shanties were totally destroyed. Sully & Bryson's loss is about $5,000, nearly covered by insurance. Other individual losses were small, but will total $1,500. The origin of the fire is unknown.

RENTAL INCREASES

Sir,—The report of the committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to investigate "rental increases," as reported in your columns, certainly demands an answer.

Mr. Luney's statements that the Trades and Labor Council had no grounds for the charges and that the sole idea behind them was to endeavor to raise wages is positively false. The council acted in the matter after the information had been given by a private member, and as it was not strictly a labor matter, it was thought advisable to refer the matter to the Chamber of Commerce and the Real Estate Board for action.

The charges did not state that the practice of "rent profiteering" was widespread, but rather that it did exist. Since our first small list was brought to notice, the council has been in receipt of commendatory letters from the general public and a further considerable list of alleged raises have been forwarded to the council by private citizens and women's organizations and have been placed on file.

The council acted in the matter in genuine good faith and as a service to the public at a time when the eye of suspicion must be cast upon any attempt at profiteering as being absolutely unpatriotic, the more so at such a time when there are so many calls on the public purse, for Red Cross activities, War Savings and for refugees.

The council will welcome any further information on the subject, which practice is especially vicious when the rental demands are made on the lower paid workers as is the case in the major portion of our list.

To condemn the actions of the council and brand them as "a scheme to back increased wage demands," is absolutely unfair and not worthy of the calibre of the Chamber of Commerce.

ERNEST BELTON,
Secretary.

Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council, 2387 Estevan Avenue, Victoria, B.C., July 10, 1940.

THE CELONA CASE

Sir,—This is a reply to a letter appearing in a Vancouver paper, which may be read by many people living in Victoria.

We would like to point out that the Local Council of Women has adjourned for the Summer. Notwithstanding this the following letter was sent on July 10 to the Attorney-General, protesting the action of the Parole Board:

Hon. Gordon Wismer,
Attorney-General, Province of British Columbia,
Victoria, B.C.

Dear Sir,—The members of the Local Council of Women of Victoria, comprising forty-seven societies, wish to voice their protest at the action of the Parole Board in allowing Joseph Celona, of Vancouver, to regain his freedom, even for a short time, and under restricted circumstances.

The work of social agencies, who are endeavoring to improve conditions and do away with vice and disease, is made more difficult by such an action.

We trust that you will see this matter from our point of view.

Thanking you in anticipation,
Yours very truly,
MADGE HALL,
Corresponding Secretary.

Local Council of Women, Victoria, B.C., July 12, 1940.

EVENINGS WITH THE STARS

Sir,—During the past eight years, the course of study, "Summer Evenings With the Stars," has proved ever increasingly popular, until last year every seat in the auditorium of the Victoria College was taken. A very enjoyable time was the verdict of all who came.

This year with the dogs of war unleashed, the council decided to continue, as it was felt that anything to interest and instruct would be even more worthwhile than in peacetime.

So again it has issued a programme. The course will consist of a short lecture, in simple language, and an outside study, with field glasses and telescopes kindly lent by members for the society.

There will be a visit to the Dominion Observatory through the courtesy of the directors. This is always a very popular night. There will be a visit to the Meteorological Observatory at Gonzales through the courtesy of Mr. W. A. Thorn. This is a new feature, and a very pleasant evening will be spent with the genial weatherman.

It is to be hoped that this year the course will be as popular as in the past. Young people of both sexes, visitors to Victoria, and His Majesty's forces, naval, military and air, are particularly invited.

The meetings will start on Monday, July 22, at 8.15 p.m. at Victoria College.

For further particulars or registration apply to Mr. W. Petrie, 77 Howe Street, telephone E 0753, or any member of council.

ROBERT PETERS,

R.R. 4, Victoria, B.C., July 13, 1940.

SUNSHINE CAMP

Sir,—From the grateful mothers of the first group at Sunshine camp, we wish to give thanks to the camp mother, nurse, cook and staff for their many kindnesses and thoughtful attention during our splendid holiday, which we have all enjoyed very much.

The Observation Car

By THE EDITORIAL STAFF

Some Trip!

Doubtless following the same route as many thousands of young salmon, a bottle containing a note from a Prairie resident, was picked up in waters adjacent to Victoria after a trip down the Thompson and Fraser Rivers. While cruising along one day recently a Victorian spotted the bottle bobbing in the water. Always on the lookout for something of interest he fished it aboard and was agreeably surprised to see a note snug and dry reposing inside. When he read the epistle and found that it was from a Prairie man his hopes fell, for it was quite possible that the bottle had been thrown overboard at some spot close to Victoria. His curiosity getting the best of him eventually, the Victorian wrote to the address mentioned in the note. He considered it well worth the trouble when informed that the bottle had been tossed into the Thompson River, many miles in the interior of the province.—W.I.P.

Boxla Chatter

The senior boxla race has definitely narrowed down to a two-team affair, with Alert Service and James Bay well ahead of the Jokers, the third entry. Bays won the city honors last season, and as we see it, will repeat, but they will meet with plenty of opposition from the red-sweatered Alerts . . . Playing together for the first time, Coach Gus Munroe's Jokers have given the fans some interesting battles, and while they have won only one game, it certainly has not been from the lack of trying . . . As we see it the Jokers have as much fight as any club in the loop, but that is the only department of the game where they match the Alerts and James Bay . . . Jimmie Skellern, Jokers newest goalie, shows promise, and with better protection, equal to that afforded Messrs. McKim and Gawley, would have a better record. He works hard and certainly demonstrated that he had his heart in the game when he played last week, a few hours after marching down the matrimonial aisle.—S.T.

Close to Brink

From an editorial in The Sunday News, New York: "The United States participation in the second world war seems already pretty well assured. Interventionism is on the up-grade. Those never-again vows of last September have been forgotten by large numbers of Americans. The President is an interventionist up to everything including men. We are in the war up to our chests now. We can expect to be in it up to our necks" . . . Names seldom fit occupations, but the members of a Sussex, England, anglers' club are known as Fish, Roe, Roach, Waters, Brooks, Hook and Bates . . . Ben, the barber, was talking about the merits of a second-hand car he acquired. Bill made some slighting remarks about its condition. "Why, it is sound in every part," Ben indignantly replied. "So I hear," Willie chirped . . . A reader complains that the enormous Summer hats worn by women in picture shows block the vision of many patrons. That takes us back to the palmy days when it was not uncommon to see a notice flashed on the silent screen, "Will Women Please Remove Their Hats?" Today the same old notice could well be revived . . . Last year a book entitled "The Strange Death of A Hitler" was published in the United States. It would be safe to say that it was not a best seller.—G.B.

Hats and Sugar

Judging from appearances, there is an epidemic of head injuries among the fair in the city. At least, that's the impression received on viewing the yards of bandaging around the head. We have been assured that these effects are in the way of hats, but are still somewhat incredulous . . . Of course, it may be entirely accidental in spite of several mornings spent golfing together, but none the less, it must be admitted that the manner of address used by one of the staff to his fair friend behind the eaterie counter when going dunking of an eve and taking his pick of the three types of sinkers offered. THE LITTLE BOATS OF ENGLAND

The little boats of England, the little motor boats,
The little penny steamers from Land's End to John o'Groats,
The Saucy Jane, the Gracie Fields, even a Noah's Ark.
Picked up their country's message that its back was to the wall
"There is danger, there is danger, will you answer to the call?"
And Francis Drake and Collingwood and Nelson of the Nile
Were on their quarter-decks again, you should have seen them smile
When all the little boats pushed out from Dover to Dunkirk
To bring the British Army home, that was their job of work.
How they performed their fearful task, the epic of those days,
The history books will tell our sons, but let us sing their praise
And as they lie at anchor from Newcastle to Poldhu
We say to them, with grateful hearts, "Nelson is proud of you."

The time used is Pacific Standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

To find the depth of water on the sill at the Esquimalt Drydock at any tide, add 30 feet to the height of high water as above given.

At rubber bridge it does not always pay to cash the thirteenth card of a suit, even when the holder thereof cannot be sure of regaining the lead to cash it later. Perhaps this statement will be a bit cryptic, but the following deal will, I am sure, fully clarify it.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

West was not at all enthusiastic about his best suit, spades—for which he cannot be blamed—and chose to open the nine of hearts. It was a sound choice. Dummy ducked and East overtook with the ten spot, declarer allowing him to hold the trick. The heart queen was returned and dummy won. A low diamond was then led, and, East, to conceal the six spot and confuse declarer as to which defender had that card, again played an honor. South won and returned the diamond nine. Since dummy had plenty of entries there was no reason for East to hold up his ace, so he took the trick and did a bit of thinking. He and his partner had already taken two diamonds and one heart, and, of course, the heart six was now a thirteener. But cashing that card would give East-West only four tricks, and where was the fifth, or setting trick, to come from? South's original no trump bid could not have been justified, in view of the cards in sight and those played, unless he had started with the two black aces. And there was a great likelihood in clubs or spades, possibly both. If he had the spade queen with the ace, there was nothing to be done about it because he would then be able to lay down nine tricks. But there was a chance that his ninth trick would have to be made in the club suit and would depend on a successful guess for the club queen. This meant that East's duty was to make that guess as difficult as possible. Actually, as we shall see, East made it virtually impossible for declarer to guess the correct play in clubs. For, instead of cashing the good heart, East now merely exited with a diamond.

Note how this play confused the declarer. The sequence of heart play had made it appear almost positive that West, not East, held the thirteenth heart. Hence, having lost only three tricks to this point, it appeared quite safe for declarer, after cashing his last diamond trick, to return to his own hand with the club ace and let the jack ride through West. Even if this lost to the queen, he figured, East could not take another trick, and the club suit would be established. His discomfiture was an extra reward for East, who gobbled up the second club lead with the queen and triumphantly produced the heart six for the defeat of the contract.

Sooke to Celebrate District's Progress At Flats Wednesday

Full Day's Programme Arranged for Annual Festivities to Include Foot Races, Water Events, Logging Contests and a Baby Show

NEXT Wednesday afternoon and evening the people of the Sooke district will be "at home" to friends, neighbors and visitors on the occasion of the seventh annual All-Sooke Day. The affair is to be under the patronage of His Honor E. W. Hamber, Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, and is to be held on Sooke River Flats. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Canada's war effort, it was stated by members of the committee in charge.

Festivities will begin at 12:30 p.m. and from then on there will be a continuous programme of events which will include foot races, jumping contests, novelty races, water sports, baby show, beef and salmon barbecue and tombola.

There will be fourteen events in the foot races, winding up with a men's half mile open race for a challenge cup donated by the Sooke Community association. This part of the programme also includes a men's relay race over a 400-yard course for a challenge cup and four medals presented by the Vancouver Island Coach Lines. The horseshoe pitching contest is to get underway at 2:15 o'clock for the Little & Taylor cup and the championship of Vancouver Island. Three races have been included for the services, a 220-yard race, and obstacle race for united services and a swimming relay race.

LOGGING SPORTS

The logging sports, always popular, will begin at 2:30 o'clock and winners will be entitled to the claim of the championship of the Island. The logging sports programme includes, log rolling, ladies' nail driving contest, chopping contest, log bucking and tree chopping. Cups were donated by the Sooke Association, Sooke Liberal Association and the Sooke branch of the Canadian Legion. The men's log birling contest is included in the water sports and the contest will be for the Island championship and the P. W. deP. Taylor challenge cup.

The tug-of-war contests for rural districts only will start at approximately four o'clock with eight men and a coach to a team, and if there are more than two entries the contest will be pulled in heats. The winners will be entitled to hold The Daily Colonist challenge cup. The Sooke Association has also presented a challenge cup for the open tug-of-war with which goes the Island championship.

Presentation of cups and prizes to winners of the afternoon events will take place at 4.45 o'clock.

GOLD RUSH NOVELTY

The "Sooke Gold Rush" is a novelty in charge of Rube Acreman and Robert Fitton. Three money prizes are being awarded. The baby show will be in charge of Mrs. Roberson, and The Victoria Daily Times will present a cup to the best baby from any rural district of Vancouver Island.

The novelty barbeque of beef "Sooke Style," it is said was developed by the gold prospectors of Leech River in 1864. The committee hopes to serve all day. There will also be a "two-bit" salmon barbeque; clam chowder, tea coffee and rolls, provided by the Sooke fishermen. The charge is to pay for fuel, plates, cups and sugar and any surplus over cost will be applied to the association's building fund. Frank Gray and H. Campbell will have charge of the barbeque. There will be fifty prizes in the tombola and prizes will be drawn on the grounds.

The day's festivities will close with a dance beginning at eight o'clock with a six-piece orchestra and a cafeteria service will be provided. Transportation to and from the Flats will be provided by the Vancouver Island Coach Lines from Victoria. Admission to the grounds is free.

Chairmen of the various committees follow: executive, C. A. Helgeson; finance, Joseph Collins; prizes, George H. Jones; athletic, Robert Acreman; dance, Harold Pontious; publicity, A. P. Brownsey; grounds and property, S. L. Shields; reception, Captain Taylor; secretary, Mr. Brownsey. The catering committee consists of F. Grey, F. Rumsby and F. Thorber.

CALL TENDERS ON ROAD WORK

Six Miles of Replaced Section of Island Highway To Be Surfaced

Tenders for the surfacing of six miles of the Island Highway in the cut-off north of Cobble Hill are being called by the Provincial Department of Public Works, it was announced yesterday by Hon. C. S. Leary. The bids are returnable at noon on Monday.

The cut-off is that recently constructed, eliminating Cobble village. The former section of the highway through Cobble Hill will be maintained for the benefit of residents there, the Minister of Public Works said.

Improvements are also planned for the Parksville-Alberni highway in the Cameron Lake area. Partial removal of a large overhanging bluff of rock, removal of curves, and replacement of one bridge by a fill, are listed to be done by day labor under the direction of departmental engineers.

Obituary

WILKIE—After a short illness, Claude Osmand Wilkie, aged thirty-one years, of H.M.C.S. Armentieres, died Thursday at Comox Hospital. He was born in Winnipeg, and had resided in British Columbia for nineteen years. He leaves his widow and one son, John, also his mother, Mrs. James Brown, of Parksville, V.I. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church, Esquimalt, at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Arthur Bischlager will officiate, and interment will be in the Naval Cemetery. KENNEDY—Funeral services for the late Mrs. T. A. Kennedy, who died at Fort William, Ont., on Monday last, were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Sands Mortuary Chapel. Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson officiated. A solo, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," was sung by Mrs. S. M. Morton, and the congregational hymn was "Abide With Me." Many friends attended the service and the following acted as pallbearers: J. E. Crawford, Albert Dawson, Thompson Kirby, H. S. Graves, Duncan K. Kennedy and T. A. Kennedy. The remains were laid at rest in the family plot at Royal Oak Burial Park.

PEARSON—Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, for Gordon Vaudin Pearson, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Leslie Pearson, 1744 Lee Avenue, who died after an accident at Kelowna on Tuesday. Archdeacon A. E. de L. Nunns will conduct the services. Interment at Colwood Burial Park. McCall Bros. have charge of the arrangements. The boy is survived by his parents, one brother, Peter, with the Canadian Forces, and a sister, Nancy, at home.

Fatally Injured In Car Collision

MISSION CITY, B.C., July 13 (CP).—Bernard E. Cade, twenty-two-year-old son of Mrs. Oliza M. Cade and the late George Cade, died today from injuries received twelve hours earlier when he was crushed between two cars on the Matsqui Dike crossing a few hundred feet beyond the end of the Mission-Matsqui traffic bridge.

He was riding on the running-board of a car driven by E. W. Swanson, of Matsqui. Going around the turn the car was sideswiped by another machine, as yet unidentified, going in the other direction.

Pleads Guilty to Serious Charge

VANCOUVER, July 13 (CP).—John Roxbury Hawthorne pleaded guilty in police court today to a charge of violating Defence of Canada Regulations and was remanded until Monday for sentence by Magistrate Mackenzie Matheson.

Hawthorne admitted addressing letters "likely to prejudice the safety of the State" to the Minister of National Defence at Ottawa and the chief of city police and Royal Canadian Mounted Police inspector at Vancouver.

EXPECTS 100,000 TO TRAIN THIS YEAR

service anywhere in Canada. They will be called out on shortest notice at any time within three years after entering training or until the war is ended.

PART OF MILITIA RESERVE

"The idea that these men are just to be called up for training is entirely erroneous," Associate Defence Minister Power stated today. "They become part of the militia reserve, an integral part of Canada's defence forces, and can be summoned to duty at any time."

The pay of the men will be $1.20 a day with no allowance for dependents. Unlike the system under the 1917 Military Service Act, men with dependents will not be exempt from call. In 1917 conscription was for full-time duty and for overseas service, but this time it is for part-time duty only, except in an emergency, and solely for home defence. Tht expectation is employers will be called upon to pay men's wages while they are in training. It is considered a man called up should not suffer financial loss and he will, except for invasion or similar crises, be only about forty days in training at any one time.

MEDICAL EXAMINATION

Registration throughout Canada is expected to start some time during the week of August 19. It will require a month from that date to get things ready for the first compulsory service call. There are 90,000 men in Canada in the twenty-one-year class and 250,000 in the twenty-two to twenty-four age group. Medical examination, officials said, was expected to weed out many, with almost one-third falling into category "C" or lower in the experience of medical examination to date in this war.

Men in essential service, particularly war work, will be exempt. But military authorities emphasize that this exemption provision will be strictly interpreted because men are not leaving their jobs for good and will be away only a short period. Incidentally, it is too late now for single men to make marriage plans to prevent being called up for home defence in the unmarried categories. All persons not married on or before next Monday must register as single and men married after Monday, but before registration, will be called up as single men.

MAN POWER RESOURCES

An estimate made by officials shows that 2,600,000 men in Canada over sixteen and 3,400,000 girls and women will have to register, of which 2,000,000 will come within the military age of nineteen to forty-five. Men who attempt to dodge home defence service will be jailed and then compelled to undergo training, it is declared. Men called out in September will likely train in Winter quarters, housed in huts all across Canada, drilling in armouries, skating and curling rinks and other auditoriums of suitable size.

It is estimated there are 700,000 single men in Canada in the twenty-one to thirty-four age groups which are likely to constitute the first few classes called. Of these, allowing for physical defects and exemptions on account of occupation or other reasons, it is estimated 450,000 will be available for home defence service. This number will be further reduced by those who volunteer for the Canadian Active Service Force and the militia, who, however, will already be in Canada's armed forces.

Complete regulations have not yet been drawn up or approved by the Government, and there may be some changes in present plans. Married men will not be called up until later and plans for their mobilization are not far advanced. It is possible some dependents' allowance may be provided for them.

Farmers' sons will be exempt during the harvest and an attempt will be made to exempt others in seasonal occupations so as not to disrupt essential work.

SEES TOO MUCH PARTY POLITICS

Senator McRae Leaving for Home Disappointed in Work Done at Session

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP). — The Senate gave third reading today to a bill to provide $10,000 as salary for the minister of the newly-created War Services Department, after Senator A. D. McRae (Conservative, British Columbia) asserted "party politics have been too much in evidence in this House this session."

Third reading of the bill was held up last night when Senator Lendrum McMeans (Conservative, Manitoba) insisted on his right to prevent abrogation of a rule requiring that twenty-four hours elapse between second and third reading.

On motion for third reading of the bill to provide $10,000 salary for the minister of the newly-created War Services Department, Mr. McRae begged leave of the Senate to make some remarks, saying it was his last appearance this session.

CHARGE BOUND TO ARISE

Senator McRae said the charge of party favoritism was bound to arise, no matter how careful the Government was in organizing the war effort. Cabinet ministers had to make new appointments, set up new branches. Naturally they sought men whom they knew were capable, in whom they had confidence. These were men with whom they had associated, often party friends.

He said he had hoped to be able to contribute something to the prosecution of the war, but the senators received no information on which to make a contribution.

"I am going home very disappointed. I don't believe I have helped in more than a small degree, if at all, in furthering the war," said Senator McRae.

Business was rushed too much. The Senate had no time to consider important bills.

PLEADS FOR CHANGE

"I am pleading for a different session next time from the kind of session we have had this year," he said. "So far as I am concerned, I don't feel I have even earned my board here."

Senator McRae said he was going home to look after his business, convinced the Senate needed only a quorum for the balance of the session. Members living in and near Ottawa could provide the quorum to pass what legislation remained.

Senator Dandurand said he never lost an opportunity to impress on other Cabinet ministers the rights of the Senate to sufficient time for consideration of important bills.

Senator McRae, making reference to unemployment insurance, doubted the wisdom of taking what he estimated would be $50,000,000 out of business for that purpose at the present time. He thought everyone was in favor of unemployment insurance. It was a matter of the time and the amount.

SMOKERS HIT BY NEW PRICE SCALE

Cost of Cigarettes in Tins and Packets and Fine and Coarse Tobacco Rises

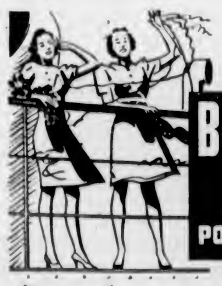

Wholesale tobacco dealers received word yesterday that the price of cigarettes, fine and coarse cut tobacco will be increased on Monday.

Tins of fifty cigarettes will be increased from 55 to 60 cents and from 65 to 75 cents. Packets will be sold at the prevailing prices until stocks are exhausted. Fine and coarse cut tobacco will be raised 10 cents per pound.

New cigarette prices will be eight for 10 cents, twelve for 15 cents and twenty for 25 cents.

The manufacturer of a certain well-known brand of patent medicine recently received a letter from a grateful woman who had been a customer.

"Four weeks ago," she wrote, "I was so run down that I could not even spank the baby. After taking three bottles of your tonic I am able to thrash my husband in addition to my other housework. Thank you!"

Conserving Fruit as Emergency Move

BEFORE they laid aside their aprons and put away their cooking pans for the week-end, the corps of housewives who volunteered to help the Local Council of Women with their project to conserve the remainder of the small-fruit crop of Southern Vancouver Island for emergency uses by the Red Cross, had put up about 500 pounds of loganberry and raspberry jam.

The above two pictures were taken at the Lake Hill Community Centre on Friday afternoon by a Colonist staff photographer. In the top picture are Mrs. A. E. Hopkins and Mrs. Madge Hall with a small portion of jam made during the two days. Mrs. Hopkins has her hand on a sixteen-pound jar, the largest of the containers presented among hundreds donated in response to the appeal. In the lower picture are Mrs. J. Glass, Mrs. J. M. Cooper and Mrs. M. A. Fleming, some of the housewives who assisted with the cooking of the fruit. Others who took part in the jam-making bee were: Dr. Olga Jardine, Mrs. F. R. Jewkes, Mrs. Snape, Mrs. E. McIntosh, Mrs. H. P. Hodges, Mrs. D. A. C. Smith, Mrs. W. F. Howell and Mrs. W. M. Mills.

The intention is to resume the work next Wednesday and continue with apples and plums. The finished jam is being stored at the cold storage plant for the use of refugees, men on service or other emergency needs.

Week's Extra-Curricular Events at Summer School Announced

The third week of the Provincial Summer School of Education will begin tomorrow. The 11 o'clock extra-curricular period during which no classes are held in order that students may attend, has some special attraction. Events of the week are as follows, and it will be noted that a few afternoon and evening diversions are also scheduled:

4 p.m., teacher-staff tea, with Dr. Fay Adams, Miss Grace Bollert, R. E. Belshaw and Dr. J. L. Murray Anderson.

Tuesday: 11 a.m., illustrated lecture by Dr. Fay Adams, with moving picture, "At Home in the Activity School."

Wednesday: 11 a.m., 'Beauty in Movement as a Living Art," by Diana Watts, internationally-known exponent of the art of securing and maintaining bodily grace and vigor.

4 p.m., teacher-staff tea, with Mrs. Irene Bostwick, Mrs. Irene Green, H. O. English, and Dudley Gaitskell.

7 p.m., beach gathering at Willows Park

Thursday, 11 a.m., address by Dr. Bernard Bierman, professor of political science at Seattle College, on "The German Problem." Dr. Bierman was born in Holland, and educated at the University of Amsterdam and the University of Fribourg, Switzerland, but came to Canada in 1924, attended the University of British Columbia, and became a British subject.

Friday, 11 a.m., address by C. D. Orchard, assistant chief forester of British Columbia, on "The Forests." This lecture is sponsored by the Society for the Preservation of Native Plants of British Columbia.

4 p.m., teacher-staff tea, with Miss Herbert, Miss King, Miss B. Hinton, Miss M. James, Burton L. Kurth and Ernest Lee.

8:45 p.m., weekly dance; hostesses, Miss Bollert's primary specialists.

Recreation and activities are expanding. Badminton is played in the gymnasium from 7:30 to 9:30 on Tuesday and Thursday, and from 4 to 6 p.m. on Friday; basketball from 4 to 6 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday; tennis at any time, but on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Colin Milne and Bud Hocking will demonstrate shots.

There will be a beach gathering next Wednesday evening, at 7 o'clock, at the Willows Park and wieners will be served at a bonfire.

MEETING IS HELD BY JUNIOR PHILATELISTS

The monthly meeting of the Greater Victoria Junior Philatelic Society was held on Friday night in Terry's rose room, with the president, S. A. Digby, in the chair. The guest speaker, Hubert Lethaby, displayed parts of his valuable Canadian collection.

The auction, conducted by F. Dyment, assisted by Arthur Sherwin, proved very successful and many valuable lots were bought. The club's monthly publication, The Junior Bulletin, now in its fifth month, was reported to be gaining popularity. Last month's competition winner was R. Oliver. Final date for entries in this month's competition is Friday, July 19, entries to be mailed to the editor, 2915 Admirals Road, before that date.

Plans are being made for another display, to take place in November. New members were welcomed by Misses M. Hughes and S. Baines. Mr. Lethaby complimented the club on making good headway in its short period of existence.

DOZEN NAZI PLANES SHOT DOWN BY R.A.F.

in today's engagements. That was in the Channel fighting.

Meanwhile, British bombers followed up their Friday night attacks on Emden and Kiel, German naval bases, with daylight attacks on the airdrome at Brussels in Nazi-occupied Belgium, on objectives at Manheim in the Rhineland and on barge concentrations in the Bruges-Ostend Canal.

ATTACKS ON GERMANY

The communique said:

"Bombers of the Royal Air Force last (Friday) night continued their attack on objectives in Germany in spite of adverse weather conditions. Naval bases at Emden and Kiel were again attacked. Damage was caused and many fires were started.

"Daylight attacks today (Saturday) been carried out by our bombers on the airdrome at Brussels, on objectives at Manheim, in the Rhineland, and on concentrations of barges on the Bruges-Ostend Canal. All our aircraft returned safely.

"In addition to an enemy bomber destroyed over the Channel this morning, one bomber and three fighters were shot down off the South Coast this evening. One of our fighters is missing."

In an elaboration of the communique the ministry said approximately twenty tons of heavy bombs were dropped on docks, factories, petroleum sheds at Emden and that "many fires and explosions were observed." British planes were over the area more than one hour.

OTHER DAMAGE REPORTED

At Kiel bombs were seen to burst on the sides of the canal. The landing ground at Brussels airdrome was bombed and a concentration of barges on the canal from Bruges to Ostend also were hit.

Summing up the results of a week's air attack, authorities said the Germans had lost more than $4,000,000 worth of aircraft and had inflicted only slight damage on shipping.

"The German High Command communiques are systematically minimizing German air losses," an authoritative source commented.

Britain is adding 7,000 men a day to her armed forces in a high-speed mobilization programme and answering the Nazi air blows with her own raids on German war industries, air bases and communication systems.

MORE MEN CALLED

The total of mobilized Britons rose today to more than 3,300,000 as 300,000 men answered a new call to the colors. The latest class is drawn from thirty-two-year-olds. Two others will be called this month, one next Saturday and the other a week later.

Early in August all Netherlanders in Britain who have registered for military service also will put on British uniforms.

War and preparations for the expected battleground in these islands meanwhile wrought deep changes in the week-end to which the average Briton clung. Work in many factories and Government offices never ceases.

Even for those with time and means, travel is restricted, cheap week-end excursions are canceled and sunny South Coast beaches are now defence zones banned to bathers.

BLANKETS RETAINED

All Canadian Red Cross supplies shipped overseas are going to Britain, as it is impossible for the Canadian or British Red Cross Societies to make shipments to Europe. Blankets collected for suffering refugees and wounded soldiers in France have not been sent to that country as the Red Cross would not take a chance on their falling into German hands. The first shipment authorized before the French armistice was diverted to England, where it will be stored until needed. The remainder, about 60,000, will be held in Canada. Already the Dominion Government has asked for the loan of a quantity of them to equip the colonist cars carrying overseas children to their destinations in Canada.

AD INFINITUM

"How did you compile your new dictionary, professor?"

"I had a quarrel with the wife, and—well—one word led to another."

Keys to Happiness!

Will your child have the opportunity to learn to "make music on her own"? In six or eight months under the direction of a competent instructor, of which there are many in Victoria, the average child will be able to play several pieces. From that point onwards the urge to play is but a natural development . . . and what a tremendous difference it makes to boys and girls . . . and adults too, if they play the piano even moderately well. The new, small space-saving pianos are shown here. All the leading makes are represented.

PERSONAL ITEMS and SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Couple Are Married at St. John's

Pink and cream gladioli were arranged in St. John's Church, and posies of pink flowers and tiny white bells marked the guest pews, for the marriage of Thelma Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. McN. Rolfe, 1215 Montrose Avenue, and Mr. John Harold Ozard, son of the late Mr. W. H. Ozard, and Mrs. Ozard, 3007 Fifth Street, which was solemnized by Canon Chadwick at 8:30 o'clock last evening. Mr. Ian Gailliford was the organist, and, as the register was being signed, Mrs. Archie Woollett, cousin of the bride, sang "Because."

A princess gown of white satin was worn by the bride, who was given away by her father. A lace yoke and Medici collar were features of the shirred bodice, which had leg-o'-mutton sleeves, and the full skirt reached to the floor. An embroidered net veil, arranged beneath a coronet of hand-made lace, studded with seed pearls and orange blossoms, worn by the bride's mother, formed a train, and white carnations, pink sweetheart roses and gypsophila composed the shower bouquet.

BRIDAL ATTENDANTS

Miss Mary Livsey, Vancouver, was maid of honor, wearing a frock of Nile green sheer over taffeta with a quilted jacket and full, long skirt, with Leghorn hat and long kid gloves to harmonize. The bridesmaids were Miss Eleanor Gray, in rose taffeta, and Miss Pearl Andrews, in aqua blue, their frocks being fashioned with flared skirts, having bustle bows, sweetheart necklines and puff sleeves. They wore flowered hats with veils and lace mittens to match the frocks, and all three carried Colonial bouquets of pastel-shaded sweet peas with streamers, which also matched the gowns. Little Joyce Townsend was a dainty flower girl in a long frock of primrose yellow taffeta, with a shirred bodice having puff sleeves and trimmed with mauve velvet bows. She also wore a headdress of taffeta and mauve flowers, and carried a tiny gilt basket filled with mauve and yellow flowers. Mr. Donald Smith was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Charles Ozard and Mr. Clifford Rolfe, brothers of the bride and groom.

The reception was held in the Odd Fellows' Hall, during which the bridal couple stood under a pink and white arch and bell. Assisting at supper were Mrs. A. H. Plows, Mrs. W. E. Ozard, and Misses Peggy and Betty West, Inez Jeune, Lillian Le Cocq and Margaret Walker. The four-tier cake, in folds of pink tulle, centred the table, flanked by vases of sweet peas and tall white tapers in silver candelabra. Mr. P. W. Richards proposed the toast.

Mrs. Rolfe welcomed the guests in a periwinkle blue lace dress over taffeta and a model hat of dusty pink straw, assisted by Mrs. Ozard in navy blue lace over apricot silk and a navy hat. They both wore corsage bouquets of roses.

WILL RESIDE HERE

Betrothal Is Announced

MISS KATHLEEN SWAYNE

A marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Captain T. G. V. Stephenson, Royal Signals, youngest son of the late Rev. G. A. Stephenson, LL.D., and Mrs. Stephenson, London, England, and Kathleen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. C. Swayne, 993 Admiral's Road, Esquimalt

Reception Held As Farewell to Miss Fountain

In compliment to Miss Anne Fountain, B.A., girls' work secretary for the province of British Columbia, a reception was held recently at the home of Mrs. A. J. Daniels, 601 Raynor Avenue, at which C.G.I.T. leaders and Sunday school workers of the various denominations were present to honor Miss Fountain and to bid her farewell as she leaves her position for another field of work.

The C.G.I.T. movement in Victoria and throughout British Columbia has been supervised by Miss Fountain for seventeen years, during which time she has endeared herself to thousands of teen-age girls and been the inspiration and help to hundreds of leaders and Sunday school workers. The C.G.I.T. purpose, "to cherish health, seek truth, know God, and serve others," has been her challenge to teen-age girls and Christian character development of girlhood has been her aim as she has planned, built up suitable programmes, and served the youth of the province.

Mrs. A. J. Daniels, affectionately known in C.G.I.T. circles as "Mother" Daniels, spoke in appreciation of Miss Fountain's work, and the loving service which she has given during the years, and on behalf of the Girls' Leaders' Council of Victoria presented her with an illuminated address accompanied with a scroll containing the names of the past and present C.G.I.T. leaders. Miss Minnie Beveridge, chairman of the council, presented Miss Fountain with a corsage bouquet of Talisman rosebuds and also spoke in glowing terms of her work in connection with C.G.I.T. camps. Mrs. Frank Holdridge, of Winnipeg, was also accorded the thanks and appreciation of the Leaders' Council for her work in directing the C.G.I.T. camp at Glinz Lake, and also the leaders who were associated with the camps this season.

During the evening Miss Opal Abercrombie gave an elocution number, and Miss Barbara Dawson, contralto, and Miss Maquinna Daniels, pianist, each contributed a group of solos.

The evening came to a close with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "Taps."

REMANDED FOR SENTENCE

CALGARY, July 13 (CP). — Eric Coffin, Drumheller school teacher, yesterday was found guilty in police court here of making statements likely to be prejudicial to the safety of the State. He was remanded for sentence to April 1, 1941, allowed his freedom on his own recognizance, and his bail was returned.

Henry Ford Jr. Takes Bride

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y., July 13 (AP)—Twenty-year-old Anne McDonnell and Henry Ford II, grandson of the automobile manufacturer, were married today in a pageant-like ceremony of the Roman Catholic Church.

As they stood at the flower-banked altar of the Church of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, the pretty blonde bride was smiling. Her long white veil trailed behind her.

The twenty-two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford was baptized into the Catholic faith, the faith of his bride, by Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen late yesterday in the presence of his parents, his bride-to-be and her parents.

Long before the marriage ceremony, hundreds of villagers had gathered across the street from the little church to view the notables and to applaud such personages as former New York Governor Alfred E. Smith, Henry Ford, Sr., and William S. Knudsen, head of the United States defence production programme.

The bride's thirteen brothers and sisters and her hundred first cousins, uncles and aunts formed a cheery family background for her wedding.

Intermediate Group Entertains Soldiers

The intermediate group of the Victoria Musical Arts, under the direction of Mrs. R. C. McCaw and Miss B. Griffin, arranged a concert recently at the Y.M.C.A. hut at which 400 soldiers attended. Mr. Eddie Hulford was chairman and the accompanists were Mrs. Sneddon, John Beckwith and Doreen Briggs. An impromptu number was given by a member of the audience, Private William Williams.

Taking part in the programme were Miss Ethel James, Phyllis Hick and Reta Nevard, Ursula Hills and Retia Nevard and Bernard and Phyllis Hick. Julia Kent Jones, Peggy Walton, Robin Wood, Doreen Briggs and Janet Dobbs.

MRS. A. J. JUKES

Two lovely brides married recently were Mrs. G. Arthur Guinness, formerly Miss Mabel Browett, whose wedding took place in St. John's Church on Wednesday. After a honeymoon in Vancouver, where Mr. Guiness' parents live, Mr. and Mrs. Guiness will make their home in the Interior of British Columbia. Mrs. A. J. Jukes was the former Mary Barbara Garrard, twin daughter of Major and Mrs. Garrard, Tod Inlet. The wedding took place in St. Stephen's Church, Mount Newton Crossroad, recently. Mr. and Mrs. Jukes will make their home in Victoria.

"Some people are funny," mused the man in the bar. "I know a man who hadn't kissed his wife for ten years. Then he goes and shoots a fellow who did."

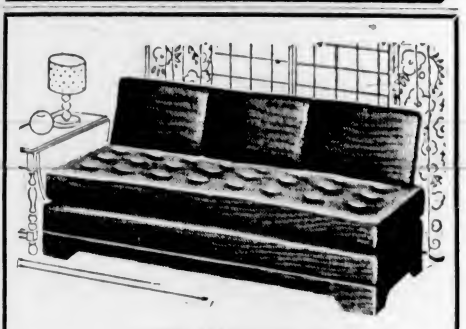

BETTER VISION

SEEING IS the most precious faculty you possess. Need we, then, remind you to guard your sight . . . not to let uncorrected eye faults hamper your social or economic career. Make Presentation

In honor of Miss Doris Minty, whose marriage will take place shortly, the officers and members of the Victoria Girls' Drill Team entertained on Thursday evening at the home of Miss Joan Cromack, 634 Craigflower Road. The bride-to-be was presented with a corsage bouquet of yellow carnations. Miss Flossie Hughes, captain of the team, made the presentation, a silver cream and sugar set, at the same time extending the good wishes of all members of the team. Games and contests were much enjoyed, prizes being won by Misses Doris Minty and Elsie Clarke. A buffet supper was served from a prettily-decorated table, the color scheme being red, white and blue, carried out in floral decorations. The guests included Mrs. Joan Loudoun, and Misses Flossie Hughes, Ruby Foyer, Gladys Cook, Beryl Flemming, Dorothy Glover, Mary White, Eileen Lanigan, Myrtle Lyle, Elsie Clarke, Doreen and Muriel Petherbridge, Helen Cook, Theresa Lee-Warner, Kay Williams, Alice Harvey, Lillian Barber, Joyce Stocker, Brenda Fisher, Elsie Edwards, Vera Drew, Nellie Browett, Helena Baxter, Jean McConnell, Isobel Cockburn, Beryl Drew, Eleanor Hourston and Mae White.

Party for Bride

Mrs. Richard Reeve, formerly Jessie Long, was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Dunlop at her home, 881 Ellery Street, recently. The rooms were arranged with Summer flowers, and the bride was presented with a corsage bouquet of carnations by Flora Dunlop, and a corsage bouquet of sweet peas was given to Mrs. Reeve Sr. The gifts were drawn into the room in a wagon by Flora Dunlop. Supper was served from a table centred with a bowl of mauve and white sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Reeve were married at Burns Lake on June 26, and are spending the Summer with Mrs. Florence Reeve, 836 Ellery Street, Esquimalt. The invited guests included Mesdames R. Reeve, F. Reeve, H. Pearce, R. Stewart, Restell, Ash, L. Hutchinson, O. Silk, Stan Edwards, Cheslyn, McCowberry, G. Lawson, P. Hill, Underhill, T. Gray, A. Ward. Arriving later in the evening were Messrs. Received Gifts at Shower

In honor of Miss Wenonah Lees, whose marriage to Mr. William H. Bird, R.C.A., takes place next Thursday, the Misses Annas and Mary Taylor entertained last evening at a miscellaneous shower at their home in Danes Court, Yates Street. Carnations and sweet peas were effectively arranged in the apartment. In the living-room a gay parasol stood on a table with white ribbons falling to the floor and attached to many gifts. Miss Lees also received a dainty corsage bouquet. An evening of music, with piano selections and vocal solos, was enjoyed. Miss Mary Hudson presided at a buffet supper. The table, covered with a lace cloth, was centred with pink carnations in a white porcelain bowl with pink streamers radiating to the corners of the room. Misses Evelyn Hudson and Jean Phillips assisted their hostesses in serving. The guests were Mesdames D. Powell, C. Ackerman, D. Deckerley, C. Alexander, Misses Jean Phillips, Evelyn Hudson, Ena McCann, Agnes Phillips, Ena Campbell and Mary Hudson.

Weddings

FIGUEIREDO—MacGILLIVARY

James Bay United Church was the scene of a quiet wedding which took place at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when Rev. D. C. Clarke united in marriage Hilda Geraldine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. MacGillivary, 237 Michigan Street, and Mr. Charles Thomas Jack Figueiredo, only son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Figueiredo, Duncan. Miss D. Bishop played the wedding marches and accompanied Miss Lillas MacDonald, who sang "At Dawning," as the register was being signed. Varicolored gladioli made an attractive background for the ceremony.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of her father, the bride was given in marriage by her mother, and she wore a dusty pink sheer afternoon frock with turquoise blue accessories. A cluster of gardenias, from which hung a turquoise veil, was worn over her brow, and fresh gardenias composed her corsage bouquet.

Mrs. Victor Dale-Johnson, Penticton, attended the bride, in an aqua marine dress with rose accessories and a corsage spray of pink carnations and roses, and Mr. Frank Jones was best man. The wedding party and a few friends were entertained at the home of the bride's parents, where the wedding cake, flanked by pink tapers, centered the refreshment table.

Mr. and Mrs. Figueiredo will make their home in Courtenay.

HEMSWORTH—HARPER

The marriage is announced between Margaret Noreen (Nancy), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harper, 3785 Carey Road, and Mr. Earl Hemsworth, son of Mrs. G. Hemsworth, 804 Lampson Street. The wedding took place on June 27 with Rev. D. Walker, Rockland Avenue, officiating.

B.C. OIL TEST IS CONTINUING

Initial Bore in Peace River Region Now Down 2,500 Feet, It Is Expected

British Columbia's oil well digging operations at Commotion Creek, north of the Pine River district, are proceeding steadily, and the first bore is now down 2,500 feet, Hon. W. J. Asselstine said last week, before he returned to the Mainland. At 6,600 feet, the Province has been advised, there is a favorable geological structure which may indicate the presence of oil.

While the drilling proceeds, the Government is keeping in touch with the progress of the work through supervising engineers on the spot. The first stage of drilling, roughly one-third of the anticipated depth of the bore, was regarded as satisfactory. The Province placed a fence around the drilling operations, and set up a guard against possible sabotage. There was no indication, however, that anyone had sought to tamper with the bore.

Drilling, commenced in May, may be sufficiently advanced in September to permit some indication of the probable result of the hole. The work is being carried out by contractors, under Provincial supervision.

DOES PASTEURIZATION OF MILK DESTROY VITAMINS?

In a preparatory school which, in addition to numerous playing fields, had a 200-acre farm, the milk was obtained from the cows on the farm. The milk was handled in the most sanitary manner and no sickness occurred that could be traced to the milk.

Many of the parents, however, wrote or spoke to the headmaster and urged him to have the milk pasteurized. The headmaster explained how carefully milk was handled, no possibility of disease organisms getting into the milk and that he wanted the boys to get the full food value of the milk, including the vitamins.

In an attempt to get at the amount of loss of vitamins by pasteurization, the headmaster wrote various health departments and private chemists. From some he obtained figures showing only five to ten per cent loss of vitamins by pasteurization and others as high as fifty per cent. All replies admitted, however, that pasteurization made the milk safe to use, which could not be said of unpasteurized milk. The headmaster, after due consideration and in conference with his dietitian, decided that safety was more important than food value, particularly in his school, because any loss in vitamins in the milk was more than made up by the great amount of fresh and preserved fruit provided, together with the vegetables from the farm.

What are believed to be reliable figures about loss of vitamins by pasteurization (heating the milk) appeared recently in an editorial in The Journal of the American Medical Association. From experiments in laboratories of high standing, the figures show that from twenty to twenty-five per cent of vitamin B1 (useful for tired nerves, lack of appetite and rheumatism), vitamin C which prevents scurvy, and iodine (which prevents early goiter) was lost by pasteurization. All the other nutritive or food substances of milk are apparently not affected by pasteurization.

From the above it can be seen that those who have maintained that pasteurization destroys some of the vitamins are correct, but the loss, twenty to twenty-five per cent, is not as important as the safety of the milk. As Dr. Gilman Thompson pointed out some years ago, unclean milk causes more illness than any other one thing.

Miss Snip—"Late as usual!"

"Rosedene" To Be Open To Public

Gonzales Chapter, I.O.D.E, members are looking forward to generous public support for the garden fete to be held under the chapter's auspices next Wednesday afternoon at "Rosedene," Rockland Avenue, which Mrs. W. C. Nichol has lent for the purpose of assisting war work.

Miss Marian Pitts and Mrs. G. Denbigh are the conveners of the affair, and other women of the chapter have been marshaled to take charge of various details.

In addition to afternoon tea, which will be in charge of Mrs. A. Chisholm and Mrs. T. A. Rickard, assisted by Mesdames C. B. Peterson, A. Georgeson, C. A. Hartley and Mackenzie-Grieve, with uniformed Girl Guides to serve, there will be lawn games, and indoors, bridge and mah-jong.

Mrs. K. C. Symons, Municipal chapter regent, will formally open the affair.

The following ladies will have charge of details: Mrs. E. G. Prior, bridge and mah-jong; Mrs. Curtis Sampson, darts; Mrs. T. R. Myers and Miss Aileen Dennis, bingo; Mrs. Saxton White and Mrs. W. L. B. Young, bagatelle; Miss Pitts, Mrs. Harry Davis, Mrs. Livingstone Learmouth, putting; Mrs. C. H. Meares and Mrs. F. G. Hood, contests.

Ice cream will be served, the ladies in charge to be Mrs. G. Denbigh and Mrs. G. Ferris, and there will be a table of home cooking in charge of Mrs. K. E. Guillod and Mrs. Guy Shaw.

Miss Knight Is Married to Mr. Fairbanks

A wedding of interest in Victoria and Vancouver took place on Saturday evening, July 6, in Ryerson Church, Vancouver, when Hilda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Knight, Victoria, became the bride of Mr. Jay Allen Fairbanks, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fairbanks, Vancouver. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. D. Braden and the best man was Mr. Frank Smith, Vancouver. Mr. Don Brown, Vancouver, was usher.

The bride's brother-in-law, Mr. Jack Goodwin, Vancouver, gave her in marriage, and she wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon over taffeta, and her full-length veil was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and pink and white carnations. Mrs. J. R. Goodwin, who was her sister's matron of honor, wore an ankle-length gown of pale pink chiffon and picture hat, and her bouquet was pale pink and white carnations and sweet peas. Miss Joyce Goodwin, niece of the bride, was the little bridesmaid, and wore a long dress of pale blue silk with wreath of pink roses in her hair and carried a colonial bouquet of corn flowers, sweet peas and marguerites.

For her wedding trip to the Interior, the bride donned a white suit with navy blue and white accessories. On their return from the honeymoon trip, the couple will reside at Port Renfrew. The bride was formerly a teacher at the Willows School, Victoria.

RED CROSS

20,765 GARMENTS

The Red Cross distributing centre reports receiving from units in Victoria and District during the month of June, 3,765 knitted and sewn garments, and 2,570 surgical dressings, making a total of 20,765 garments, and 12,570 dressings, since the commencement of the year. From the generous donations of materials for refugee clothing, scores of garments have been made and dispatched to England.

USED CLOTHING

Red Cross branches have now been instructed to accept "good as new" washed or cleaned used clothing, to be remade if necessary and stored locally for use of refugees in this country. No used clothing is being shipped overseas.

PARKSVILLE

MORE DONATIONS

Red Cross acknowledges with thanks the following donations: Harrison Street Rangers, $5; Gordon Head Unit, proceeds garden party at "Strangewood," $1,856; Oak Bay Unit, per Monterey P.-T.A. (additional), $5; North Saanich School, Junior Red Cross, $5; Ruth Chapter, O.E.S., $13.50; Vancouver Island Dog Fanciers' Association, proceeds recent exhibition, $52; collecting box in garden at "Ingienook," $29.33; Gorge Unit (additional), $6; Superfluities Store, June sales, $500; St. Mary's Oak Bay Women's Guild, $50; a Friend in Los Angeles, $53.17.

CLOVERDALE

Owing to the amount of work on hand the Cloverdale Unit will meet at 2 p.m. on Monday every week until further notice. It is hoped that more women will take an interest and attend the work meetings in the Welfare Rooms, or obtain material to work upon at home. Oddments of wool and woolen pieces for quilts are needed. In conjunction with two other units, Cloverdale Unit is responsible for a "white, elephant" superfluity stall at the garden fete at Government House on July 31, and members are anxious to obtain as many articles as possible, except clothing. Anyone able to make a contribution is asked to telephone E 4827 or E 8416, or parcels may be left at the Red Cross Superfluity Store, Government Street, by noon on Monday, July 29. In this case the parcels should be addressed to Cloverdale Unit.

CLIFFSIDE UNIT

Cliffside Unit, Shawnigan Lake, plans to hold a garden fete at Deer Point, West Shawnigan Lake Road, the lakeside home of Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Boyd, on Saturday, July 20, at 3 o'clock. Included in the many attractions will be tea, home-cooking and produce stalls and a shooting gallery. Mrs. M. C. Boyd is convener.

A.R.P. Activities

The St. John Ambulance Association have recently given instruction in first aid to A.R.P. wardens in the city fire hall. Thirty-one wardens took the examination and twenty-eight were successful in obtaining certificates. A class of about thirty-five wardens will be given instruction in first aid at the Esquimalt Municipal Hall in the near future.

About 120 wardens were present on Thursday July 11, in the Chamber of Commerce when Captain W. Ellis, C.P.C. officer and W. Loveland, organizing warden, outlined the various duties of district wardens and wardens, and received reports of organization and progress in the thirteen districts of the metropolitan area.

All wardens were requested to attend regular monthly meetings in their own district, and enrol for first aid and anti-gas courses to be arranged shortly. A resolution from the Civilian Protection Committee has been forwarded to the Provincial and Dominion Governments urging them to intern all enemy aliens.

To Provide Concerts at Beacon Hill

The public of Victoria will welcome the announcement made today by A. T. Goward, vice-president of the B.C. Electric Railway Company, that the Victoria Philharmonic Orchestral Society, with the permission of the city parks board, will play a series of four evening concerts in Beacon Hill Park. The first of these will be on Wednesday, July 24.

"It gives me a great deal of pleasure to be able to announce these concerts sponsored by the company," said Mr. Goward. "The large attendances last Summer would indicate that this effort to provide a popular form of outdoor entertainment is appreciated by the public.

"I would like to emphasize that these concerts are a gift to the public of Victoria, and I sincerely hope they may be a source of real enjoyment and a measure of relaxation from the tension under which many of us find ourselves these days."

The concert on Wednesday will begin promptly at 8 p.m. The three succeeding concerts will be given on July 31, August 7 and 14. Alfred Prescott will be the conductor for the series, and well-known local artists will be featured on the programmes. Arrangements also will be made for sound amplification, thus making it possible for the music to be heard over a wide area in the vicinity of the bandstand. An appeal is made to motorists not to use their automobile horns within earshot of the bandstand, except as a traffic warning.

War Work to Benefit From Chapter Fete

Many attractions have been arranged for the garden party to be held on Friday, July 19, at the home of Mrs. Stephen Jones, 245 Douglas Street, in aid of the war work fund of the Dr. O. M. Jones Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Mrs. K. C. Symons, Municipal regent, will open the affair at 3 o'clock, and the general convenor, Mrs. F. E. Dowdall, will be assisted by all members, and girls from the Royal Bride Junior Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Housie-housie will be among the games, and there will be contests for a hooked rug, cushion and chocolates. Dancing by pupils of the Russian Ballet School will form the programme for the tea guests. There will be a stall of home cooking, and candy will be sold.

Profit of Dance To Purchase Wool

A successful dance was held in the Athletic Hall, Esquimalt, recently in aid of the wool fund of the W.A. to the Royal Canadian Navy, under whose auspices the dance was held. Flags gave the building a festive appearance and a well-known orchestra played the music for dancing. The gratifying amount of $180 was realized.

During the evening Mrs. V. G. Brodeur gave a short address of welcome. Refreshments were served and about four hundred enjoyed dancing until 2 a.m.

Spotlight prizes were donated by Victoria firms and were won by Mr. Harrington, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Scott, Mr. A. B. Russell, Mrs. McGrath and Mr. A. G. Pierce. A special prize was won by Mrs. Appleby.

The policeman's son was learning music.

"How many beats are there to the bar in this piece of music, dad?"

"Fancy asking a policeman a question like that," said the boy's mother. "If you had asked your daddy how many bars to the beat, he might have been able to tell you!"

Has Birthday Tomorrow

plies from Canada and the United States.

LITTLE PERTURBED

In the meantime Eire goes her way, with little outward show of perturbation. There is an occasional test air raid alarm, but no street lights are dimmed.

Gas mask drills are held, but there are no gas masks. Instructions have been published for conduct in air raid shelters.

Owners of land tracts suitable for enemy airplane landings have been asked to barricade them, but thus far only an occasional branch has been placed here and there. Automobile owners have been asked not to park their cars in running condition. Recruiting goes on.

One noticeable element here in the past week has been a decided swing toward pro-British feeling.

NEW SPLIT IN BALKANS

The order affecting Jews was one more of a series of steps being taken speedily to create in this country a small-sized model of Europe's larger totalitarian states, and followed a night of conference involving King Carol, German air and military attaches and most of the members of the Cabinet of Premier Ion Gigurtu.

CLOSER CO-OPERATION

Diplomatic circles said that Rumania's foreign policy was reviewed in what they labeled the beginning of closer German-Rumanian co-operation.

The new Rumanian Government frequently has announced reorientation of its policies in the direction of the Rome-Berlin axis. But just as Rumania geographically is much closer to Germany, so its new totalitarianism resembles the Nazi more than the Fascist brand.

As in the early days of Fascism and National Socialism, Rumanian Jews have borne the brunt of many attacks and many new laws.

They have been denounced in speeches by Cabinet members as "poisoners of the national life." Jewish songs no longer may be sung nor Jewish music be played in public. No orchestra may contain Jewish musicians. Jewish artists are barred from the stage.

All Rumanian newspapers have been required to discharge Jewish editors and staff members. Jews may hold neither public office nor Government positions.

PRESS CLOSELY CONTROLLED

As in Italy and Germany, the press is under rigorous control. Three newspapers already have been suppressed in Bucharest. Today, the Rumanian press denounced the "imperialistic tendences and exaggerated ambitions" of Hungary.

Strict censorship has been imposed on foreign correspondents.

As in Germany, "racial purity" is being stressed. Help-wanted advertisements in the newspapers now contain the phrase "please state ethnical (racial) origin."

The members of the new National Party which, just as in Italy and Germany, dominates political life wear bright blue uniforms and give each other a salute which is halfway between those of Hitler and Mussolini.

NEGOTIATIONS INTERRUPTED

BERLIN, July 13 (CP by Radio).—The German radio said today that Rumanian-Turkish trade negotiations have "encountered difficulty" and have been "interrupted temporarily."

The Turkish delegation prepared to leave Bucharest for home, it was said.

"Turkey demanded much higher supplies of oil than formerly, which aroused the suspicion that Turkey wanted them in a large part for Great Britain," the German radio said.

TO TEACH PATRIOTISM

REGINA, July 13 (CP).—A new course in citizenship which lays greater emphasis on patriotism, loyalty to the King and country and which deals with recent changes in democracy, has been mapped out by the Department of Education for introduction in Saskatchewan schools next Fall, J. W. Estey, Minister of Education, announced today.

ceeded most effectively and has "revolutionized the position" as to any attempted invasion of Britain.

Mr. Alexander said Britain hoped to maintain the island as the "main seat of our war effort . . . as a base from which to seek out and destroy the enemy," because Germany now could "be continuously assaulted only from airdromes of the United Kingdom."

He urged the "great American nations to consider and recognize that the fight we wage today is as much a fight for preservation of their national inheritance . . . and the principles of the Declaration of Independence as it is a fight for the preservation of England's green and pleasant land."

When a reporter asked whether Hopkins had endeavored to persuade him to do so, he declined to answer, and said he would reply "in due course" to the direct question whether he would retain his present party position.

To vaulted ceilings, marble floors and red plush draperies, there had been added rods of red, white and blue bunting, with swinging white tassels and huge pictures of McNutt and other Indiana politicos. But the biggest picture of all was a head and shoulders of President Roosevelt fully thirty-two feet high.

Another development was an announcement from Thomas Kennedy and Philip Murray, secretary and vice-president, respectively, of the United Mine Workers, that Democratic delegates affiliated with C.I.O. organizations would vote with their state delegations for a Roosevelt third term.

U.M.W. officials said there were twenty-five or thirty delegates affiliated with C.I.O. units. Asked if there was any special significance in today's announcement in view of John L. Lewis' opposition to a third term, the officials said "the statement speaks for itself."

Two Slightly Hurt As Car Overturns

Clifford Banner and Arthur Clark, both about nineteen years of age, and both living at Jordan River, received minor injuries when a car, driven by the former, overturned at a curve on the north side of Scenic View, Island Highway, about 9 o'clock last night.

The youths were driven into the city by George C. Warnock, Fairbridge Farm School, with the assistance of the provincial highway patrol, and were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. Banner was cut about the face.

Hellenic Skipper Took Final Plunge While Being Towed

Fire-Damaged Greek Ship Sank in Ninety Minutes After Cutter Started Moving Her Off Traveled Sea Lanes

ORTLAND, Ore., July 13 (AP).—Ninety minutes after the coast guard cutter Onondaga began towing her toward the Columbia River entrance tonight, the burned hulk of the freighter Hellenic Skipper sank.

The Onondaga notified her base by wireless that the lost ship went d. n by the stern. Coastguardsmen cut the towline a few seconds before the still-steaming derelict took her final plunge.

The cutter located the vessel earlier in the day and reported one mast and the stack still standing. Guardsmen got a line on an undamaged portion of the bow and began the tow attempt. The cutter did not give the location other than to say the derelict had been found in the trade lanes off the Oregon coast with burned wreckage trailing over her sides.

The crew of twenty-one abandoned the ship last Wednesday twenty minutes before a boiler room explosion.

VOLUBLY THANKFUL

ASTORIA, Ore., July 13 (AP).—Twenty-one officers and men of the Hellenic Skipper, volubly thankful for solid ground under them, rested today from sixty grueling hours in an open boat. They reached shore late yesterday after their 1,548-ton, forty-five-year-old vessel caught fire 130 miles at sea and blew up.

One of their number, Second Engineer A. Merrtzanis, was in a hospital in critical condition from burns and exposure. The others were all weak, but none in serious condition.

The Hellenic Skipper, until recently the Alaska Steamship Company's Curacao, caught fire mysteriously about 8 a.m. last Wednesday and was doomed almost before the fire was discovered, First Mate Aris Caselides said. The wireless was put out of commission in a few minutes. Captain Panis Danalis gave orders to abandon ship. In the frenzy to get the lifeboat launched, two sailors were left aboard, but the boat put back and picked them up. Twenty minutes later the Hellenic Skipper's boilers exploded.

HAD NO COMPASS

The crew, without compass or other navigation instruments, set a course for the coastline, navigating by sun and stars over the rough seas when intermittent fogs lifted. The first night the men sighted a ship and attempted unsuccessfully to signal it with pistols and flashlights.

A. B. Chittester, of Castle Rock, Wash., a tuna fisherman, sighted the lifeboat forty miles off the mouth of the Columbia on Friday. He took the injured man aboard and towed the boat to the Columbia Bar, where a coast guard motor lifeboat took over.

The men did not lack food or water. Their boat was provisioned.

The crew was lodged in a wharf building here and the Greek consul in Seattle notified.

Leonidas Kazopoulos, a fireman, told of awakening in a cabin next to the engine room and smelling smoke.

"The boiler glass blew and steam started to escape before I realized what was wrong," Kazopoulos said.

ENGINEER CRYING

He related that he ran over grills above the boilers in the engine room and saw wooden engine shims burning and flames spouting from the stoker room. He raced through the dining salon to the boat deck, where he found the burned Second Engineer A. Merrtzanis leaning against the rail and crying.

"The rest of the crew was in lifeboats about 100 metres away," he added. "I called them to come and get us."

"We circled the burning ship and talked about going back for a compass," Ivanoff said, "but we were afraid the boilers would explode."

They did, just twenty minutes after the boat picked up Kazopoulos and Merrtzanis and pulled away for a second time.

Extend Sympathy to Mother

Mrs. C. F. Corbett, of 831 Linkleas Avenue, mother of Flying Officer J. A. Shepherd, R.A.F., who was killed in action while engaging the enemy over France, has received the following message from Buckingham Palace: "The Queen and I offer you our heartfelt sympathy in your great sorrow. We pray that your country's gratitude for a life so nobly given in its service may bring you some measure of consolation. George R.I."—

LINER DOCKS FROM GALWAY

Washington Reaches Port With 1,610 Passengers on Final Refugee Trip

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP). — The United States liner Washington arrived from Galway, Eire, today on her final war refugee removal trip, with 1,610 passengers, 273 of them aliens.

The voyage was uneventful in contrast to her last trip, when she was stopped by a German submarine.

Three hundred and eighty of the passengers were children under ten, and the ship, as on her last two voyages, resembled a floating nursery.

One of the children was the nine-year-old son of Alfred Duff Cooper, British Information Minister, going to stay with unnamed friends at Easthampton, Long Island, N.Y.

Another was the ten-month-old son of Ernest Simpson, former husband of the Duchess of Windsor, and his second wife, the former Mrs. Mary Raffray, of Baltimore. The Simpsons are still in England.

Among the passengers were John Kerr Davis, United States envoy, and his wife, who were in Warsaw during the siege by the German armies and who more recently have been at Dublin. Mr. Davis once was United States consul at Vancouver.

"IN FULL FORCE"

Frank C. Elliott, of Seattle, Canadian and American manager for a large London importing firm which does much buying on the Pacific Coast, told reporters he was a "vigorous non-interventionist," but now "I'm not too sure we hadn't better get over there in a hurry—in full force."

FIREMAN HURT IN ACCIDENT

Canadian National Locomotive and Cars Leave Rails —Passengers Escape

LINDSAY, Ont., July 13 (CP).—A railway fireman was injured seriously today when a crossing accident near Omemee caused the overturn of a Canadian National Railways locomotive and the burning of three passenger coaches. All passengers escaped.

Conrad Smelser, of New Toronto, locomotive fireman, suffered severe injuries when pinned in the wrecked locomotive.

Police said the accident occurred when an oil truck, driven by Phil Harford, of Peterborough, skidded into the track, breaking a rail and causing the derailment of the locomotive. Harford jumped before the crash.

LIABLE TO CENSORSHIP

Information has been received by Postmaster G. H. Gardiner from the Postoffice Department, Ottawa, that mail, excepting parcel post, may again be posted for transmission to Switzerland. As mails for Switzerland are liable to censorship by the enemy, senders should exercise the utmost discretion as to what they send or write. Mails for Finland are also liable to enemy interception.

CHEAP FARES FOR WEEK-END

E. & N. Offering Bargains In Travel to All Up-Island Points

Travel bargains are again being offered by the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway Company between all points served by the system. Next week-end, Victorians will be able to go to Port Alberni, Courtenay or any intermediate point at greatly reduced rates of travel, while Up-Island residents will have the same privileges southbound. Tickets will be good going on Friday and Saturday, July 19 and 20, with the return limit good to and including Tuesday, July 23.

GULF ISLANDS

The combination land and water trip offered by the Vancouver Island Coach Lines and the Gulf Islands Ferry Company for next Wednesday includes a coach ride from Victoria to Swartz Bay and a cruise from Swartz Bay aboard the Ms. Cy Peck through Gulf Islands waters. Ports of call will be Beaver Point, Port Washington and Ganges Harbor.

MAINLAND EXCURSION

The Union Steamship Company's Ss. Lady Alexandra will arrive here next Thursday with excursionists from White Rock, B.C., according to Walter S. Miles, of the company's Victoria office. The Alexandra will arrive at 12:30 p.m., and will dock at the Island Tug & Barge Company's wharf. She will leave Victoria on her return trip to White Rock at 5:30 p.m.

OUT OF LUCK

Four British subjects were among the crew of the burned Greek freighter Hellenic Skipper. They were landed with other members of the ship's crew at Astoria. They were Daniel Brandt, John Francis O'Neil, Canadian; John Caird, England, and Demasso Gonzellious, British West Indies.

The seamen had been held at Seattle for deportation by the United States immigration authorities, but rather than face this the men signed on the Hellenic Skipper for a one-way trip to China. Now they are in the same predicament they were in before the ill-fated ship sailed.

WIND LIGHT FOR RACING

Shangri-la and Mintaka Winners in Yesterday's Yacht Club Matinee

Shangri-la and Mintaka were the winners in yesterday's matinee staged by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club at Cadboro Bay. Both boats led their respective classes—"C" class cruisers and star boats—over the course to win by wide margins.

Getting back into the first place column after a number of "also ran" races during the early part of the season, Mintaka, skippered and sailed by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. M. Barrett, went around the course like a thoroughbred, outdistancing the other star entrants as well as overtaking and finishing well ahead of the boats in the cruiser class event.

Shangri-la with Commodore E. P. Ashe guiding her, also made a good race of it, and her leadership was never challenged, winning handily from a field of five starters, including Richmond II (Rear-Commodore Holden), Lalonga (Fleet Captain James), Minto (Campbell) and We Too (Cooke). Competing against Mintaka in the first race for the Ashe Cup were: Boykin (Blandy) and Aquila (Packford).

Then "C" class started at 3 p.m., and the star class five minutes later. The course was from the clubhouse dolphin to Oak Bay to Cadboro Bay beach mark, twice around. The race was called at the first round, the judges considering that the wind was getting too light for the second round. Finishing times were as follows:

"C" Class—Shangri-la, 4.14:25; Lalonga, 4.25:32; We Too, 4.31:22, Minto, 4.37:40; Richmond II, 4.39:30. Star Class—Mintaka, 4.08:50; Boykin, 4.15:40; Aquila, 4.22:05.

B. B. Temple was starter and Secretary James Cameron timekeeper.

HONOLULU, July 13 (AP).—The American Clipper, establishing the first commercial air service between the United States and New Zealand, alighted in the harbor here at 8.22 a.m. (10:52 a.m. P.S.T.) today. The big plane left Los Angeles at 4:35 p.m., P.S.T., yesterday.

Narrow Escape In Bombing Raid

HAROLD V. BUCKLEY

SON of Mrs. C. Buckley, Langford, writing to Captain Seymour-Biggs, states that he was fortunate to be absent from billets at the time a raid, which killed and wounded several, occurred. Harold is a wireless operator with the Royal Air Force, and is at present somewhere in England. At the time of writing he had just returned from the Norwegian expedition.

START FLIGHTS WITHIN MONTH

Service Between New York And British Isles Via Montreal Announced

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP).—Trans-Atlantic flights between New York and the British Isles, via Montreal and Newfoundland, will be started within a month, it was announced today by Airways Atlantic, Ltd., a subsidiary of the British Overseas Airways Corporation.

The planes, twenty-five-ton four-motored flying boats, like the Cabot and Caribou in trans-Atlantic mail service last Summer, will carry mail and an unannounced number of passengers. They will carry no protective arms.

The British terminal was not announced. The service was to have started last May 15, but the British Air Ministry took over the planes for defence purposes.

Young Aviator of Winnipeg Is Held Prisoner of War

WINNIPEG, July 13 (CP)—Pilot Officer Donald MacDonald, twenty-four-year-old Royal Air Force flyer, is a prisoner of war in Germany, his parents were informed in a message from the International Red Cross.

Native of Winnipeg, the young aviator is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David MacDonald. He was first reported missing during air operations, June 11.

MISSING FLYERS REPORTED SAFE

Two Okanagan Men Are in German Prison Camps, Parents Are Told

KELOWNA, B.C., July 13 (CP).—Two Okanagan men previously reported missing after Royal Air Force flights over German-held territory have been reported safe in German prison camps.

Mrs. W. M. Mitchell, of Kelowna, received word this week that her son, Flt.-Lt. Basil A. Mitchell, had been interned after being brought down in enemy territory.

A letter from Flying Officer Arthur Roberts, received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Roberts, of Vernon, told how he had been shot down over Luxembourg and taken prisoner.

The letter, sent from a German prison camp, read:

"I was shot down May 10 over Luxembourg, but am not hurt. We are being treated quite well here, and the food is not too bad. Don't worry as I am O.K. We can write only three letters and four postcards a month. My navigator is in hospital, but will live, and my air gunner is O.K.

"Being a prisoner of war is not so bad as I thought it would be. I would appreciate some Canadian cigarettes."

ITALIAN CRAFT OF MANY TYPES

New Names in Airplanes Appear With Nation's Entry Into War

LONDON, July 13 (CP). — After learning names of such German aircraft types as Heinkel and Messerschmitt, prepare for these names receiving prominence following Italy's entry into the war: Fiat, Macchi, Breda, Savoia, Marchetti, Caproni and Cant.

Altogether, the Royal Italian Air Force employs about thirty different types, including a half-dozen seaplanes and a flying boat. Many, however, are obsolescent, and it seems probable that, as the war progresses, in so far as they use Italian and not German aircraft, Italy will concentrate on one or two of the most advanced types in each category.

The Fiat G-[illegible] and the Macchi C-200 can be reckoned foremost among Italian fighters. Both are modern single-seat monoplane types with a single radial engine. Each carries two heavy machine guns, firing forward. Their wing span of about thirty-five feet is two feet less than Britain's smallest fighter, the eight-gun Spitfire. Their speed —305 miles per hour for the Fiat and 313 miles per hour for the Macchi—is definitely low as modern fighters go.

THE BIG BOMBERS

Italy's best-known bombers are of the three-engine type. The Savoia-Marchetti 79 and 81 are examples.

The S.M. 79, powered with engines of the Bristol-Pegasus type, are the more successful. This aircraft, with a wing span of about 66 feet and a top speed of 270 miles per hour, is roughly comparable in size and speed with the British two-motor Hampden.

Newer are the two-motor Savoia-Marchetti 85 and 86 and the Fiat B.R. 20. This plane has a speed of about 260 miles per hour, and besides carrying a useful load mounts four guns. Most of Italy's bombers are more lightly armed.

Of the 2,100 Italian first-line aircraft there are 340 seaplanes and flying boats. Many are out of date but this high proportion of seagoing craft indicates Italy intends to take advantage of her many bases. The fastest seaplanes are the little Caproni Ca 312 and the big three-motored Cant Z 506B. None compared favorably with the British Sunderland and Lerwick flying boats.

CLUE TO FORTUNE IS FOUND IN WOODEN LEG

LONDON, Ont., July 13 (CP).—The wooden leg of an unidentified Toronto man whose body was sent to the University of Western Ontario Medical School for dissection because he did not have enough money for burial revealed that he owned a small fortune while he lived.

When university assistants examined the artificial leg they found a secret cache, in which they found papers showing the man had purchased an annuity for $3,000 for which he had only been paid a small amount on his original investment.

CHAPTER LV

"You don't gain anything by waiting." Dick's placid look, significant in its very lack of expression, moved from Gwen's anxious face to that of the hovering nurse. "You might as well get started," he added, and the woman began to rub Van's bared arm briskly with a bit of soaked cotton. The sharp, sweet scent of alcohol pervaded the room.

"I didn't know you were out here in California," Van said to Dick. "Did you know he was out here?" he asked his wife.

"Not until I met him at Link's hotel, Van. And he was just going to start for the 7 o'clock plane this morning when we caught him."

"What time is it now?" Van asked restlessly, irrelevantly. "I wish you'd told me Latimer was here, Gwen."

"You were in Seattle, Van."

"I know. But I'd rather have another opinion. I'd like another doctor's opinion."

"Three of us had a look at you and at your X-rays," Dick said. "You don't want to stay the way you are now a minute longer than you have to. We have you pretty well doped, now."

Van looked at him steadily, with unfriendly eyes. When he spoke it was to Gwen:

"Why wasn't I taken to the Dante Hospital?"

"This was nearest, Van, and they rushed you here."

Van looked from one to the other uncertainly, jerked his arm away from the nurse's needle, and immediately twisted his head down against his shoulder with groans and cries that terrified Gwen and wrung her heart.

"That hurts, doesn't it?" Dick said, watching closely.

"Gwen, do you think I ought to?" he said, his swollen lips trembling.

"Ah, but you will!"

Van held her hand, tears running down his colorless face. For a long time they looked at each other.

"Go ahead, then!" he said in a whisper, and the nurse commenced her preparations for a hypodermic again.

When Gwen went out into the hall a few minutes later the nurse on duty told her that Dr. Latimer would like to speak to her.

"I'm glad you talked him into this, Gwen," he said. "It's his only chance."

"It's not a bad operation, Dick?"

"It's very bad."

"But, Dick—he left it to me to decide!—should we do it?"

"He has no chance otherwise, Gwen."

"You say you think I ought to, Gwen?" he faltered.

"Latimer says it's the only chance," he muttered, discontentedly.

"Ah, but Van, he'll do his best—you know that——" The horror of Dick's responsibility smote her afresh, and she tried to reach Van with her own faith in him.

"Oh, sure he will!" he said carelessly, with his thickened dark mouth making the words, and all his words, almost unintelligible. "Did he ever marry, Gwen?"

"No."

"I suppose he tells you it was on your account?"

She smiled, all mother, all comforter.

"I imagine a good many men are languishing for me."

"You love me," Van said jealously. He closed his eyes, tears ran over his face again. Gwen slid to her knees, spoke with deep seriousness:

"You know it, Van."

"Ah, but Gwen, say it!" He was crying bitterly.

"I do say it. I love you, my poor old man," Gwen murmured, her cheek slightly touching his. He did not answer, he was getting drowsy now, and it was with an effort that he opened his eyes and gave her a twisted shadow of his old smile.

When Van was carried away on a stretcher, Gwen went to a hall window, stood leaning against the casement and looking out. Van might be dying. Then what? She had been his wife eight years. She had married him just after another election. Eight years was a long time. Would she be sorry if he died?

Sorry, yes, for him, and for that last, trusting look he had given her when they were all leagued against him, when he was helpless and in pain. She would forever remember the look that trusted his life to her and to the man who loved her!

But not sorry for herself, except for an aching regret for the lost years, for the pain for what might have been. Young love, young confidence, young solving of the problems of home-making and money saving; of these she had been robbed. Life would not bring them back. The shadow, the burden of living seemed heavy upon her.

It was on Friday, ten days later, that Gwen came down to the dining-room at about 9 o'clock to find Sheila breakfasting there alone.

"How's Van this morning?" Sheila asked.

"I just telephoned on my way downstairs and talked to him himself," Gwen said. "He was very much pleased with himself. He said he had been shaved and had had his breakfast and was reading the paper."

"He's coming on all right, then?" Sheila said.

"Remarkably. Dick says. He says he has the resistance of an ox. Heart perfectly wonderful. And he's beginning to be cross, which I suppose is a good sign," Gwen said, with a not very happy laugh.

"I seems to be part of convalescence. No chance of your coming to Kenthill with Link and me?"

"No chance at all. But I might send the children up tomorrow morning with Martin. I know mother'd love to have all the grandchildren together."

"I know. But it would break his heart. And something still might go wrong."

"When will Van get home?"

"They say in about three weeks. He'll have to be invalided for a long time." Gwen pushed her cup aside and jerked her head toward the drawing-room door. "Come in here, Sis, I want to talk to you," she said.

Fine Institution Equipped by Canadian Red Cross Now Ready for Use

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—The Canadian Red Cross Hospital in Buckinghamshire built by donations of the people of the Dominion amounting to nearly $1,000,000 will be formally handed over to Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, July 16, to be operated by the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, Colonel G. G. Nasmith, Canadian overseas Red Cross commissioner in London, announced today.

"We are glad to be able to present such complete modern equipment for the use of our doctors and nurses, and such comfortable quarters for our wounded and ill," Colonel Nasmith said.

"Thanks to the generosity of the Canadian people, we have been able to buy the most modern equipment to allay suffering and speed recovery and to house it in an attractive building."

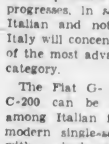

IS WELL EQUIPPED

He added that the operating rooms would be envied by the most up-to-date metropolitan hospitals, and that the X-ray and dental departments could not be excelled anywhere.

The hospital's furniture is from the Dominion and its kitchens will serve Canadians.

"This is really a Canadian hospital," Colonel Nasmith said, "given by the Canadian people for their sons, husbands and friends. We know that they would be proud of it."

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, chairman of the advisory committee of the Canadian Red Cross in London, will present the hospital to Mr. Massey. The High Commissioner will turn it over to Colonel R. M. Luton, senior medical officer, who will accept it on behalf of the R.C.A.M.C.

Cold Draughts on Heads of Parliamentarians Complained About In Commons

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP). — Cold draughts coming down from the galleries on to the heads of members of the House of Commons were discussed in the Chamber yesterday and Works Minister Cardin said experts were making a study of possible methods of preventing sudden changes in temperature.

Conservative Leader Hanson raised the subject on behalf of his colleague, W. K. Esling, Conservative, Kootenay West, who, he said, almost caught a serious cold yesterday because of cold eddies of air coming down from above the galleries.

"I am tough and I can stand it," Mr. Hanson said, but the member from Kootenay was not robust. "It might save a by-election," Mr. Hanson said, if the difficulty were remedied.

"I have been suffering that for years," said A. W. Neill, Independent, Comox-Alberni. "The Government will have to do something about it or supply us with wigs."

Mr. Cardin said the same condition often existed on his side of the Chamber. Mr. Hanson, Mr. Neill and Mr. Cardin are bald.

BANDS COMING BACK

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Military bands, sorely lacking in the United Kingdom and elsewhere in the Empire since the outbreak of the war, are coming back. The War Office will resume payment of grants necessary to meet the upkeep of bands.

NO DISARMAMENT

ALEXANDRIA, July 13 (AP).—The Egyptian Ministry of National Defence said yesterday the Government was considering turning back to British units certain army equipment loaned to Egyptian units. The statement was issued in denial of a report that the Egyptian army was being disarmed. Turning back of equipment would increase the supplies of British forces.

Churchmen Defeat Albions by Three Wickets at Beacon Hill Park—University School Cricketers Beat Cowichan and Take First Place

Yesterday's Scores

Incogs 169, Cowichan 72.

Five C's 154 for seven wickets, Albions 138.

Defeating visiting Cowichan cricketers in rather convincing fashion at the University School grounds, Incogs moved out into undisputed occupation of the premier berth in the Victoria and District Cricket Association standings, two full points ahead of the Albions and Five C's, joint holders of second position.

Playing at Beacon Hill, churchmen gained revenge for their earlier league setback at the hands of the Albions, defeating them by three wickets. It was the second victory in successive weeks for the Five C's, who last Saturday defeated the Albions in the knockout semi-final.

Albions batted first, and Eric Quainton, opening the bowling for the churchmen, cleanly bowled George Berridge with his first ball. Two wickets were down for eleven runs, but some brisk hitting by Rush and Colquhoun added sixty runs for the third wicket. The century mark was passed after an hour's batting and with Stenton rattling up thirty-one runs in quick time the innings realized 138 runs.

COMMENCED BADLY

Five C's commenced badly, losing Tom Harper in the veteran E. D. Freeman's first over. This was the only wicket to reward the Albions' trundlers for over an hour. Quainton and George Payne collared the bowling and raised the score to 117 before Quainton was caught by the wicketkeeper. At the fall of the third wicket the C's needed only fifteen runs to win, but a great spell of bowling by Freeman sent the wickets tumbling down, and it was not until the seventh wicket was gone that the game was won.

George Payne was unfortunately run out when he was well set and seemed well on the way to another century. In his fine effort of seventy-three runs were nine fours. Quainton, in addition to playing a patient innings of forty-four, took three wickets for ten runs. Jack Payne, besides taking his usual toll of the opposing batsmen, enlivened things with a couple of mighty hits for six.

Freeman had by far the best analysis for the losers, although Stenton tried very hard in bowling fourteen overs for his one wicket.

INCOGS TRIUMPH

Highlight of the Incogs' victory over Cowichan at the University School grounds was the day's performance by Godfrey Wenman. Going in at the first wicket, Wenman played a splendid innings of sixty-eight before losing his wicket to Fox. He quickly attacked the bowling and did some fine, hard hitting, including a number of boundary drives in his large score.

Duke and Walker each contributed twenty-one useful runs to the winners' total, and J. Wenman, the only other Incogs' batsmen to reach double figures, put on ten runs.

Cowichan batsmen fared badly against the excellent bowling of Godfrey Wenman, who took seven wickets for seventeen runs. N. Baker, with nineteen, and Thackray, with twenty-one, were the only members of the Up-Island eleven capable of putting on anything like a score.

Green had the best bowling analysis for the Cowichan side, dismissing four Incogs' batsmen for thirty runs.

BURRARDS SCORE WIN

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., July 13 (CP)—Burrards handed Richmond Farmers a 17-8 defeat in an Inter-City Box Lacrosse League game here tonight.

Play was fairly even for the first three periods, with Burrards having a 9-7 edge, but they pushed in eight goals to one for Richmond in the final session.

WHOLE AND ENTIRE

Rosa was getting acquainted with a little girl who had just moved into the street. "Have you any brothers or sisters?" she asked.

"Oh, yes," replied the little girl, "I have three half-brothers and a half-sister."

"Goodness!" said Rosa. "Are you the only whole one in your family!"

Captured Honors at Speedboat Regatta

Power boats from many Ontario and United States points raced over the waters of Lake Scugog off Port Perry, Ont., recently in events sponsored by the Lions Club, assisted by the Businessmen's Association to raise funds for the I.O.D.E. war work committee. The crowd gasped when David Foreman, Buffalo, hit speeds well over eighty miles an hour to win the "free for all." Foreman and his wife are shown left) on Eaglet III, fastest boat in the regatta. A special event was held for outboard motor boats, and F. A. Hooey (right), Toronto, and Caesarea took time out from the air force to win it in "Florence," owned by H. J. Chown. A large crowd watched the events from the shore and from boats.

Heavy Schedule Facing Ball Squads This Week

Twenty-Seven Fixtures Listed by Officials of Lower Island Softball Association—Third Berth In the Senior Loop Is at Stake

Clubs in the Lower Island Softball Association will wind up sectional play this week and then clear decks for the championship play-offs, Alf Longley, assistant secretary, announced yesterday in releasing the schedule for the week. The heavy fixture list calls for twenty-seven games and with the playing of Friday's tussles another season of league competition will be completed.

Four senior "A" battles are billed but the fourth will only be played if necessary to decide the third club in the play-offs. Victoria Longshoremen and Cameron Lumber have clinched first and second berths, respectively, but Garrison and Brunsdon's Veterans are still waging a keen battle for third position.

The complete schedule follows:

BELIEVE IT OR NOT . . . . . By Ripley

The Petrified Falls of Hierapolis—A wide, foaming cascade hurling itself from a great height and suddenly being changed to stone. The surface of the Petrified Falls is undulating like falling waves of water which have solidified in the act of falling. The best photograph is inadequate to convey an idea of the astonishing spectacle which resembles a waterfall carved in marble, the colorless water becoming white in the act of solidifying. It is the work of a boiling spring flowing from Mount Messogis. Sheep wool dipped into this water is immediately dyed purple.

Inventor of Gunpowder—Berthold Schwarz, of Freiburg, Germany (1310-1384), the monk who invented gunpowder and cast the first cannon (of bronze) for the Venetian government in 1377. These guns were the first cannon ever used in warfare (at the siege of Chioggia in 1379). But when Schwarz asked payment for his services, the Venetian government became irritated and had him put to death.

JACK BRAWN IN TRIUMPH

Captures Tennis Honors at Kelowna by Beating Jim Bardsley

KELOWNA, B.C., July 13 (CP)—Jack Brawn, Vancouver city tennis champion, added the Interior of British Columbia championship to his list of titles today when he defeated his fellow-townsman, Jim Bardsley, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Brawn's cross-court shots and superior steadiness were too much for Bardsley, who staged a game fight. Both players hit the ball hard and displayed the best tennis seen here in years.

Jean Eckhardt and Jocelyn Pease kept the open finals an all-Vancouver affair by pairing to win the ladies' doubles from Caroline Deacon, of Vancouver, singles champion, and Mrs. C. Brunette, of Kelowna. Scores were 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

In the mixed doubles handicap final, C. Shirreff and Miss Helen Edwards, of Kelowna, beat Neal, of Trail, and Miss J. Averfield, of Kelowna, 6-2, 6-3.

Miss Haverfield won the ladies' consolation singles from Mrs. G. Meikle, of Kamloops, 6-0, 6-3.

After taking the first two sets and appearing to be well on their way to victory, Jim Bardsley and Jack Ritchie dropped the men's doubles crown to Jack Brawn and Tommy Berto in an All-Vancouver final.

Brawn and Berto won by scores of 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3.

Brawn and Jean Eckhardt dropped the mixed doubles title final to Bardsley and Jocelyn Pease. Bardsley and Miss Pease won by scores of 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Brawn was visibly tired after his successful appearance in the singles and the men's doubles final earlier.

CHAMPIONS SET-BACK LOCAL ELEVEN, 2-0; FACE NORTH SHORE

Vancouver Soccer Squad Puts Victoria Out of Province Cup Series—Johnny McKay and Hap Smith Net Goals—Islanders Strong in The Second Half—Barnes Stars

VANCOUVER, July 13 (CP).—Victoria United was eliminated from the semi-finals of the Province Cup today, when blanked, 2-0, by Vancouver Radials, Dominion soccer champions.

Johnny McKay, of Radials, scored the first goal three minutes before half-time, and Hap Smith sank another counter five minutes after play resumed.

Radials dominated the play in the first half and missed a series of golden opportunities to run up a score. In the first few minutes, a hurried shot by Hap Smith missed the open Victoria net. Then Greer shot wide, with Moss out of the Island goal.

Reg Liptrot drove a hard shot as the attack again was carried into Victoria territory. The ball struck the crossbar but bounced back into play again. Don Cowan lofted a high one and Moss ran out of his goal, but missed the ball. The sphere bounced behind the goalie, but cleared the bar and landed behind the Victoria cage.

McKAY SCORES

After forty minutes of play, Hap Smith passed to McKay from a scramble in front of the Victoria net. The latter lobbed the sphere in, giving Moss no chance to save.

After five minutes of the second half, Hap Smith took a pass from Don Cowan and scored the second goal of the game for Radials. His angle shot had the Victoria goalie badly beaten.

The Islanders came back strong and the greater part of the second half found the Radials on the defensive. Twice the Victorians all but scored as they carried the play in close, but Cowan and McKibbin covered up twice for Strong when he was beaten, by kicking the ball out of the goal.

Line-ups:

Radials—Stan Strong; Smith and T. McKibbin; Wes Henderson, E. Camp and Don Cowan, Jack Johnson, John McKay, Hap Smith, Hugh Greer and Reg Liptrot. Sub N. Kerfoot.

Victoria—Bob Moss; A. Wilkinson and R. Bell; H. Sage, Glen Robbins and Roy Barnes; Gordon Hope, Cliff Robbins, Jimmy Worswick, Noel Morgan and Ralph Cosier.

BUDDY WARD AND VICTOR REACH FINAL

MINNEAPOLIS, July 13 (AP).—George Victor, of Chicago, a comparative unknown, and Bud Ward, of Spokane, national amateur champion, flashed into the finals of the forty-first annual Western amateur tournament at the Minneapolis Golf Club today.

Victor, a twenty-two-year-old youth whose only other claim to prominence was that he once won the Chicago district junior title, spilled Jim Ferrier, of Sydney, Australia, amateur and open champion in that country, 1 up, in a tight thirty-six-hole match.

Ward had a much easier time in blasting out an 8 and 7 triumph over Harry Todd, of Dallas, largely by reason of some deadly iron play to the greens which left him many times in position to putt for birdies.

For both Todd and Ferrier, the defeated, it was a case of losing largely by reason of inability to sink short putts. Ferrier, co-medalist of the tournament, had run a string of six consecutive rounds in the tournament under par until in the afternoon eighteen holes when he needed a medal of 74 strokes. Todd made a miserable showing on the greens throughout his match and particularly during the afternoon round.

EASY VICTORY

Ward equaled par 72 on his morning eighteen holes, his iron play having Todd at a continual disadvantage, the latter taking a 75 to be three down. After the intermission Ward came out to end the match in a hurry and succeeded. He won four of the first five holes, three by birdies, to go 7 up and maintained that lead through twenty-seven holes. For the first nine of the afternoon Ward had a two under par 33, to Todd's 37.

Ward also won the twenty-eighth with a par three when Todd needed a four by reason of being in a trap and over the green with his out, and the match ended on the twenty-ninth when they halved in bogie fives.

Victor's upset victory was best figured out by Ferrier himself who revealed that the Chicagoan had four one-putt greens during the day, and for the thirty-six holes used only a total of fifty-eight putts.

NOTES ON J.B.A.A.

By STROKE

The crews eased off and took things light this past week—a rest they undoubtedly deserved after the July 1 races. The members are now settling down to a long grind of good heavy training for the August 3 regatta, which will be the highlight of the season. All crews are in great shape and should be at their peak by the time this meet rolls around.

The club lost another promising young oarsman in Lew Beasley, who rowed bow in the junior four which won against Vancouver on July 1. Beasley left last week to join the Navy. Although the club may have lost a few of its members, there are new ones joining up, such as "Dusty" Mair, who may turn out in a singles boat for the remainder of the season. Bob Mair, by the way is doing a swell job in the junior four.

It is understood that equipment is being purchased for a gymnasium, which will probably be in the upper part of the clubhouse and will be open to any members who wish to come down. The gym floor will be lined off for badminton and one or two ping pong tables will be erected.

The oarsmen broke training last week to take time off for a bean feed which was held at the clubhouse. Norm Edmonds and Len Bland, members of the 160-pound novice crew having appetites like oarsmen, which it is not sure that they are (as yet), seemed to consume more than anyone else.

The cost of shipping an eight-shell to Shawnigan Lake is being looked into, although there is nothing definite as yet, due to the fact that Coach Dan Moses is not certain as to whether a crew can be assembled in time for the coming meet. However, everything is being done to stage an eight-oared race in the coming regatta and if this event does take place it will no doubt be the major attraction.

CINCY REDS AND DODGERS SPLIT DOUBLE-HEADER

Curt Davis Halts Losing Streak of Brooklyn's Squad

Former Cardinal Pitcher Beats Reds in Second Game After Dodgers Had Lost Four Straight—Newsom Wins Thirteenth Successive Game—DiMaggio Hits Three Homers

By The Canadian Press

The first-place Cleveland Indians swept a three-game series from the Athletics yesterday, taking advantage of five Philadelphia misplays to win 6-4.

Four of the errors came in the eighth and ninth innings and Ken Keltner and Lou Boudreau promptly followed them up with singles that shattered a 4-4 tie.

Connie Mack and his son, Roy, were honored before the game by the American Legion for their interest in Legion baseball. Five players, Hal Wagner, Johnny Babich and Laurence Davis, of the A's, and Bob Feller and Boudreau, of Cleveland, were awarded plaques by the Legionnaires.

Buck Newsom's thirteenth successive victory featured Detroit's sweep of a double-header with Washington. The burly right-hander checked the Senators with two hits in the nightcap to win, 4-0, after the Tigers had taken the first game, 4-3.

NEARING RECORD

Newsom, in nearing the American League record of sixteen consecutive triumphs, held jointly by Joe Wood, Walter Johnson, Lefty Grove and Schoolboy Rowe, had a no-hit game in his grasp until the seventh inning. After walking Buddy Lewis in the first inning, Newsom retired sixteen Senators in order before walking George Case with two out in the sixth. Gerald Walker's single through the box, leading off in the seventh inning, wrecked Buck's hopes of a no-hitter.

The thunder in the Yankee bats that made a wreck out of the American League last year broke forth again and submerged the St. Louis Browns by 10-4 and 12-6.

Joe DiMaggio was the most potent puncher, slamming out a pair of homers in the first game and another in the second. The losses were Nos. 9 and 10 in a row for the Brownies.

The Chicago White Sox blanked the Boston Red Sox in both ends of a double-header today, Ted Lyons capturing the first game, 5-0, and the nightcap behind the two-hit pitching of big Jack Knott.

DAVIS HALTS REDS

Curt Davis broke the Brooklyn Dodgers' four-game losing streak—and the Cincinnati Reds' hearts—when he hurled the Brooks to a 3-1 victory in the second game of a double-header. The Reds had run the Dodgers' losing streak to four straight with a 7-6 victory in the opening game. The split enabled the Dodgers to remain one and a half games back of the National League leaders.

The St. Louis Cardinals pulled a pair of "photo finishes" to clip the New York Giants in both ends of a double-header, 7-6 and 4-3. The Cards broke a six-game losing streak by pushing over the winning run in the ninth inning, in each game.

Manuel Salvo, the lanky Boston right-hander obtained from the New York Giants last month, pitched his second straight shutout and fourth victory as the Bees defeated the erratic Chicago Cubs, 5-0, before 5,760 spectators.

The Pittsburgh Pirates staged a three-run rally in the eighth inning to edge out the Phillies, 9-8, in a free-hitting game before a slim Saturday crowd of 2,476.

KEEN PLAY IN TABLE TENNIS

Close Matches Feature of Last Week's Play in Local League

Close matches featured last week's table tennis play, with the leading teams the victors. Oaklands Hornets nosed out the V.H.S. Alumni, 9-7, in a grand match, to hold their three-point lead over the second-place Young's Cafe. Lawrie Greenwood was best for the Hornets, and Browne-Cave for the V.H.S. Alumni.

Young's Cafe increased their second-place margin to four points over the "K" Boys, by defeating them, 10-6. Ray Dawson won four games for the losers, while D. Robinson and Peebles were best for the cafemen, scoring three games each.

Hi-Way Supers defeated the Aces, 10-6, to gain a tie for fourth place with the V.H.S. Alumni. Aces are in last place. Dick Hudson was best for the Supers, with four wins. A. Downham and Ray Harper were tops for the losers.

With the schedule of matches half played, all teams entered feel that the handicap league is proving very successful. Almost every match has been exciting and close, with many draws being scored.

The individual league averages show that few players have been able to do better than "break even" on their matches. Lawrie Greenwood, with minus twenty-one handicap, tops the averages, while Winston Robinson, of Young's Cafe, is next. W. Browne-Cave, with minus twenty-one, is third.

At a meeting of the league committee, it was decided to raise the maximum minus handicap from minus twenty-one to minus twenty-five. Browne-Cave and L. Greenwood are the only players to be affected by this ruling to date. The handicaps of W. Cotton, Ray Dawson, Vic Tully and Tom Chattell may also be stiffened by this ruling.

The committee also announced that the first four teams are eligible for the play-offs.

Standings in the league to date:

	W.	L.	D	Pt.
Oaklands Hornets	8	1	1	17
Young's Cafe	7	3	0	14
"K" Boys	4	4	2	10
V.H.S. Alumni	3	5	2	8
Hi-Way Supers	3	5	2	8
Aces	1	8	1	3

"K" Boys—Cotton 2, Robinson 0, E. Stewart 0, R. Dawson, Total, 6.

TENPIN BOWLERS' GOLF EVENT SET

All arrangements have been completed by the committee in charge for the first annual tenpin bowling golf tournament a week from today, at the Uplands course. It will be an eighteen-hole medal event under handicap, which means even the best of the duffers have a good chance of winning the main prize. Close to ninety shotmakers of all classes will be teeing off, including such well-known pin-spillers as Art Porter, Ron Wilson and Jack Howell, who claim it will be their first venture at the royal and ancient pastime.

The first foursome will get away at 12:30, and the rest at five-minute intervals. All tenpin bowlers, who have not yet entered, are asked to get in touch with either Jack Angus, Jim Ferguson or George Gurr by tomorrow, as the committee wishes to make the draw by Wednesday at the latest. Others who wish to play are asked to be at the clubhouse at 1 o'clock next Sunday, so arrangements can be made for them. In the evening a supper will be held in the clubhouse, at which the prizes will be presented.

NET TOURNEY AT ESQUIMALT

Play Opens Tomorrow at Hillcrest Tennis Club—Large Entry

Attracting an entry list close to the 200 mark, the annual Esquimalt invitation tennis tournament will get under way tomorrow at the Hillcrest Club courts, Fraser Street. Many of the city's leading netters have entered, and before the 1940 champions are crowned many interesting matches will be witnessed.

Defending champions and others new to tournament play will compete in what has unquestionably become one of the most popular net meets on Vancouver Island.

Tournament officials made it known last night that players wishing to compete in the South Cowichan meet will not be scheduled to play at Esquimalt during the Up-Island tournament.

MONDAY'S DRAW

5:30—W. V. Hicks vs. R. Shanks; J. Wells vs. G. Gray; Mrs. E. Keyes vs. Miss M. Wells.

6:30—N. Smyth vs. R. Wood; A. McVane vs. W. Browne-Cave; G. Browne-Cave vs. J. R. Clarke.

HOSTAK AND ZALE FRIDAY

Pair of Terrific Punchers To Meet This Week for Boxing Title

SEATTLE, July 13 (AP).—Well, let's size up the cast of characters for this impending fifteen-round-or-less-N.B.A. middleweight championship fight to be held here the night of July 19.

First there's the champ, Al Hostak. Known as the savage Seattle Slav, the Georgetown bomber, hostile Hostak. Blond, twenty-three years old, unmarried. Answers queries with "my manager gives out the stories," then giggles like a bashful schoolboy as he is finally coaxed to venture an opinion.

His savagery is confined to the ring, where he's regarded as one of the hardest punchers, pound for pound, that ever tagged a chin. Outside the ropes he's mild as a May morning, and his only apparent worry seems to be a receding hairline.

Next there's Tony Zale. Born Tony Zaleski. Tough, twenty-six-year-old product of the Gary, Ind., steel mills. Yet he, too, is mild as milk toast out of the ring. Handsome, square-jawed, green-eyed blond Polish boy. Comes from a family of fighters. He's the only brother to turn pro in the Zaleski tribe, however. Admits Hostak can punch hard, but insists he can punch harder.

"THE SUN NEVER SETS"

Englishmen are proud of the fact that British territory reaches so well around the globe that there is no hour in the twenty-four during which the sun does not shine on it —"The sun never sets on the English flag."

It was not with the English, however, that this boast originated, less justified in geographical fact though prior claims may have been.

One of the earliest recorded expressions of this idea was in 1590, when Guarini, commenting on the marriage of the Duke of Savoy with Catherine of Austria, referred to "the proud daughter of that monarch to whom when it grows dark (elsewhere) the sun never sets."

Also, the Englishman, Gage, wrote: "It may be said of the Hollanders . . . that the sun never sets on their dominions."

Spain, too, is in this picture through the inquiry of Captain John Smith who asked: "Why should the brave Spanish soldier brag that the sun never sets in the Spanish dominions?"

Schiller, also referring to the Castilian sovereign, quotes Don Karlos, in the German play of that name, "I am called the richest monarch in the Christian world; the sun in my dominions never sets."

And Sir Walter Scott wrote: "The sun never sets on the immense empire of Charles V (King of Spain and Emperor of Germany)."

ENCOURAGING

A young subaltern, being shown around the training quarters by the sergeant-major, came across a group of soldiers talking in a corner.

"What are these men doing?" he asked.

"Oh, swinging the lead," answered the sergeant-major.

"By Jove," exclaimed the subaltern, "beastly heavy work, what? Still this war has to be won." And, waving his hand to the men, he shouted, "Carry on, boys, carry on!"

Victoria Ball Club Comes to Life and Defeats Bremerton

Local Baseballers Turn In Improved Display and Register 4-2 and 10-6 Triumphs in Exhibition Fixtures—Four Double Killings Staged

Displaying a marked improvement over their exhibitions of a week ago, Victoria Baseball Club yesterday took both ends of a double bill from visiting Bremerton ball tossers. Locals won the afternoon fixture, 4-2, and then came back to take the nightcap, 10-6. Played at Royal Athletic Park, the fixtures attracted 700 followers of the diamond pastime.

The afternoon attraction provided the fans with some good baseball, and no less than four double killings were thrown in for good measure. The battle was interesting all of the way, but after Victoria broke a 1-1 deadlock in the fifth frame, the visitors were unable to catch them.

Locals had trouble getting to the slants of Bob Deal, visitors' ace hurler, in the afternoon game and only poked out five safeties, with Barney Barnswell and Ted Maitland grabbing all of the hits. The former had a perfect day at the plate, getting three for three, while the latter hit safely twice out of three attempts.

Jack Blake, speedy fly shagger in the local camp, stole home in the fifth frame for the tying run, and Barney Barnswell came in with Victoria's third marker when Pitcher Deal tossed up a wild pitch with the local runner on the hot corner.

Stan Davies did the heavy work for the locals, and while he was nicked for ten safeties, kept them well scattered. He struck out an even dozen. Patterson worked behind the plate and performed his chores in fine style, certainly looking much better than he did a few weeks ago.

Bremerton scored one run in the second inning on doubles by Bob Deal and McIntyre, and scored their second and final marker in the eighth inning on two singles, a base on balls and a fielder's choice.

Deal, visiting hurler, was nicked for five safeties and fanned a like number.

TAKE NIGHTCAP

Locals ran wild on the sacks in the nightcap, and pounded out fourteen safeties, four more than the visitors collected from the offerings of Lloyd Cann. Critzer and Cann, opposing hurlers, were hit hard at intervals, with Charlie Restell's triple in the sixth being the best hit of the ball game.

Victoria scored two runs in the second session to take a 2-1 lead and were never headed. Visitors kept close to the locals until the seventh frame, but three runs in the seventh and eighth innings put the Victoria club well out in front.

Bremerton kicked the ball around in the evening game, and Victoria made a few bad bobbles, which were responsible for runs. Locals, however, showed plenty of fight and more hustle than they had displayed for some weeks.

Smart bunting caught the visitors asleep a number of times, and the way the locals stole the bags amused the fans.

PENNANT RACE TO CONTINUE

Senior, Second Division and Junior Baseball Nines See Action This Week

HEADING down the home stretch in the senior baseball league pennant race with play-off berths at the end of the trail for three of the four clubs, Eagles, Pitzer & Nex, Navy and Tillicum Athletics will all see action in diamond duels listed this week. Games will be played at Royal Athletic Park, tomorrow, Wednesday and Friday, and when the week's schedule is concluded ball fans may have an insight into the probable play-off nines.

Tillicum Athletics, leading the flag race, return to the Caledonia Avenue ball lot Wednesday evening to oppose the Eagles in what promises to be the highlight of the series. Clubbers defeated the birdmen, 7-2, in their last meeting, and will be out to repeat their earlier success.

Navy ball tossers will tackle the feathered tribe tomorrow evening, and must finish on the right side of the score sheet to improve their play-off chances. And then on Friday, Pitzer & Nex, 1939 champions, sharing third berth with the sailors, will meet in battle the bluejackets.

Second Division baseball nines have only a few games listed before they move into the post-season play-downs with Eagles, Cubs, Navy and Cedar Hill Athletics already assured of berths. However, the race is still keen for actual positions in the final standings, and some keen games should be witnessed during the week.

SENIORS

Monday—Eagles vs. Navy, Royal Athletic Park.

Wednesday — Tillicum Athletics vs. Eagles, Royal Athletic Park.

SECOND DIVISION

JUNIORS

Wednesday—Oak Bay Tigers vs. Tillicum Rainiers, Oak Bay Park.

"AS THE CASE MAY BE"

"What a delightful baby!" said the nervous young curate, visiting a parishioner, "And how old is—er—he, she, or it, as the case may be?" "Just five weeks, sir," replied the proud mother. "Well, well!" said the curate helpfully. "Your youngest, I suppose?"

ELEANOR YOUNG AND McDIARMID NET WINNERS

Vancouver Star In Straight Set Victory in East

Captures Women's Singles Tennis Title of Dominion by Downing Jean Milne, 7-5, 7-5—McDiarmid Defeats Duff in Three Sets—Mainland Girls Show Up Well

By JACK MITCHELL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC, July 13 (CP)—Eleanor Young and Jean Milne, top-ranking Dominion net stars from Vancouver, completely dominated women's finals in the Canadian tennis championships today, with Miss Young capturing the singles crown and the pair gaining shares in two other titles.

The brown-haired Eleanor, first in Dominion rankings, defeated her city mate in straight sets for the singles victory. Paired in the doubles, the Vancouver duo lost only five games in gaining the title over Mrs. Rene Bolte and Francoise Lacasse of Montreal.

In the mixed doubles, which Miss Young won last year paired with Bill Pedlar, of Vancouver, Miss Milne combined with Montreal's Phil Pearson to wrest the title from the hard-hitting Miss Young, who teamed with Roger Durivage, of Montreal, this year.

Other titles decided today went to Don McDiarmid, of Ottawa, in the men's singles; Phil Pearson and Toronto's Ross Wilson in the men's doubles, and Walter Driver, of El Paso, Texas, in the junior men's singles. The junior women's singles title was won by Claire Renehaw, of Montreal, yesterday.

EXTRA-SET BATTLES

In the all-Vancouver women's singles final, Miss Young was extended to extra games in both sets. Showing more powerful stroking than the second ranking Miss Milne, she captured the first set, 7-5, after a hard tussle and repeated by an identical score in the next.

In the first game, Miss Young broke through her opponent's service with the games at five-all and then lost one point in taking the next game and the set. The second set proved almost a repetition of the first, with Miss Young again breaking through service in the eleventh game and winning out in the next.

Pairing in the doubles, they defeated the Montreal team of Mrs. Bolte and Miss Lacasse, 6-3, 6-2. In the first set they ran up an easy 5-2 lead, and then took the victory after spotting their opponents one more game.

The final set was won even more easily than the first, with the Vancouver duo getting five straight games before yielding two to their opponents. They concluded the match on the next game.

Miss Milne and the former Davis Cup player, Pearson, rallied to defeat Miss Young and Durivage in the mixed doubles, after spotting their opponents the first set. The Young-Durivage duo captured the opening set, 6-2, but Miss Milne and Pearson gained the next two, 6-3, 6-2.

WINS MEN'S TITLE

The lithe Ottawa McDiarmid took the singles crown with a straight-set victory over Lewis Duff, of Montreal, who had upset, Toronto's Ross Wilson in a semi-final round. Third-ranking player in the Dominion, he ran off the first set, 6-1, over the sixth-ranking Duff.

In the next set, Duff provided stronger opposition and went into a 3-2 lead. Playing steadily and flawlessly, however, McDiarmid came from behind to take the set at 7-5 and then polished off his opponent with the loss of only two games in the final set.

Pairing in the men's doubles, the singles finalists—Duff and McDiarmid—were defeated by Wilson and Pearson, both former members of Canadian Davis Cup teams.

The Pearson-Wilson team was extended for an 11-9 victory in the opening set, but won the next two easily, 6-3, 6-3.

In the final of the veterans' singles, Alphonse Gingras, of Quebec, defeated Olivier Dupont, of Montreal, 6-3, 6-4. Titles in the divisions for boys and girls under fifteen years were decided earlier in the week, with Jack Geller, of New Rochelle, N.Y., winning the boys' singles and Noreen Haney, of Drummondville, Que., taking the girls'.

BILL GAYLOR PILOTS CAR TO VICTORY

Portland Driver Shows Great Speed at Langford Racing Oval

Skyrocketing around the Langford oval in the most scorching thirty-lap main event ever seen at the popular speedway, Bill Gaylor, of Portland, earned the checkered flag in the time of 9.40 2-5 last night. At the wheel of Lou McMurtry's speedy No. 6 job, Gaylor almost overtook the second and third-place winners, "Buddy" Green in No. 23, and "Chick" Barbo, who was driving Miss Dorothy Grifman's trim wagon.

While it was Gaylor, who started on the pole position, all the way, the other drivers, nevertheless, put on a thrilling demonstration.

A little rough calculation showed that the Portland ace averaged a shade over nineteen seconds a lap throughout the gruelling grind. He also knocked more than a minute off the usual time for the event.

Green and Barbo went through an exhibition that had the packed stands literally standing on their heads. Time after time Barbo pulled abreast of Green in the back straightaway, nosed out in front and then went wide on the north turn. Each time the Victoria boy clung doggedly to second spot and slid through in front of the Seattle pilot. He finished two lengths in front of Barbo with Digger Caldwell roaring into fourth place, followed by Gerry Vantreight, Ralph Thomas, Tacoma, and Claude Walling, who developed motor trouble about the fifteenth lap after almost squeezing into third spot.

OPENS BIG LEAD

Green started on the outside of the first row with Spaulding and Barbo in the second row. By the sixth lap Gaylor had opened a big lead and the other drivers were battling for position far behind. On the thirteenth circuit he led by a full straightaway and Walling, who had come up from seventh position, was pressing Barbo for show place.

By the eighteenth Gaylor had lapped the last car, Thomas, twice and Green and Barbo were driving neck and neck. As the twenty-seventh circuit was completed Thomas was lapped three times by the leading car and "Buddy" was still holding Barbo off.

Seth Renning, who broke an oil line in one of the later heats, won the three-lap helmet dash and received a special gold cup, donated by Miss Gruman, popularly known as "The Duchess." Green was second and Walling, third.

Gaylor copped the first heat dash with Green again second, and Walling third. Gaylor started in third place, but soon worked his way to the top in the five-lap sprint.

Walling held the pole position closely followed by Spaulding and Barbo. "Chick" came through in the throughout in the second heat dash third heat event Caldwell won place honors and Vantreight earned show money.

Vanlright took the first match race from Ralph Taylor and Barbo bested Walling in a similar race over five laps. Harry Mitchell, in an Austin 7, won the stock car race.

Umpire Lucky to Avoid Injury

Joe Vosmik, of the Dodgers, evidently tried to take his spleen out on Umpire Reardon when he was called out at the plate as he tried to score, after he had tripled in a Dodger-Giant tilt recently. In the above the fiery Brooklyn outfielder is shown carrying his snike-first slide right into the hapless arbiter, who was lucky to avoid injury. Brooklyn eventually won in the ninth, 7 to 3, scoring six runs.

ESTABLISHES NEW RECORD FOR CANADA

Jack Marshall Shatters Swim Mark at Dominion Title Event

VERDUN, Que., July 13 (CP)—The depth of Verdun's new municipal swimming pool and the lowness of the turning walls were credited generally tonight with having prevented a few more records being broken in the 1940 Dominion swimming championships.

Big Jack Marshall, of Peterborough, Ont., was the only swimmer able to better marks set up in previous years. He won the 200-yard breast stroke for senior men in 2.33.4.

The only other time comparing with Marshall's was made Friday night by sixteen-year-old Irene Barr, of Hamilton, who swam her heat in the 100-yard free style for senior women in 1.04.2. The time bettered her own junior mark of 1.04.5, but it was not set up as a junior record since it was made in a senior event.

Today the sensational young Hamilton speedster slowed down and failed to get better than third place. In the final of the event she was beaten by Kay Gordon and Margaret Taggart, Winnipeg girls, who placed first and second. Miss Gordon's time was 1.05.2. Irene was the 100-yard free style for junior women in 1.06.2, coming in ahead of two other Hamilton girls, Bernice Belbeck and Margaret Cox. She was second in the 200-yard free style senior behind Dorothy Hobson, of Toronto, and ahead of Ethel Gilbert of Winnipeg.

TIMES SLOWER

Like the women's events, the men's speed races were considerably slower than the record tinie. Jack McCormick, of Hamilton, won the 100-yard senior free style in :58.2, five seconds slower than the record. Ted St. Aubin, of Hamilton, won the 440-yard senior free style in 5:31.4, compared with the record time of 4.48.7.

Results follow:

100 Yards free style, senior women, final—1, Katharine Gordon, Winnipeg, 1.05.2; 2, Margaret Taggart, Winnipeg; 3, Irene Barr, Hamilton, Ont.

200 Yards free style, senior women, final—1, Dorothy Hobson, Toronto; 2, Irene Barr, Hamilton; 3, Thelma Gilbert, Winnipeg. Time, 2.29.6.

GOY HEADS GOLF FIELD

Captures Top Honors in Annual Club Tournament At Uplands Course

Finishing the eighteen-hole medal grind with a card of 81-16—65, George Goy paced the largest field in the history of the eleventh annual Plumbing and Heating Trades Association golf tournament, yesterday afternoon, at the Uplands course to capture top honors. E. Badminton was the runner-up with a score of 83-16—67 and F. Butcher was next on the list with 93-24—69. In the net 71 slot was R. Holt, who shot a gross 101 and had a thirty handicap.

R. Farrow, A. Martin, R. Randall, H. Gandy and A. Morgan all had net 72's, the latter having the best round of the day, a well-played 80. Following the tournament, the competitors attended a supper in the clubhouse at which the prizes were presented.

Marked by another sterling performance on the part of Spencer Tracy, who again demonstrates the fact that he is Hollywood's leading actor, "Edison, the Man" opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

As Thomas Edison, Tracy has a role that fits him like a glove. This is becoming a trite but true description of Tracy's screen work, for it is difficult to remember a role that Tracy hasn't made fit him whether it is the kindly Father Flanagan or the super-man Major Rogers. Tracy gives Edison a sincere and deep understanding that brings out the real greatness, the down-to-earth humanness and the sparkling sense of humor of the celebrated American inventor.

The story itself is so filled with real drama that it is almost unbelievable that all of it actually could have happened in the life of one man. Truth, it is proved again, is really much stranger than fiction. Although audiences remember the beloved Edison as he was in later years, this story is of the inventor as a young man—a man who is a youthful genius because he was only thirty when he invented the phonograph and thirty-two when he achieved the electric light. Tracy does a few brief scenes as Edison as we remember him—at eighty-two—but the body of the story is of a young man's career.

FILM VERSION OF STAGE HIT HERE

"French Without Tears" Stars Ray Milland and Ellen Drew—at Atlas Monday

"French Without Tears," English-made film version of the stage success, opening Monday at the Atlas Theatre, was the first picture to "crack the blackout" with a long run in London.

Starring Ray Milland and Ellen Drew, its appeal to London audiences must have been great, for it tells a gay story in which a feminine huffiness Ellen Drew is turned loose in a school where a half dozen young men are studying French to enter the diplomatic service.

TO BLOCK INLET

HONGKONG, July 13 (CP) — The Japanese navy dispatched a dozen officers to Kwangchowan, French-leased port midway between Hongkong and French Indo-China, yesterday to block the remaining French-controlled inlet for trade destined for China.

Veterans to Meet

The finance committee of Victoria Unit, No. 12, Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, will meet in the clubrooms at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night, followed by the executive at 8 o'clock. The regular quarterly meeting of members will be held in the auditorium at 8 o'clock Thursday night. Reports of the provincial quarterly meeting held at Ladysmith yesterday will be submitted.

Realistic Jail Break in Story of "Johnny Apollo"

What is said to be the most daringly realistic jailbreak ever shown on a screen provides the breath-taking climax of "Johnny Apollo," the new 20th Century-Fox drama, starring Tyrone Power and Dorothy Lamour, which is now showing at the Dominion Theatre.

But then realism is the keynote of this thrilling picture, which tells in terms of bite and dynamite, the story of the banker's son who turned from college man to mobster when the father he idolized was sent to prison and his wealthy friends turned against him.

Tyrone is seen as "Johnny Apollo," while Dorothy Lamour has her best role to date as "Lucky" Dubarry, the sophisticated night club entertainer, who walks out on her gangster boy friend, Mickey Dwyer, when Apollo walks into the picture. Edward Arnold is the banker father.

Lloyd Nolan plays Dwyer and others selected by production chief Darryl F. Zanuck for important featured roles are Charley Grapewin, who is cast as a tippling ex-judge turned underworld lawyer, and Lionel Atwill.

ATTITUDE IN U.S. CHANGES

Recent Events in Europe Bring New Outlook on World Affairs

NEW YORK, July 13 (CP)—Rotund and jovial, a bus passenger bound for the subway-head at Flushing swayed on the strap and remarked to the driver: "He'll get his fill if he comes over here," and added a bit, ruefully, "Likely we'll get a fill too."

He was speaking of Adolf Hitler, and in many ways his comment reflects the present attitude of the United States toward the days ahead. The fungus of mere interested sympathy that crusted this country was scraped away sharply by the invasion of Scandinavia and The Lowlands. For a time its raw skin shivered in sometime a bit like hysteria.

Now, since the collapse of France and the imminence of Hitler's war against Great Britain alone, the United States is toughening its hide to hand out a bigger fill than it gets. For they are few who would give odds against attempted conquest on the American continent if Great Britain's guard should fall.

EXPANSION IS APPROVED

The great mass of public opinion in the United States applauds vast plans for naval and military expansion now taking shape in blue print and legislative enactment. These are the tangible evidence of United States reaction to the Hitler threat.

In brief they call for: Construction of a navy equal to any possible hostile combination; a potential wartime army of 1,200,000 fully equipped, with reserve equipment for another 800,000 if needed; gearing of industry to produce the necessary military supplies; immediate production of 19,000 army and navy planes to give the nation a combined air force of 36,000 planes by a year from this Fall; some form of compulsory service.

DEBT LIMIT RAISED

To pay for this the public debt limit has been raised. And there is no complaining at the extra cent on a can of beer, on two packages of cigarettes, on an hour at a newsreel, payable under the new defence tax.

There is some political bickering of course, some survival of the old isolationist idea, but in the main the parties are united on fundamentals. President Roosevelt's declaration that no aggressive war is contemplated spiked considerable "war party" talk. Criticism that followed the appointment of two Republicans, Colonel Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson, as Secretary of the Navy and Secretary for War, seems to the layman to have died down. Both Knox and Stimson are advocates of the fullest possible aid to Great Britain, short of sending an expeditionary force.

DEFENCE OF CANADA

When an American talks defence he means the western hemisphere. He is not worrying about Canada particularly, because Canada is already well on the way of looking after herself in collaboration with the Mother Country, though, in the words of The Chicago Tribune, "The American people have long accepted the proposition that the United States will resist an invasion of Canada as quickly and vigorously as it would an attack on its own territory." The Tribune was advocating a military alliance between Canada and the United States, partly because it viewed them as the only two American countries "with a demonstrated capacity for waging modern warfare."

Probably a combination of friendliness and the instinct for self-preservation was reflected in a recent poll of public opinion that showed 53 per cent of Americans willing to volunteer for service in the event of an invasion of Canada.

NAZI INFLUENCE FEARED

But the United States definitely is worrying about the Nazi influence in Mexico and in Central and South America, where entrancing visions of export trade have long been held out by the agents of the Hitler Reich. In June a United States cruiser called at Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo. They were routine visits but they coincided with talk of increased German underground activity south of the equator.

At the conference of Foreign Ministers of the twenty-one republics called for Havana on July 20, at the instance of the United States State Department, common hemisphere defence undoubtedly will be discussed as well as plans for international co-operative handling of American export staples.

Aid for Great Britain picks up space. Planes—only the authorities know how many—have been released by the navy to manufacturers for resale to Great Britain, as have stores of military equipment, munitions and artillery. The British Purchasing Commission has taken over French contracts standing on the order sheets when France fell. Thousands of United States homes will be open if the stream of refugee children increases and continues. Organizations have been set up to look after that.

PLAZA TO OFFER SAGA OF NORTH

"Call of the Wild" Is Filmization Of Jack London's Classic Here Tomorrow

"Call of the Wild" is no misnomer for 20th Century's filmization of Jack London's famous classic of the Klondike gold rush of 1897, which opens tomorrow at the Plaza Theatre, with Clark Gable, Loretta Young and Jack Oakie in its leading roles.

A story of unbridled romance which recognizes only Nature's laws, it is a literal interpretation of "the call of the wild," and Daryl Zanuck, who produced the stirring saga of the last of our great frontiers has invested the original text with a dramatic love story.

ERROL FLYNN IN ADVENTURE STORY

Plays Title Role in "The Adventures Of Robin Hood" Which Is Coming to Rio

"The Adventures of Robin Hood," a Warner Bros. Technicolor production, will open tomorrow at the Rio Theatre. Heralded by critics and audiences who have previewed it in Hollywood as the outstanding adventure film of all time, it stars Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland.

Directed by Michael Curtiz and William Keighley, this version of the famous outlaw's adventures, was filmed in the new soft-tint Technicolor, and was written by Norman Reilly Raine.

Academy Award Winner Has Important Role in Film "Stanley And Livingstone"

Starred with him are Nancy Kelly and Richard Greene in the romantic roles, heading an outstanding cast which includes Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke (as Livingstone), Henry Hull and Henry Travers.

LORD BEAVERBROOK REPLIES TO CRITICS OF ALUMINUM PLEA

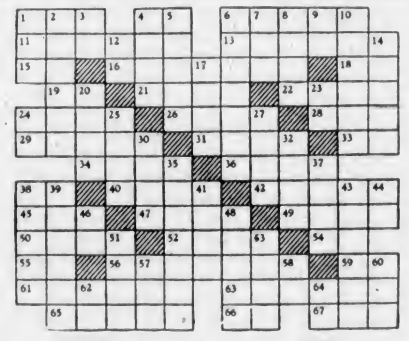

LONDON, July 13 (CP) — Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, today chose the correspondence column of The Times as his forum to answer criticism of his appeal for gifts of aluminum. The critics argued ample stocks of aluminum, and pots and pans, could be taken from the shops by the Government.

The publisher of The Daily Express said scrap is not wanted as it is mostly inferior quality metal, whereas the Government wants rolled aluminum, which is why it seeks pots. It would cost too much to take them from shops for the small results achieved. Moreover, no aluminum for making pots has been issued since the war started, so shop stocks must be low. If the Government were to requisition such stocks, it would be against the spirit of the appeal for voluntary sacrifice.

WAITING FOR ICE TO CLEAR

AKLAVIK, N.W.T., July 13 (CP)—Archbishop G. Breynat, Roman Catholic vicar apostolic of Mackenzie, is waiting here until ice clears to permit him to carry on safely his Summer visit to all his missions in the Northwest and the Arctic. He makes the trip in his Bellanca plane Santa Maria.

ANSWER TO LAST PUZZLE

INDEPENDENT OF OUTSIDE SOURCES

Canadian Factories Being Equipped To Manufacture All Country's Munition Needs

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP)—Industrial developments now taking shape under the direction of the Department of Munitions and Supply are designed to make Canada independent of all outside sources for weapons and munitions of war.

As rapidly as possible Canadian factories are being whipped into shape to produce every fighting weapon from the service rifle to the giant coastal defence and naval guns which hurl shells weighing hundreds of pounds.

A high authority indicated the industrial mobilization powers vested in the Government and the Department of Munitions and Supply in particular, are being used to bring a full-fledged armament industry into being.

Soon after war started, apart from one plant working on production of Bren light machine guns, and another preparing to make field guns, there were no facilities for manufacture of arms.

Now arrangements are being made to produce every weapon required by the fighting services as well as projectiles used. These arrangements include doubling of the capacity of the Bren gun plant and establishment of other small arms plants for the manufacture of service rifles, an enlarged programme at a gun factory which has been working for some time on 25-pounder guns for the British Government, and establishment of other plants in different parts of the country.

Operatic Society To Close Season

Final operatic presentations of the Victoria Grand Opera Association for this season will take place on Friday and Saturday next, July 19 and 20, at the clubrooms, 1753 Rockland Avenue, when scenes from Wagner's "Lohengrin" will be featured in Part II of "Cavalcade of Opera."

Dorothy Parsons, popular soprano, will take the part of "Elsa"; Ralph Fremson will be heard in the title role, Vivian McCahill will sing the part of Ortrud, and Arthur Jackman will take the baritone lead of Frederick. Mr. Basil Horsfall is the musical director and special scenery has been designed by Hope Large. Marjorie Barker has created new costumes, and Horace Culver is to be in charge of stage and lighting effects.

After the performance refreshments will be served. Tickets may be obtained from any member or at the door.

FINANCE - COMMERCE - MARKETS

Timid Brokers in New York Mart Do Little Trading

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP).—In one of the slowest half-dozen sessions of the past two years, the Stock Market today staggered out of a foggy week without displaying any real sense of direction.

Brokers again blamed the do-nothing attitude of speculative forces on the desire to await the outcome of next week's national Democratic convention.

It was notable, however, that while buyers generally gave the market a wide berth, sellers were equally timid.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was unchanged at 41 and, on the week, was off .2. The composite also held at dead centre on the preceding Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. It slipped .1 Monday and as much Friday. Out of 1,233 listed issues only 371 changed hands today. Of these, 126 were up, 102 down and 143 at where they finished Friday.

Transfers of 124,030 shares, while one of the lowest since 1918, actually touched a new bottom since July 8, 1939. The volume last Saturday was 131,879 shares.

Among the day's minor gainers were General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, United Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Homestake Mining, American Telephone and North American.

Bonds were generally steady Saturday with most changes in small fractions.

German 5 1-2's of 1965 were off 1-8 at 16 and German 7's of 1949 were behind 1-4 at 21 1-4. Italy 7's were up 1 point at 51 1-4.

United States Government's were down 7-32 to up 6-32 of a point.

STOCKS RISE IN MONTREAL MART

Bell Telephone gained 2½ points to 145, Brazilian advanced ⅛ while Montreal Power and Shawinigan held steady. Price Brothers advanced 1¼.

Senior oils lacked support and Imperial and International Petroleum backed ⅛ each. A new surpass had an upward adjustment of a point to 10.

WHEAT FUTURES REFUSE TO BUDGE

WINNIPEG, July 13 (CP).—In extremely dull trading, wheat futures on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange Saturday clung to minimum levels. It was the third consecutive week of trading that values refused to budge from their pegs.

No news of market importance appeared and traders ignored the pit for lengthy periods. At the close July was still selling at 71⅝ cents a bushel, October 73⅝ and December 74⅝.

No demand appeared from overseas purchasers.

Chicago closed unchanged to ½ higher. Buenos Aires was ¼ to ⅜ cent lower.

Interest in cash wheat swung to No. 2 Northern but only small buying occurred. Some lower grades, including Garnet and Durums, also were purchased sparingly.

Barley and oats were the active grains in the coarse market where prices held unchanged.

MONTREAL, July 13 (CP).—Silver futures closed unchanged today. No sales. Bid: July, 37.75.

MOSTLY GAINS IN TORONTO MARKET

TORONTO, July 13 (CP).—More gains than losses were registered on the Toronto Exchange in the final session of the week.

Senior oils came out in sizeable volume and a few of the cheaper western oils moved in quantity. Davies Petroleum traded steady at 14 and Home Oil was in demand at 1.55, up 4 cents from Friday's close.

Minor index gains were netted by both mining groups and the industrials. Utilities led the recovery with gains of a point for Bell Telephone, Consumers Gas and Gatineau Power preferred. Foods leaned to the down side and the steels and papers were steady and quiet.

Kerr-Addison firmed 6 cents to 1.81. Bralorne was up 13 cents to 7.85 for broken lots.

RED CROSS HAS MORE RECEIPTS

Cash Donations to Victoria Branch in June Show Big Increase

Cash receipts of the Victoria Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society for June showed a marked increase over those of recent months. No special appeal was in progress and the whole amount received, $18,199.47, was unsolicited.

This total included gifts of the cost of five complete ambulances, representing $8,750. Other cash subscriptions to general funds received directly at the office amounted to $5,498.70. Subsidiary units turned in $1,760.68, most of which was raised by garden parties and other fund-raising events. From similar sources, $245.74 was paid direct to the branch office. The Superfluities Store contributed $500 on account of May profits. Cash contributions to material showers amounted to $1,353.23. "Vicky," the dog, collected $83.87.

A cheque for $2,338.03 was forwarded to the British Columbia Division on account of May receipts. The normal peacetime relief work cost $224.18. Cash purchases of materials amounted to $374.57; expenses of administration were $123.56. Since July 1 a cheque for $16,775.65 has been sent to the British Columbia Division office.

WHEAT PROBLEM TO BE DISCUSSED

Western Members of Parliament to Attend Meeting at Ottawa Tomorrow

OTTAWA, July 13 (CP).—Trade Minister MacKinnon has invited all Western members of Parliament interested particularly in the wheat problem to attend a meeting here on Monday, when members of the Canadian Wheat Board and Board of Grain Commissioners will discuss with them the entire situation.

The board members and the commissioners came to Ottawa from Winnipeg this week to assist the Government in making a decision whether to allow trading in wheat to continue in the Winnipeg Grain Exchange after July 31. They held three meetings with Mr. MacKinnon and other members of the wheat committee of the Cabinet yesterday and are spending the week-end in Ottawa preparing memoranda for the Government on every phase of the problem.

It has not been decided whether Monday's meeting with the Western members will be open to the public. Mr. MacKinnon will preside, and the views of the members will be received on the question whether the Wheat Board should be authorized to buy the entire new crop, which will begin to come onto the market next month, or continue the present policy of leaving the exchange open and giving the farmers the options of selling either to the board or in the open market.

ARRIVES IN AMERICA

AN EASTERN CANADIAN PORT, July 13 (CP).—Alexis Leger, Secretary-General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in the late French Government, arrived yesterday at this port from England with other travelers seeking refuge in America. M. Leger, who held the status on an Ambassador of France, is on his way to United States. His visit is a private one, he said.

ORDER DEMOBILIZATION

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Reuter's News Agency reported today in a dispatch from Damascus, Syria, that demobilization of some classes of reservists by the French command in the Near East was ordered in a communique today.

Little Stories for Bedtime

Nanny Meadow Mouse Is Worried

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Nanny Meadow Mouse was worried. Yes, sir, Nanny Meadow Mouse was worried. Nanny is a home body. In the first place most of the time she has a family to care for. There are babies in Nanny's snug little home most of the time. What with helpless babies and headstrong, half-grown children eager to get out in the Great World and show how smart they are, and fully grown children already setting up homes of their own, Nanny has real cause for worry. You see no one knows better than she what a lot of dangers surround a Meadow Mouse and how necessary it is that a young Meadow Mouse who would live to a good old age be carefully trained.

One of the first things to be learned is the foolishness of taking unnecessary risks. The most precious thing anybody possesses is life. To risk this for something which at best is nothing more than pleasure is the most foolish thing in the world. Nanny will risk her own life for her babies any time, but she is far too wise to risk it for any other reason.

"If you lose your life you've lost everything," is a favorite saying of Nanny's, and when you come to think of it, it is exactly so. Sometimes Danny Meadow Mouse laughs at her and tells her that the older she grows the more timid she becomes. That doesn't trouble Nanny at all; she simply smiles and says nothing. She knows it is true, but she also knows that this added timidity is because of increased knowledge of the dangers of the Great World, and that the more timid she is the less likely is she to feel careless. "A Meadow Mouse cannot be too timid," says Nanny, and in that she is more than half right.

Danny Meadow Mouse is different. He doesn't have the care of those babies all the time on his mind as does Nanny. So he has more time to think about himself and the things he wants to do. Then too, the sharp little wits in that funny little head of his have brought him through so many tight places that he has come to think himself quite as smart as anybody else and quite able to take care of himself no matter what happens, which shows that he isn't as wise as Nanny, though it wouldn't do to tell him so.

The day that Danny took it into his head to visit the Smiling Pool had been a very trying one for Nanny. Danny hadn't told her where he was going or that he expected to be gone long. The half-grown children had been very trying that day, for they had persisted in taking foolish risks whenever Nanny's back was turned. They kept her worried. They kept her so worried that she didn't have time to think of Danny. But when the Black Shadows began to creep out over the Green Meadows and Danny had not returned it popped into her head that something dreadful must have happened to him. She began to worry. The later it grew the more she worried.

1 BIRTHS

BENSON—At Royal Jubilee Hospital, on July 11, to Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Benson, 814 Old Esquimalt Road, a son.

PRICE—To Mr. and Mrs. Fred Price (nee Sheila Taylor), at King's Daughters' Hospital, Duncan, on July 11, 1940, a son.

2 DEATHS

MARRIOTT—The death occurred in Vancouver yesterday of Lieut.-Colonel Guy Wilfred Marriott, formerly of Edmonton. Colonel Marriott is survived by his wife and two daughters in Vancouver, one son in Trail and one son in Victoria. Interment will take place in St. John's Church Cemetery, Colwood, at 2.30 p.m. tomorrow.

PEARSON—Suddenly, on Tuesday, July 9, at Kelowna, B.C., Gordon Vandin Pearson, aged eleven years, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peter Leslie Pearson, of 1744 Lee Avenue, Victoria. Besides his parents he is mourned by one brother, Peter, with the Canadian Forces, and a sister, Nancy, at home.
The remains are resting at McCall Bros.' Funeral Home and the funeral will take place on Monday morning at 10.30 o'clock at St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, Ven. Archdeacon A. E. de L. Nunns will officiate, and interment will be in Colwood Rural Park.

WILKIE—On July 11, 1940, in the Comox Hospital, after a short illness, Claude Osmand Wilkie, aged thirty-one years, of H.M.C.S. Armentières. The late Mr. Wilkie was born in Winnipeg, Man., and had resided in the province for the past nineteen years. He leaves to mourn his widow and one son, John, also his mother, Mrs. James Brown, of Parksville, V.I.
The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon, at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church, Esquimalt Road, at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. Arthur Bischlager will officiate and interment will be in the Naval Cemetery. McCall Brothers are in charge.

CHARLTON—There passed away on Friday, July 12, 1940, at the residence, Midgard Avenue, Gordon Head, Robert George Charlton, aged fifty-six years, born in London, England. The late Mr. Charlton resided at Macleod, Alta., for many years before coming to British Columbia two years ago to make his home at Vancouver, and for the past year had resided at Gordon Head. There remain to survive his passing, besides his wife, at the residence, one son, Robert George Charlton, and one daughter, Mrs. E. Weaver, of Macleod, Alta., also one brother, in England.
The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, July 14, at 2 o'clock in the chapel of the Sands Mortuary, Ltd. Rev. F. Pike will officiate, and the remains will be forwarded to Lethbridge, Alta., for interment.

CRANDALL—A large congregation of friends and relatives gathered to pay their last respect to a former resident of Moncton, Mrs. Benjamin P. Crandall, whose funeral took place from Tuttle Brothers' Funeral Parlors, at 3 o'clock, July 1. The large number of floral tributes was evidence of the high esteem in which the deceased had been held. Rev. F. Burton Long, pastor of the Highfield Baptist Church, conducted the services, and the choir of the church supplied the music, with Mrs. R. H. MacRae as organist. The hymns "Abide With Me," "Sometime We'll Understand" and "Rock of Ages" were sung. Members of the Board of Deacons of the Highfield Baptist Church acted as pallbearers. They were Joseph Beck, A. C. Crandall, F. C. Fillmore, D. A. Dernier and A. D. Rouse. Following the service at the chapel, the body was taken to Elmwood Cemetery, where interment was made.

MARTIN—Passed away at the Royal Jubilee Hospital on July 13, after a long illness, Edwin George Martin, aged eighty-one years, a native of Michigan, U.S.A., and a resident of Victoria for six years, a former resident of Trail, B.C. The late Mr. Martin came to the Prairie Provinces as a young man. He took part in the Riel Rebellion and during the Great War was with the 166th Manitoba Rangers and later with the 87th East Kootenay Battalion. He is survived by his widow at the family residence, 100 Burnside Road, and three sons, Edwin George Martin, R.C.A., Victoria, Leslie C. Martin, Rossland, B.C., and John Martin, of Calgary; also two daughters in the United States. He was predeceased by one son, Frederick Martin, who was the architect responsible for the Windsor-Detroit Tunnel.
Funeral service will be held Tuesday, July 16, from the Thomson Funeral Home at 2.30 o'clock, with interment in the Colwood Burial Park. Rev. Alan Gardiner will conduct the service.

SIMPSON—Suddenly, on July 13, at her home, 473 Burnside Road, Mary Elizabeth Simpson, wife of William Simpson, aged seventy-four years. Mrs. Simpson was born at Parsons Bridge, Craigflower Road, and was a pioneer resident of Saanich for sixty-five years before taking up residence in the city.
The remains are reposing in Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

3 MARRIAGES

LAWSON-JACK—On Saturday, July 13, 1940, at Montreal, Graham Lawson, second son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Lawson, of Victoria, to Gertrude Jack, only daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. Jack, of Montreal.

4 CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. A. Peatt and family wish to take this opportunity of expressing their heartfelt thanks to their many kind friends for sincere expressions of sympathy and beautiful flowers received during their recent sad bereavement.

We wish to take this opportunity to extend our heartfelt gratitude and appreciation to those who contributed to the happiness and welfare of our dear mother, Mrs. G. V. Zinkan, and further extend it to those who helped to lessen our sorrow during our bereavement by the many floral wreaths and messages. Herbert and Helen Burton.

"THE BLUFF," SOOKE
ENGLISH COUNTRY HOME OF 11 rooms. Commanding magnificent views of the rugged South Coast of Vancouver Island, the blue waters of the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the majestic Olympic Mountains.
The estate includes an area of 69.87 acres, of which approximately 50 acres are in natural woodland. The grounds are laid out in the English mode with well-established hedges dividing the garden and tennis court from the fields. There are many flowers and shrubs and ornamental trees, and a greenhouse with a grape vine which has borne in one season 500 pounds of grapes. In addition there are serviceable farm buildings and several stucco cottages which, with the residence, bring the number of available rooms to seventeen.
The property has a sea frontage of over one-half mile. It is absolutely secluded and yet within one hour's drive from Victoria. Price $8500

LAST STRAW

"I wouldn't allow anyone to speak as disrespectfully of my father as that fellow just spoke of yours."

"Did he insult my poor old father? Let me get at him. I will teach him that my parents are as good as any. What did he say?"

"He said you resembled him."

"Oh, she cried, "save it for me! Save it!"

She pointed to a second-floor window, and without a word the fireman rushed to do her bidding.

"Only a month!" sobbed the woman. "And look!"—as the figure of the fireman could be seen coming down the ladder again. "He's failed! He's coming back without it! Oh, what shall I do?"

The fireman approached.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I could find no child."

"Child?" cried the woman. "I said nothing about a child!"

"Then what was it?" they asked her.

"It was my b-b-bicycle!" she sobbed. "I'd only had it a month—on the hire-purchase system, too!"

KEY MATERIALS ARE AVAILABLE

United States Rapidly Being Made Independent of Foreign Sources

WASHINGTON, July 13 (AP).—Assurances that the United States rapidly was being made independent of foreign sources for key arms materials came today from the Defence Advisory Commission.

In an initial report of progress, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., former United States Steel Corporation chairman, said surveys indicated adequate supplies of such materials as rubber, tin, aluminum and armor plate would be available as needed by defence industries.

Stettinius, in charge of the commission's materials division, asserted that Government agencies and industry, with "full White House support," were "getting things done."

"MORE HOPEFUL"

He described prospects for ample stocks of all kinds as generally "more hopeful than we anticipated six weeks ago when this commission was appointed by the President."

While his report presented an optimistic picture of the industrial side of the defence programme, indications cropped up that the army's plans for getting the necessary man power would run into considerable opposition.

OPPOSING CONSCRIPTION

Despite testimony from General George C. Campbell, the army chief of staff, that enactment of a conscription law was immediately essential to defence, Senators Norris (Independent, Nebraska), Holt (Democrat, West Virginia) and Lundeen (Farmer-Labor, Minnesota) said they would oppose such a step. Several other senators indicated opposition.

One item in Stettinius' report which attracted particular attention was a prediction that by the end of this month plans will be complete to produce synthetic rubber in the future, if required, in quantities sufficient to free American industry entirely from dependence on the Far East.

Against the possibility that American supplies of tin from the distant Straits Settlements might be cut off, Stettinius said the commission was conferring with representatives of four smelting concerns looking to creation of a domestic smelting plant to use ores produced in Bolivia and now shipped to England for processing.

WILL PROCEED WITH PLAN OF INSURANCE

ployment insurance to be administered by a commission appointed by the Governor in Council, and to create an unemployment insurance fund from contributions from specified persons and from moneys provided by Parliament, for the payment of insurance benefits, to be administered by the commission, assisted by an advisory committee.

"With provisions also for the organization and maintenance of an employment service administered by the commission with the advice and assistance of a national employment committee.

OTHER POWERS

"Also with power to the Governor in Council to establish committee and boards subsidiary to the commission and to enter into agreements with the Governments of other countries for reciprocal arrangements relating to unemployment insurance.

"With provision for the remuneration of the commissioners and the appointment and remuneration of such officers, clerks and employees as may be required for the due carrying out of the provisions of the act and for the costs of administrations."

Boys' Brigade Camp To Receive Visitors

Visitors will be welcomed between 3 and 5 p.m. today at the annual camp of First Victoria Company, The Boys' Brigade, which is being held at Albay Point, just east of Rest Haven, near the Summer cottage of T. Baxter, senior lieutenant of the company, who is in charge of the camp.

The camp was opened last Monday and will be struck tomorrow. The attendance comprises two officers, Lieutenants Baxter and MacCracken, and thirteen boys. Major F. V. Longstaff has attended the camp on three days for instructional and inspection purposes. The company is divided into three tent squads, under Lance-Corporals F. Donahay, E. Hinde and R. Baldwin. Prayers are held daily at 8.30 a.m. and 9.50 p.m.

GERMANS CONTRIBUTE TO BRITISH DRIVE TO COLLECT ALUMINUM

NEW YORK, July 13 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation said today that the German Air Force is "contributing" to the British campaign to collect and conserve aluminum.

"A number of aluminum rods about four feet long by three-quarters of an inch thick, with a square plate at one end, have been picked up after air raids on this country," said the broadcast heard here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"The Air Ministry now tells us that these rods are used for holding incendiary bombs and are dropped with the bombs. It advises finders to hand them straight over to the local scrap metal salvage depot so they can be returned to Germany with interest."

Yesterday's Fire Calls

DOG FAST DIGGER

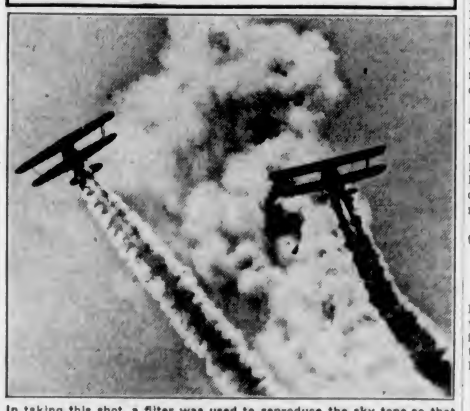

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 13 (AP).—Jefferson City police nominate a friendly rat terrier as the "diggingest dog alive." He dug so far into a hole after a rabbit that it took the police rescue squad three hours to uncover him.

GANDHI'S LITTLE JOKE

WARDHA, India, July 13 (CP-Reuter's).—Great Britain has rejected a suggestion by Mohandas K. Gandhi that the principle of non-violent resistance be applied to Germany, the Mahatma said today.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

FILTERS FOR BETTER PICTURES

In taking this shot, a filter was used to reproduce the sky tone so that the white smoke would stand out. Try filters—they'll improve your pictures, and add interest.

COLOR filters—simple little devices that slip on over your camera lens—can add a lot to the quality and value of your snapshots. If you've never used a filter, now is a good time to start. All the experts use them, and they'll mark a big forward step in your own personal photography.

Slip a medium yellow K-2 filter on your lens, load the camera with any good "chrome" or "pan" film, and you get pictures with more natural tone values. Or, in technical phrase, more accurate rendering of relative brightnesses as seen by the eye. Which, briefly, means that your picture of any outdoor subject will come closer to showing things as you saw them when you snapped the shutter.

Slip a deep yellow G filter on your lens, and you'll get clearer, better pictures of distant scenes that would look hazy in an "unfiltered" shot. You'll also get skies that look deeper than normal in tone—very effective in some pictorial shots.

For spectacular effects, very dark skies, and exaggerated contrast, load the camera with "pan" film or infra-red film, and slip a red "A" filter on the lens. Don't use the red filter with other types of film than panchromatic or infra-red; it's for these only.

From the effects described, you can see that filters open up an interesting new range of picture possibilities. The K-2 is the best all-round filter, so start with that, adding the G and A when you are ready to branch out into dramatic "effect" shots.

Every filter, of course, cuts out part of the light to which a film is sensitive, so exposure must be increased accordingly. Each filter's "exposure factor" is constant for each film, and exposure adjustment is not hard to calculate; but the easiest method is to use a pocket filter guide of the dial type. These cost but a few cents, and readily indicate the exact lens opening needed in a particular situation.

If you would improve your photography—make use of filters. The results will surprise you—in fact, you'll probably want to know, "Why didn't somebody tell me about this before?"—John van Guilder.

Air Marshal Due Tuesday

Air Commodore A. Earl Godfrey, chief of the Western Air Command, left Victoria last night to be on hand in Vancouver tomorrow to welcome Air Marshal William A. Bishop, V.C., of the Royal Canadian Air Force, flying hero of the last war, who is to address a Board of Trade luncheon meeting in the Mainland city tomorrow.

Air Marshal Bishop, accompanied by the air officer commanding, is expected to arrive in Victoria the following day, and later will make a flying tour of air operational stations on this coast, before returning to Eastern Canada.

Letters to the Editor

No letter to the Editor will be inserted except over the proper signature and address of the writer. This rule admits of no exception. No letter should exceed 500 words in length.

AN ARENA

Sir,—Persons who subscribed to the arena fund have a right to know certain facts regarding the affairs of the campaign.

1. How much actual cash is in the bank?
2. How much in pledges are on file?
3. What money has been expended and for what?
4. Is an office being maintained to follow up and collect the pledges?
5. Is it true that skating facilities could be secured in the Horse Show Building with the money subscribed?
6. If such is the case, why don't we go ahead?
7. Have the people who subscribed this money no right to say what shall be done with it?

It seems to me that too often the public is not treated fairly and given the consideration due. This only breeds distrust and future campaigns will suffer accordingly.

Many of our young people and business men have given a lot of time to this worthy cause and we are now on the spot, as the subscribers are asking the questions listed.

Possibly a public meeting might be arranged whereby a free discussion and proper explanation could be had.

I could go into details of the pros and cons of an arena, but what I am interested in just now is a fair deal to the subscribers and some chance for them to say what they want done with their own money.

MAINLAND MAN DIES ON CAMPING TRIP

NANAIMO, B.C., July 13 (CP).—James Oliver, seventy-one, a resident of Vancouver, died while on a camping trip with his wife on the second day after their arrival at Big Qualicum River.

Mr. Oliver was a native of Stanhope, England, and had resided in British Columbia for the past twenty-seven years.

He was a member of the Yukon Pioneers' Order and a member of the Prince Albert Lodge, A.F. & A.M., in Vancouver.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. J. Stanley McGlashen, of Vancouver.

OBLIGING

Two old men had equal reputations for stubbornness. They were apt to encounter each other in situations which required that one give in, but the matter usually had to be settled by a third party.

One day the men, each driving a large load of hay, met in a narrow lane and both looked at the approaching vehicle and determined that he would not move out of the way. They drew closer together and neither would give an inch. Finally one said to the other:

"I'm prepared to stay here as long as you want to wait."

He took out his newspaper and began to read. The other filled his pipe and puffed contentedly. After half an hour of silence, he leaned out of his seat and called to his neighbor:

"Would you mind lettin' me read that paper when you've finished?"

DISTINGUISHED MARK

FLOYD, Va., July 13 (AP).—Dock Dickerson found a big terrapin here with the initials "W.L.D." carved on its shell. He is wondering if this was the work of his brother, W. Leonard Dickerson, who died in 1908.

MAUNA LOA ACTIVE

HILO, Hawaii, July 13 (AP).—Mauna Loa Volcano resumed visible activity today for the first time since last April. A fountain of lava gushed up from its cone.

LINK TRAINER TO BE SHOWN

Machine Used in Pilot Instruction to Be Demonstrated in City

The Link Trainer, ingenious mechanical contrivance whereby future aircraft pilots can be given a large part of their training without risk to life or limb or danger of damage to costly airplanes, is to be demonstrated to the people of Victoria daily during the next two weeks, while the air supremacy campaign is in progress.

One of these training machines was brought into the city from the Patricia Bay Air Station of the R.C.A.F. yesterday, and will be in operation at the headquarters of the campaign in the Scollard Building, Douglas Street, daily at the following hours: 11 a.m. to 12 noon, 3 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m.

In outward appearance somewhat resembling the toy airplanes seen in amusement parks at fairs and exhibitions, the Link Trainer actually is an extremely important unit in the schooling of flyers. Electrically operated, it duplicates all the movements of aircraft proper. According to the handling of its controls by the student, it will take off, climb, bank, turn, dive, spin and land, and in it, without ever leaving the ground, a would-be aviator can learn all the intricacies of flying.

INSTRUMENT FLYING

The Link Trainer is particularly valuable in blind flying instruction. Its instrument panel is an exact duplicate of those found in all modern aircraft, and the instructor is able to communicate to the pilot's earphones instructions as to the courses he is to "fly" and the movements he is to execute. Every movement the training machine makes is minutely recorded on a chart in front of the instructor, who, at the end of the "flight," is able to point out to the student the mistakes he has made.

Link Trainers are used in the training of pilots for all the principal air lines of the United States, and it has been found that students instructed on these machines have been able, after fifty hours' training, yet without ever having handled the controls of a full-sized ship, to pilot big transport planes on accurate courses entirely by instrument.

The Link Trainer in use at Patricia Bay is to be demonstrated in the city during the air supremacy campaign through the co-operation of the Western Air Command. Air Force pilots will show the working of the machine.

Next Saturday, the day of the "silver trail," which is to be part of the campaign to raise $50,000 here for the purchase of training aircraft, the Air Force Band will parade through city streets.

Throughout the week, Rev. Dr. W. J. Sipprell will give daily radio talks over CFCT at 11:15 a.m. on "Winning the War" as a feature of the campaign.

ASK INFORMATION ON U.S. POSITION

Retain Government Inquiring About French Possessions in the Western Hemisphere

VICHY, France, July 13 (AP).—Foreign Ministry sources said tonight the French Government had asked Washington for information on the United States' position concerning French possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

They said no answer had as yet been received, but that poor communications were believed to be responsible.

France's possessions in the Western Hemisphere are the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the coast of Canada, with a combined area of ninety-three square miles and a population of 4,175; the West Indian islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe, a total area of 986 square miles and a population of more than 500,000; French Guiana and Inini, on the coast of South America, with an area of 65,041 square miles and a population of about 37,005; and the small islands of Marie Galante, Les Saintes, Desirade, St. Barthélemey and St. Martin, in the Leeward group, under the jurisdiction of Guadeloupe.

NAZIS PLAN WAR WITH NUTRITION

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—If Germany is able to maintain supplies her resistance will not be broken on the nutrition front as it was in the first Great War, according to Dr. J. C. Drummond, professor of biochemistry at London University.

He told the Royal Institute in a paper reported in The British Medical Journal that German nutrition experts played a big part in making war plans for the Reich. Existing German rations are based on the principle that a "peasant diet" of "high extraction" — whole meal bread, plenty of vegetables and potatoes, and some dairy produce in the form of cheese or separated milk—provides all the essentials of sound nutrition.

Dr. Drummond, who is scientific adviser to the Ministry of Food, said the German public is not at present getting so good a diet, because potatoes and vegetables are in very short supply owing to the severe Winter.

OLD LANDMARKS ARE DESTROYED

Crystal Palace Towers Demolished to Salvage Tons Of War-Needed Steel

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Landmarks for nearly a century, the two 284-foot towers of the Crystal Palace have been demolished to salvage 1,600 tons of steel and iron for armaments. Visitors to the capital will miss the tall structures, all that remained of the great iron and glass building destroyed by fire November 30, 1936.

The towers, visible for miles, rose high above the big recreational centre at Norwood Hill in southeast London. Since 1854 the glittering building had housed many permanent and special exhibitions and notable concerts and entertainments had been held there.

The towers were originally erected to support large tanks of water at a height sufficient to give pressure for the working of the many fountains in the palace and its grounds. In early days, the public could scale them by climbing 400 steps but later elevators were installed.

DESTROYED BY FIRE

Firemen were rushed from all over London and an enormous crowd gathered when a night fire of unknown origin destroyed the building and much of its valuable contents. In an hour the Crystal Palace was a mass of flames which could be seen for miles.

The huge structure was not rebuilt, but the surrounding 200 acres of park land with its beautiful terraces and flower beds retain an attraction for Londoners and visitors. A two-mile speedway was inaugurated in 1937 and big motor races have been held there. Outdoor programmes are held on bank holidays.

From 1895 until the first Great War the Crystal Palace was the venue for England's soccer highlight, the Cup Final. In 1913 Aston Villa defeated Sunderland, 1-0, before a crowd of 120,000 spectators, a record for the ground.

NEW SECTION IN ART DEPARTMENT

Stimulating interest in artistic expression ranging from oil colors to pottery and photography, the British Columbia Agricultural Association at its seventy-ninth annual fair to be held at the Willows from September 7 to 14 will offer nearly $500 in cash prizes for competition among the entrants.

The art department is divided into three main sections. There is the division set aside for adult amateurs and professionals, and a special department for children's work, and another department for photography.

In the adult section, open, classes have been provided with a view to raising the standard of amateur work. The adult section has $231 in cash prizes.

The children's department has been allocated $136 in cash prizes, and the photography department $106.

NEW RULES TO CONSERVE FOOD

British Government Tightens Control on Civilian Life By Latest Orders

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Britain has tightened its control on civilian life as a means of strengthening the second line of defence—the home front.

While the Government considered imposing a "scientific diet" on the nation for the purpose of conserving food supplies, orders in council empowered it to take these steps:

1. Order occupants of any premises to carry out measures designed to hinder an enemy attack—possibly convert a house or factory into a veritable fort.

2. Direct the cleaning out of attics or rooms to prevent fire spreading from incendiary bombs.

3. Ban or regulate the use of any vehicle on the highways.

4. Outlaw industrial strikes and lockouts which threaten to hamper production.

5. Take over fields which the farmers are not making produce.

PRESENT SUPPLIES AMPLE

While the Government moved toward rigid food conservation, it was emphasized that present supplies are plentiful. The truth of this statement is borne out by the well-laden dining tables to be found in private homes, and the variety of courses that can be ordered in restaurants.

It is authoritatively hinted that the people are likely to be required to eat more home-grown vegetables and less meat. Potato flour bread is believed to be just around the corner from the pantry.

If the promise of "stomach control" caused any shock to the beef-loving Briton, Robert Hudson, Minister of Agriculture, artfully removed it by partially lifting the cloud that has hung over the United Kingdom since it was hinted that a curtailment of the hop harvest might cut down the nation's beer. He told the cheering Commons that he was doing everything possible to insure an "adequate supply of beer."

Even though the dinner plate contains only 'arf a portion of meat, the Briton won't really mind so long as he can wash it down with a tankard of real 'arf and 'arf.

BONUS FOR SOLDIERS WHO ARE DEMOBILIZED

VICHY, July 13 (AP).—The French Government announced yesterday that all demobilized soldiers will be given a bonus of 1,000 francs, of which 200 will be paid immediately and 800 by a later order.

Complete demobilization in the area not under German occupation, is expected to take several weeks. Troops now in Nazi-held territory will be demobilized only under terms still to be fixed by the French-German armistice committee now in session at Wiesbaden, Germany.

WOUNDED GIVEN BETTER CHANCE

Important Changes in Surgery and Medicine Since Last Great War

LONDON, July 13 (CP).—Advances in medical science since the First Great War have assured the wounded of a far better chance of recovery. A quarter of a century has seen new discoveries helping doctors and nurses in their struggle against suffering and death.

In the last war more suffering was due to illness following exposure of wounded men rather than to wounds themselves. Pneumonia took heavy toll of patients whose wounds alone would not have proved fatal. Two years ago research workers evolved a synthetic chemical, popularly known as M and B 693, which proved a powerful weapon against pneumonia.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION

The technique of blood transfusion has been revolutionized. Supplies of blood are available at dressing stations and casualty hospitals at and near the fighting zones.

Infection in fractured limbs during the first Great War meant weeks of hospital treatment. During the Spanish civil war a Barcelona doctor, Dr. Trueta, evolved a new treatment. He closed the whole wound and limb in a plaster cast, leaving the body itself to heal the wound. Instead of using antiseptics. In this way recovery from serious wounds was more complete and faster.

By 1918 the worst of the war diseases caused by dirt of trenches, such as typhus, had been conquered. Greater attention to the soldier's food means better general health which proves its value in making for quicker recovery from wounds.

MAKE SURE YOUR Flashlight CONTAINS

What Today Means

"CANCER"

If July 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a.m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p.m., and from 7:45 to 9:45 p.m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a.m., from 5:45 to 7:45 p.m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p.m.

Events may shape themselves so that many an almost lost hope will be revived and a spirit of optimism will brighten numerous lives today. Do not permit yourself to become so engrossed in doing what you want to do that you will forget the claims that others have upon your time, and find yourself in a position of having to offer a difficult explanation. Back of almost every case of irritability today will be a cause and effect, so do not judge anyone too hastily. If puzzled over anyone's attitude, or words that seem to have a hidden meaning, a few direct questions may give you a satisfactory answer. It is the things that remain unsaid that are often responsible for grief and nervous apprehension, and today married and engaged couples, and those on the verge of becoming betrothed, should not resort to being uncommunicative as a form of protest against anything that has incurred their displeasure. This is a day when you ought to say what you have to say—and get it out of your system.

If a woman and July 14 is your birthday, set your own pace and do not try to keep up with anyone else's if you would save yourself from a needless amount of worry. Perhaps one of the most important rules for you to make, in the regulation of your affairs, is to live within your income and save yourself from having financial headaches. Happiness generally leaves the home where wrangling over finances is permitted. Through the use of progressive methods you may make a brilliant record as a teacher, artist, writer, politics, social welfare, or political worker, as well as a musician, sales representative or professional entertainer. If you and your husband make your marriage a co-operative partnership nothing can mar it or make of it a failure.

The child born on July 14, through precept and example can be made to develop into a strong character that cannot be swayed or influenced by an undesirable outside influence. Generally keen observers, children born on this date through keeping their eyes open gain a remarkable fund of useful information that proves invaluable to them when they enter upon a professional, commercial, or social career.

If a man and July 14 is your natal day, a high regard for your word, self-control and self-assurance, will have a great deal to do with your future success. You may make money and achieve distinction as an industrial sales engineer, architect, artist, musician, actor, lawyer, doctor, dentist, druggist, scientist, or industrialist.

MONDAY, JULY 15

"CANCER"

If July 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. until noon, from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 8 to 10 p.m. The danger periods are 8 to 10 a.m., from 6 to 8 p.m. and from 10 p.m. until midnight.

Emotionalism must be guarded against today, if it is not to sweep away the power of common-sense reasoning and in its place leave a tumultuous train of depressing thoughts. There may be many optical illusions today, so do not depend too much on your eyes in the gauging of weights, capacities, or distances. It is apt to require a good deal of wisdom to be able to discriminate between truth and fiction, so form your conclusions slowly if you do not want to arrive at a wrong one today. The poison of innuendo, that will be responsible for some bad or derogatory line of propaganda, may require the antidoters of confirmation and faith to render its pernicious influence harmless. Today starts a week that will require consistent work being done if the results achieved are going to be worthwhile. Married and engaged couples, and those whose lives have undergone a change through the advent of love, should respect each other's views today if dissension is not to upset the even tenor of their ways.

If a woman and July 15 is your birthday, you cannot expect to eat indiscriminately and look like a slim princess, so practice self-control. Experience is the best teacher and you will gain more practical knowledge from her than from book lore or theories, and as one of her pupils your chances for success will be greatly enhanced. Through your activity as a musician, teacher, artist, designer, architect, lawyer, stenographer, actress, writer or radio entertainer, you may find yourself most highly regarded and prosperous. Conditions conductive to your matrimonial happiness are in evidence.

The child born on July 15 should not be permitted to develop pronounced mannerisms. Children born on this date must be encouraged to be perfectly natural and made to realize that any form of affectation is apt to affect their popularity.

If a man and July 15 is your natal day, you ought to have an even temper, plenty of wit, and the habit of speaking straight from the shoulder. Through "go-getting" methods you may travel far on the road to success. Consistent plugging and thorough familiarity with your work ought to enable you to win a gratifying amount of recognition as a mathematician, astronomer, lecturer, educator, lawyer, doctor, actor, radio commentator, salesman, financier, or in a political sphere of activity.

RIVER IS FAMOUS AS HEADQUARTERS FOR TYEE FISHING

Campbell River Noted as Wonderful Sporting Area —Hunting and Fishing Are Added to Glorious Scenery—Tyee Club Well Known —Rule Laid Down

MOST districts are satisfied to be known as offering the best salmon or trout fishing, shooting or hunting, but Campbell River is justified in claiming to be unrivaled with regard to all four sports. Situated at the northern end of the Island Highway, 190 miles by road from Victoria, 113 miles from Nanaimo, where the ferry from Vancouver brings one to the Island, Campbell River during the Spring and Fall attracts fishermen who are out for trout and steelhead while those who are set on catching some of the fifty to sixty-pound tyee salmon go there during August and early September, generally staying on to try their luck at taking ten-pound cohoes on a bucktail fly during the end of September and October.

As for hunting and shooting, there are blue and willow grouse, deer, cougar, black bear and wolves. Guides are available and good hunting is just as certain as good fishing.

THE TYEE CLUB

Unquestionably, the body or organization which has done most to bring before the public the advantages Campbell River has to offer the fisherman is the Tyee Club of British Columbia. While primarily founded to develop fishing for big tyees into a fine art, the fishermen the Tyee Club has attracted from all parts of the world have gone home after enjoying their favorite sport to spread the district's fame among all kinds of sportsmen. However, the big tyee salmon remain the primary attraction.

The history of the Tyee Club, its aims and objects, is quite worth consideration, for the methods employed to develop fishing along same and sporting lines might well be adapted to suit other districts.

The Tyee Club was organized in 1924 and incorporated in 1927 under the Societies Act of the Province of British Columbia. The objects of the Club as set out in its year book are: To foster interest in Canada's greatest game fish; to emphasize the ideals of sportsmanship as distinguished from slaughter; to standardize fishing tackle; to co-operate with the Fisheries Department of the Dominion of Canada in the observation of tagged fish; to properly authenticate and record weights and measurements of fish taken on legitimate tackle from waters within the jurisdiction of the club; to officially frown on the taking of fish in any other way; to limit membership to those amateur anglers who have taken a Tyee Salmon on light tackle weighing thirty pounds or over.

Since its founding the club states the ideals of sportsmanship and code of ethics promulgated by it are receiving wide recognition. Moreover, the weilder of the odd handline is rapidly becoming an object of polite ostracism. Even some professionals have begun to experiment with rods and reels.

TACKLE REGULATIONS

The tackle regulations enforced by the Tyee Club are responsible for this, shall we say, improvement in the methods of salmon fishing in Island waters. Here they are, as amended in 1934 and now in force:

Rods may be of wood, wood with steel centres or tubular steel, but solid steel rods must not be used. No rod may be less than six feet long overall, but there is no limit to its length, although very long rods are unwieldy and make the gaffing of a fish difficult.

Before being used in Club competitions all rods must be tested and conform to an official bending test. The length of line is unlimited, but no line having a breaking strain when dry of more than twenty-five pounds may be used. After a fish has been hooked no one else may touch the rod, reel or line, except that the boatman or companion who is rowing the boat may remove the lead and steady the line while gaffing the fish. Only fish weighed on date of capture will be eligible for membership qualification or club competition. Any of the following will disqualify a catch: a broken rod; hand-lining a fish; failure to comply with tackle specifications; throwing gaff at fish; use of harpoon or lily iron; use of mushroom or umbrella floats, use of gaff over four feet long; assistance from more than one gaffer in killing fish; the use of more than one hook attached to leader at any time; fish hooked or taken from motor driven boats; and fishing from an anchored boat or shooting hooked fish.

REPORTS SHOW FISHING GOOD

Publicity Bureau Reports Excellent Sport at Vancouver Island Points

As the Summer advances, sportsmen from all over Vancouver Island are sending in word that fishing is uniformly good this year. The following summary gives the picture of fishing conditions during the past week, and they are issued through the courtesy of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.

Trout fishing, especially in the more northerly lakes, rivers and streams of Vancouver Island, continues to give good sport. In several instances, and in particular at the head of Great Central Lake, limit catches have been made. They are taking well in Campbell River and Comox Lake also.

Sea trout, which is the cut-throat trout which has taken to salt water, is extremely good at the mouth of the Qualicum River and adjacent streams where they enter the sea. These include Englishman's River, Little Qualicum and French Creek.

BLUE-BACK SALMON

The Blue-back salmon or Cohoe is now beginning to take seriously. Good catches are reported from waters around Saanich, Brentwood, Cowichan Bay, Qualicum, Comox and Oyster River. They are also taking off Victoria, Oak Bay and Cordova Bay. This sporting fish runs from seven to fifteen pounds and is taken on a lure or a bucktail fly, light tackle being used.

From Campbell River comes word that spring salmon are beginning to take, the first of the season being brought to gaff on July 8, weighing no less than thirty-five pounds.

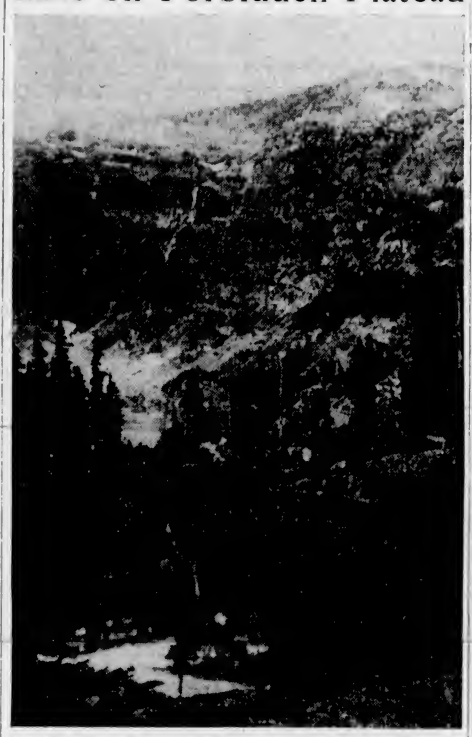

The season for black bass opened on July 1 and the lakes in the vicinity of Victoria—Langford, Elk, Florence and others—have attracted many anglers. St. Mary's Lake on Salt Spring Island is another favored spot.

SEA BASS FISHING

Sea bass fishing is in full swing, the Victoria breakwater being popular. For those who wish larger fish Beecher Bay is recommended. It being possible to cast from the rocks or from boats when available.

It is interesting to note that from every resort on Vancouver Island comes word of good catches and satisfactory sport. Visiting fishermen are advised to secure information from local sources when planning an excursion as conditions vary within a matter of a few miles. More complete information can be secured from the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.

Lake on Forbidden Plateau

GOOD HOTELS ARE LOCATED AT QUALICUM

Famous Resort Has Fully Modern Hotels, Each in Ideal Setting

It is doubtful whether any other Summer colony in British Columbia is as well equipped to cater to the needs of the visitor as Qualicum Beach. Along the beach and highway and in the village itself are modern hotels, picturesque resorts and up-to-date auto camps. Excellent stores and garages, telephone and public utilities make Qualicum abreast of the times in every way.

Dominant among the larger hotels is the Qualicum Beach Hotel standing high above sea level, commanding a glorious view of the water, across the golf links which are Qualicum's pride, second only to the lovely beach. Taken over under new management this Spring, the hotel has undergone complete renovation, and the grounds and gardens improved.

LOVELY VIEW

Sharing the high location with the lovely view, yet only a matter of a few hundred yards from the famous beach stands the Sunset Inn. This fully modern hotel offers, in addition to the comfortable accommodation in the main building, a number of pretty lodges in the large garden where the visitor may have complete seclusion if desired while enjoying the comforts and service of the hotel.

Right on the water's edge stands the Morgan Hotel, with artistically-arranged gardens running down to the beach. Modern and up to date in every respect, this is a delightful spot to spend a holiday in quiet, restful surroundings, where the view across the sunlit waters is a continual delight, and where it is only a step to the beach and the famous sands.

Toward the north end of the beach and right on the beach is the Ben Bow Inn. Known as a first-class hotel in every respect, the Ben Bow stands well back from the main road in private grounds that are beautifully wooded. At the entrance gates stands a smartly modern coffee shop for the convenience of travelers.

PLATEAU HAS GAINED FAME

Beautiful Forbidden Plateau Only Opened in Recent Years—Good Camps

The Forbidden Plateau, one of Vancouver Island's most outstanding attractions, holds more than passing interest for it holds a unique place in the catalogue of beauty spots on the Coast.

Walled in by a mountain range, 5,000 feet high, this great tableland was a territory taboo to the Indians of the Coast for centuries. Only medicine men, tried and strong in the ways of magic, could hope to enter the region and emerge unscathed by the spirits supposed to haunt the meadows and hills. The first white men who came here could get no guide to accompany them into the Plateau, and save by an occasional trapper or prospector, the Forbidden Plateau was unvisited.

Only a few years ago were the possibilities it held as a playground recognized and the first camp established. From then until now the fame has spread until it is one of the best known vacation lands in the country.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS

Literally hundreds of lovely lakes lie amid the ranges and natural meadows. Vast tracts are unencumbered by undergrowth, with red and white heather underfoot. For those keen on mountain climbing, there are peaks and summits as yet unconquered, while the fisherman finds ideal sport among the fighting trout which lie in the clear cold depths of the lakes. Horseback riding is a popular way of exploring the miles of open country, and all the while the visitor enjoys the invigorating air of an altitude as great as that of Colorado.

The Forbidden Plateau is accessible by two trails. One, leading in via Beven and Quartz Creek, consists of an old logging railway graded to become a motor road. At the head of this is the Forbidden Plateau Lodge, at an altitude of 2,000 feet, while Mariwood Camp, on the Plateau proper, is connected with the lodge by pack train.

PACK TRAIN

Another trial is constructed from Dove Creek, leading directly to Croteau's Camp, a distance of twelve miles. The visitor is met by a pack train, and saddle ponies are available for the journey in. The train reaches the top of the Plateau, passing lovely green timber on the ascent skirting Mount Washington and Paradise Meadows, and three miles further on brings the traveler to Croteau Lake and Croteau's Camp.

APPROPRIATE

At the end of a sermon in a Scottish church an ardent prohibitionist was permitted by the entirely anti-prohibitionist parson to say a few words on his pet subject.

"Brethren," he said, "if I had all the whisky, brandy and champagne in the world, I would fling the whole of it into the Tweed."

He sat down, and in the pause that followed, the parson rose:

"We shall conclude," he said, "by singing Hymn 157: 'Shall We Gather at the River?'"

The WORKSHOP of the ARMY

1—Checking an A.A. height and range finder.

7—Textile refitters repairing knapsacks.

By ROY MURDOCK

WHEN the army has a mechanical job to be done, the Ordnance Corps gets it. And the variety of jobs wished upon the District Ordnance Depot would be astonishing to anyone not familiar with the wide field covered by this military Jack-of-all-trades.

Foot-slogger's boots to be repaired? They go to the Ordnance Depot. Heavy field pieces, mechanized equipment or small arm needing overhaul or re-adjustment? The Ordnance Depot will put them in good order again. The workshops of the depot look after everything from the repairing and adjusting of the most delicate instruments employed in these days of highly scientific warfare to the manufacture of furniture that wouldn't look out of place in any business office.

Those buildings clustered at the foot of Signal Hill adjoining the Esquimalt Road, house such an assortment of workshops and laboratories as never could be brought together in any one civil industry, and today every one of them is working at top speed to meet the heavy demands of the rapidly expanding military establishments in this area.

Many Tradesmen Needed

WITH these increasing demands upon the skill of the Ordnance Depot artisans and craftsmen, it is small wonder that the call of the district recruiting organization for mechanically-trained men is oft repeated. There are jobs in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps for men of almost every trade—and at the same time there are opportunities in the "workshop of the army" for young men to gain advanced training that will enable them to set up in business for themselves or command well-paid positions when the war is over and they can go back to repairing watches instead of range-finders, or "civvie" footwear instead of clumsy army boots.

Take a peep into the instrument shop. In one corner you will see an expert machinist busy with a microscopic piece of work in a lathe that cost enough to set you or me up in a comfortable new home, with perhaps a car to boot. That tiny little scrap of metal he is working on must be true to 1-10,000th of an inch, if the sensitive instrument for which it is intended is to function accurately.

At another bench a specialist in optical instruments is overhauling and doing necessary repairs to some hundreds of binoculars turned over to the army in response to Ottawa's recent appeal. Some of them may need new parts. If they are serviceable in other respects, it's his job to make them, for the binoculars are of a hundred different makes, and replacement parts can't be had at short notice.

In the centre of the shop two repairers are delicately turning the setscrews and dials of a wierd-looking instrument mounted on a big tripod. It's a height and range finder—vital piece of equipment in aerial defence—in for its periodical check-over. Other instruments that the army won't show you and won't talk about pass through this laboratory where men talk in measurements to five decimal places.

Exacting Trade Tests

THAT'S the instrument shop, staffed largely by young men and old who were mending wrist watches not long ago, and who found their niche in the Ordnance Corps by satisfying an extremely exacting trade test.

Then—to switch from metal-workers to the men who fashion from wood the innumerable pieces of equipment that Headquarters, with its multitude of offices, needs—there is the carpenter's shop. It differs little from any city factory, save

What It Takes

By Elisabeth Sanxay Holding

SHE was sunburnt to a lovely golden brown, nimble and supple as a little leopard, Evan thought, as he watched her climbing the hill. Her tawny hair glistened, her blue eyes narrowed against the sun. He couldn't keep his eyes off her; he wasn't paying enough attention to Mr. Despard.

"Smoke if you like, m' boy," said Despard, with a smile.

"Thank you, sir," said Evan and got out a packet of cigarettes.

"I haven't smoked for two years now," said Despard. "It wasn't a matter of will power. Simply that in a life like this those artificial habits drop away from you. Your nerves relax."

He looked relaxed, extraordinarily handsome, young for his age. He must be fifty or so, thought young Evan, and he was lean as a boy, very brown and clean-looking in his polo shirt and white linen trousers.

"It's the best thing I ever did," he went on. "Pulling up stakes and coming out here. It's given the kids something." His far-sighted glance was upon the lake below, where his two boys sat motionless as bronze statues in a rowboat, fishing. "They've got—— Hello, Harry! Come here and let me introduce Evan Campbell. I went to school with his father a few centuries ago."

Evan rose as the little leopard came up on the veranda; she smiled broadly and held out a strong little paw.

'Hello!" she said. "Is that your car at the foot of the hill?"

'Yes," said Evan.

"Gosh, I wish you'd give me a lift to the store!" she said. "On your way home——"

"I can run you down there now," said Evan.

As Despard watched them go down the hill his wife came out of the cabin and stood beside him.

"Who's that, Tom?"

"Archie Campbell's son," he answered.

"He's a nice-looking boy, Tom."

"Oh, yes!" said Despard. "But too thin. City-bred. You can see the marks of the strain. But he's a decent kid. He's gone into Archie's business and he takes it very seriously."

"She's wonderful," thought Evan.

Harry went ahead of him down the steep path, straight and sure-footed as an Indian, little and slim and perfect in her red shorts and white shirt. There was a sort of joyousness about her in the very way she moved. So friendly, too. He slipped on a carpet of pine needles and she turned and held out her hand, took his hand in a warm firm clasp.

"You need tennis shoes for this hill," she said. "That's a grand little car!"

"How do you people manage without a car?" he asked..

"We walk," she said. "Or we can take a canoe or a rowboat."

She got in beside him and he started the engine, drove carefully down the steep winding road.

"Have you been living up there long?" he asked.

"Six years," she said. "I was only twelve when we came."

He didn't like to keep on asking questions, but he wanted to know about her, to understand.

'Despard's a bit of a fanatic," his father had told him. "Brilliant fellow—taught in a university—wrote books and articles about economics, social system, and so on. Made plenty of money. But he got this idea—simple life, back to nature—bought this cabin and more or less disappeared. But if you're coming home that way you might stop in and see them." He had paused a moment. "Might remember me to Grace—Mrs. Despard. I used to know her when we were young."

SO Evan had expected something freakish and absurd, something to amuse him. Not this serene, self-sufficient household. Not this enchanting girl.

"Do you go to school?" he asked.

"Oh, I did," she said. "To a funny little public school down in the valley. But that was so that we could be with other children. Father taught us at home. Chick and I were both ready for college at fifteen. I didn't want to go to college but Chick went for a year. He hated it."

"Fifteen is pretty young."

"Chick's seventeen now, a year younger than me. But he's old for his age. Do you know what Chick does?" She turned to Evan with a serious glowing look. "He started when he was only fourteen. He goes off by himself in the woods for a week or so without anything. Without even a blanket or any food or anything. Just his rifle and a knife."

"That's quite a feat," said Evan, impressed.

"Well, that's been Dad's idea," she said. "To make us all able to look after ourselves. We had to pass all the tests, to get our certificate of independence. We had to swim a mile in our clothes and shoes, we had to shoot or fish for our own dinner and light our own fire and cook whatever we had. Lots of other things. There's the store!"

He went with her into the dimness of the store at the crossroads and waited while she ordered from a list. She had a serious friendly manner toward the storekeeper and he obviously liked her; he called her "Harry."

"Is your name Harriet?" Evan asked when they were back in the car.

"Yes. It's hideous, isn't it?"

"I think it's the prettiest name——" he said, and something in his tone made her turn her bright head to look at him. Their eyes met and the color rose beneath her golden skin in a blush such as he had never seen before. It was as if she had suddenly become aware of him and of her own young beauty. A curious embarrassment came over him. He felt his face grow hot and he glanced away from her.

"I hope you'll let me see you again," he said.

"Well, I'd like to," she said.

That was all. They got out of the car and climbed the steep hill together, Evan carrying the big paper bag. They went through the back door into the kitchen where Grace Despard was standing at an oil stove.

"Stay to dinner with us, Evan," she said with a smile.

"Thanks. I'd like to, Mrs. Despard, but I've got a date."

"Another time, then," she said in her composed, friendly way.

He wished she would make it more definite. It was a long drive out here and they had no telephone. He didn't want to come at random and perhaps find Harriet away or something going on that might make his visit unwelcome. He drove off, worrying about this; he felt inexplicably troubled and downcast. Ordinarily, if he met a girl he liked there was no problem about seeing her again. But Harriet was different, different in every way from any other girl.

He went to a dance that night; there were plenty of pretty girls there. When he got home he knew that he was in love with Harriet. He had known it when he danced with other girls, especially with Martha. Before he went on his holiday he had thought that perhaps he was falling in love with Martha. Such a gay, beautiful girl, with a friendly, almost affectionate manner that was wonderfully elusive. He danced with her, he met the sidelong glances of her dark eyes, and he thought of Harriet. Harriet who had no arts and needed none. Harriet, blonde and sweet and brown from the sun and the mountain air, honest and gentle and strong.

EARLY Sunday morning he got his car and drove out. There was no one on the veranda, no one in sight. He knocked on the door and there was no answer. He was filled with blank disappointment and a queer sort of worry.

"Of course she knows other fellows," he thought. "She's probably out with someone else."

He thought of that brother who went off alone into the woods for days. That was the sort of fellow she had gone out with now."

"I couldn't do that," he thought, with a heart like lead. "I'm strong enough. I can swim and all that sort of thing. But I wouldn't be able to do that."

Things came back to him, from books he had loved years ago—stories of other boys in forests, on mountain tops; boys who went up the Amazon, who flew over deserts in airplanes—and a passionate nostalgia stirred him.

"I used to feel sure I'd do things like that some day," he thought. "Just kid stuff, but I didn't think things would turn out like this."

Twenty-four and already settled, already started on the road he was to follow. Working in his father's office, doing well there. He'd got interested in it, he'd forgotten all those old dreams of adventure. He rode—on a well-trained saddle horse, along pleasant roads; he played tennis, he swam, he went to dances.

"So darn tame," he thought. "She couldn't like me."

"If she did—like me," he thought, "what could I do about it? I mean, you couldn't take a girl like that and put her in a city apartment or in a suburban house. She couldn't stand it."

She couldn't change, he didn't want her changed. But maybe he could. Maybe he could do as Despard had done, reject the life of towns and cities and get back to this serenity.

Then he saw Mrs. Despard coming toward the house, wearing a faded pink dress and carrying a little pail. She looked wonderful, he thought, sturdy and fair, happy mother of strong, splendid children.

"Why, Evan!" she cried. She set down the little pail on the top step and held out her hand to him. "I'm very glad to see you, Evan. But the others are all away."

"Will they be gone long?" he asked.

"Goodness knows! They went before sunrise this morning. Sammy—that's my youngest child—wanted to get some photographs from the top of the mountain. He's just got a camera—he earned the money himself, trapping all sorts of things."

"That's enterprising," said Evan.

"Harriet will be sorry," Mrs. Despard said. "She's spoken of you often, Evan. She wants to see you again."

He glanced at her, surprised and a little embarrassed. Was she just being polite? But her very clear eyes met him with a curious earnestness.

"Harriet likes you," she said.

He had met over-eager mothers of young daughters before this, but somehow this was different—just as Harriet herself was different. He was ashamed of himself for being embarrassed before that clear and honest glance.

"Well . . . I like her," he said. "I—like her very much."

"The children have quite a gay time," she said. "Barn dances and sleigh rides. There was an old-fashioned spelling bee last Winter, and Harriet won. Harriet loves to be gay, she loves parties." She took up the little pail. "Blueberries," she explained with a smile. "If you'd like to stay to lunch, Evan, you can have some with cream."

He stayed, partly because he didn't know how to refuse, and partly because he wanted to wait. And Mrs. Despard seemed glad to have him there. They didn't have much to say to each other but the silence was friendly.

"It's a wonderful sort of life," Evan said.

"Well, Tom's a very wonderful man," she said. "Who else could have done what he did? Leaving everything—his friends, his whole way of living—and it was a very pleasant way of living, Evan. Plays, concerts, the most interesting people. He'd been thinking of it for a long time but he didn't say anything to me until the evening when he laid the whole plan before me. He asked me if I'd come with him. He had to get away from the artificial life of the city."

"I'd love Harriet to go to a dance!" she said.

"But—I thought she did——"

"I mean a dance in New York. Going in a taxi, in evening dress—just once. It would be an experience for her."

"Mrs. Despard—a cousin of mine's having a dance out at Greenwich. I'd like to take Harriet if she'd care to come."

"I'm sure she'd like it. If she's not home before you have to go I'll promise for her. I'm—sure."

Well, he wasn't. He wished very much that he could ask Harriet herself, but he couldn't disappoint Mrs. Despard.

"You'll meet her in the Grand Central, Evan? And she can take a room in a woman's hotel. That's quite all right, isn't it?"

"I guess so, Mrs. Despard," said Evan, not knowing.

He stayed a while longer, then he said good-bye to Mrs. Despard.

"It's a mistake!" he thought. "I wish she hadn't fixed it all up without giving me a chance to ask Harry. That's just the way I don't want her to see me. All dolled up and going to a dance. That's just the sort of impression I don't want to make. If I could have seen her today—gone out in a boat—gone swimming. Maybe I don't swim as well as her Tarzan brother, but I'm not bad. I like Mrs. Despard but I wish she'd keep out of this."

"What's this girl of Grace's like?" his father asked.

"Oh, she's very pretty."

"Grace was beautiful," said his father.

"And so popular," said his mother. "I used to be frightfully jealous of Grace and all her beaux. She was always going out and she always looked so smart, in spite of her people's being as poor as church mice. She made all her own clothes. Is the daughter like her, Evan?"

"Well, no," he said. "I don't think she cares about clothes. I mean——" He didn't know how to describe the little golden leopard. "Outdoor type," he said.

"She'll stay here, of course!"

That was worse than ever. He didn't want Harriet to see him at home, in that atmosphere. He didn't want her to see the new apartment, sleekly modern.

He dreaded her coming, he went to the Grand Central to meet her, more nervous than he had ever been in his life. And while he waited for the train a new idea came to him.

"Suppose they don't like her?" he thought. "I mean, she may seem—different in the city."

He didn't recognize her when she came through the gates, didn't know her until she touched his sleeve.

"Hello, Evan," she said, with an anxious smile.

"You look—wonderful!" he cried.

She looked smaller and slighter in a black dress, she had a little black hat tilted to show her hair, she had used a bright lipstick. She looked, he thought, like a little model, only prettier and happier.

"I haven't been in New York since I came in to the dentist's three years ago," she said. "Are you sure I look all right, Evan?"

"Better than that," he said.

HE took her bag, a very battered old bag, and led her to a taxi; he felt the most intense pride in her. And he could see that his mother and his sister were very much impressed.

He didn't like that much.

They drove out to Greenwich in the big closed car, his sister and her young man, his mother, Harriet and himself. He sat beside her in the dark. He could not speak and she, too, was silent.

'She's happy," he thought. And he was not. She was too lovely. "She'll be a knockout," he thought. "She'll meet other fellows."

His uncle's house in Greenwich was imposing. There were three daughters in the family, and his aunt was ruthlessly determined to give them every opportunity. There was a well-known dance orchestra playing and there were at least two boys to every girl.

"I get the first dance, don't I?" he asked Harriet.

"Yes," she said, raising her eyes to his face with a look that made him a little dizzy.

It was a programme dance, no cutting-in. He was glad of that. But she had three dances with other fellows before he had another turn. He didn't feel like dancing with anyone else. When he left her he went out of the house and across the lawn, lit a cigarette. The dance music reached him, faint, a little melancholy in the Summer night.

He kept track of the dances and after the third one he went back, but he couldn't find her. She was not dancing, not in the supper room, not in the library.

"Sitting out with someone," he thought. "She's forgotten this was my dance."

He wanted to be glad she was having a good time but could not be.

He went out on the terrace and there he saw someone in a white dress sitting curled up in a chair.

"Harriet?" he said.

"It's me," she answered. "I——" A sob interrupted her. "Oh, Evan! Is there any way I can get home?"

"Sure!" he said. "I'll take you home."

He ran across the grass to the garage where his aunt's two chauffeurs were entertaining a party of other chauffeurs.

"Tell Mrs. Handley I've taken the roadster, will you?" he said. "I'll call her up tomorrow."

"I ought to have said—good-bye," Harriet said as she climbed into to car.

"Doesn't matter," he assured her. "I mean there's such a mob nobody'll notice."

When they had got outside the grounds he stopped the car.

"Better put on your wrap," he said, and held it for her.

"Mother was—so terribly pleased about—my going to the dance," she said. "I'm glad she'll never know—what a mistake it was."

"Well, if it was a mistake—I mean, if you didn't enjoy it——"

"It wasn't that," she said, and her voice was quite steady now. "I was enjoying myself until I realized—Evan, the boys I danced with were just embarrassed and miserable. I couldn't talk. They tried and there wasn't anything—I hadn't seen any plays or gone anywhere, ever. . . . I went in the coatroom to hide—and the girls who came in tried to be nice. I couldn't talk to them, either. Because I didn't know about any of the things they know about."

"But, good lord! All the nonsense they talk! How do you think those other girls would show up in your environment?"

It was true.

"Yes. Pretty well," he admitted. "But you can do all those things better than pretty well."

"I can climb trees, too," she said. "And what of it?"

"You'll forget about this," he said, "when you get home again."

"I'm not going home, Evan."

"DO you mean," he said presently, "that the city's got a hold on you in just this little while? Harriet, you don't realize—the way you live at home is just about ideal. I hope you'll think it over before you give up that natural life."

"It's not anything like so natural as this dance."

"That's crazy!" he said, worried about her. "It's natural to live a simple, outdoor life."

"The way we live——" she said, "it's just running away from life. Chick can stay all alone in the woods and take care of himself. But, Evan, don't you see—that's artificial."

"No, I don't see."

"I've been pretty miserable about Chick for a long time," she said. "We're terribly fond of each other, Chick and I, but he never talks much. He's been going off by himself more and more, and I know he's not happy. You see, Evan, he doesn't fit in anywhere.

"You're at home in the world the way it is," she went on. "It doesn't matter whether it's a bad world or a good world. It's the real one. If it's bad we ought to try to change it. Not run away from it. Evan, what's the use of Chick living all by himself? It's really only playing. I don't want to play. I want to work and be real. Even a job in a factory."

"For heaven's sake, Harriet!" he cried. "You don't know what you're talking about! You haven't any idea what that life is like——"

"That's what I'm trying to tell you, Evan. I don't know about any life except that artificial one."

"I suppose," he said presently, "this won't seem to have much to do with what you've been saying. Only I'd like to tell you how you seemed to me up there at the lake. Even that first time I knew you were the girl I wanted to marry."

"Why, you might just as well marry a—squirrel!" she cried.

It was like a slap in the face, to tell a girl you love her and have her take it like that.

"Evan, I couldn't marry you——"

She was crying now.

"Don't, Harriet! I mean—you can't help how you feel——"

"This hasn't anything to do with feeling."

"That's where you're wrong."

"Evan, you liked me there—in that life. But you wouldn't, in your kind of life. That's the reason I wanted to leave the dance. Because of you. Because I could see how dreadful it was for you, how embarrassing. If it hadn't been for you," she said as if her teeth were clenched, "I'd have stayed until the very end. I'd have been the last one to leave that dance!"

"You thought I was ashamed of you?" he said. "I'd be proud of you anywhere, any time——"

Without any warning she put both arms around his neck and kissed him on the mouth with a sort of innocent fierceness.

He held her fast.

"Let me go, Evan!" she drew away from him. "That's how I feel," she said. "But I'm not going to marry you—while you have all the advantage."

"I have?"

"Don't you see? I'll be trying to learn how to live in your world. Maybe I'll be stupid, unsuccessful——"

"Harriet," he said. "If you think I could help you in some ways, you could help me, too."

"How could I, Evan?" she asked, wonder in her voice.

"YOU'VE got what it takes," he said. "You're sweet and honest and brave. You'd be all that anywhere. I'm afraid you've got me wrong. I don't know such a lot about life and my world. I'm pretty mixed up sometimes."

"You are, Evan?"

"You know things I don't know. Things I need to know. Maybe if we tried we could work it out together?"

She laid her hand on his but he was as quiet as if a wild bird had flown to him. He did not want to startle her, he did not want in any way to urge her or even to persuade her. She must stay or go as she chose.

"Evan," she said, "maybe it's not very sensible—but it's such a wonderful idea!"

Italy—Yesterday and Today

By Robert A. Gurney

The Only Enemy That Italy Has Today Is the Teuton and Hitler Is the Pulling Strap of the Italian Boot

Traditional pomp was lacking as Canada-at-war welcomed her new Governor-General and first lady warmly and simply. Officers of the various defence units were among those who greeted the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice on their arrival at Ottawa. Princess Alice here shakes hands with Rear-Admiral Percy T. Nelles, of Canada's navy.

THE Italian people today stand on the threshold of an unknown future; ignorant of the cause for which they are fighting and uncertain as to what is to be gained through their alliance with Nazi Germany. The defence of Italian rights and interests, a phrase that may serve its purpose for the time being, is a direct contradiction of the aims of the Italian dictator, the ruler of the Romans or the Government of Italy. At the moment of declaring war against Britain and her Allies, Italy had no reason to suppose her rights and interests were in need of defending. On the other hand, Il Duce considered it unwise to allow Italy to assume a position of isolation just at the moment in which the history of Europe was taking on a decisive phase. Before this war is over Mussolini may wish he had assumed the mantle of isolation and postponed his choice of a partner until, at least, the situation had been sufficiently clarified to make it "certain" he would gain his ambitions.

Hitler, Mussolini's principal in the play, is determined that the historical events of twenty-five years ago—and after—shall be reversed. He has set the stage according to his own liking and in no one instance has he failed to shift the scenes of past incidents to the present. How would Italy fare if she came to the Hitler reversal of that particular event of Italian past history when, on May 23, 1915, the Government of Victor Emanuel III declared war on Austria-Hungary, the ally of Germany, and renounced provisions of the Triple Alliance which bound Italy, Germany and Austria-Hungary (1882-1912)?. The treaty was renewed in 1912 for a further twelve years.

The Government of Italy, in May, 1915 maintained that "Austria-Hungary in neglecting the obligations arising from the treaty, profoundly disturbed the status quo of the Balkan States, and created a situation by which she alone was to profit, to the detriment of the interests of the greatest importance, that her ally had so many times affirmed and proclaimed. So flagrant a violation of the letter and the spirit of the treaty, not alone justified the refusal by Italy to take side with the allies in a war provoked without her consent, but took away at the same time from the allies their most essential content and raison d'etre."

Her Vital Interests

THE language is precise, courteous and in true diplomatic vein. While the triple agreement provided a condition of benevolent neutrality, Italy excluded the idea that benevolent neutrality could be maintained "when one of her allies takes up arms for the realization of a programme diametrically opposed to the vital interests of the other ally; interests, the safeguarding of which constitutes the principle reason for the alliance itself."

On May 24, 1915, Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria-Hungary, published a proclamation "to my people," and condemned the action of Italy in much the same words as Italy today is condemned for her betrayal of her Great War allies, Britain and France. In the opening paragraph the Emperor said: "The King of Italy has declared war. History does not record such betrayal as this which has been accomplished by the King of Italy against his two allies. After an alliance of more than thirty years, during which time Italy has been able to increase her territory and develop her resources, she has left us and goes forth with her flag floating in the field of the enemy . . . when Italy turned her covetous eyes on our boundaries we decided to maintain peace and alliance at whatever great and painful sacrifice. This is especially painful to our paternal heart. But Italian cupidity, which wished to take advantage of the moment, was insatiable. Destiny, however, must be fulfilled."

Chancellor Speaks

BUT it remained for the German Chancellor, Von Bethmann-Hollweg, to heap coals of fire upon the head of Italy, styled "the perfidious enemy of the South." In his speech to the Reichstag on May 28, 1915, the Chancellor declared:

"When eight days ago I spoke, the hope still existed that it would be possible to put off the war with Italy. The hope was a delusion; in Germany it was impossible to believe that there would be such a sudden change. Today, the Italian Government has written for all time, in the book of history of the people and in letters of blood, its act of disloyalty . . . no one, either in Austria or in Germany, threatens Italy. History will judge in the future, whether Italy has allowed herself to be seduced by the fine promises of the Entente."

Further in his speech the Chancellor said: "In December, 1914, one could notice the first indication of the change in the Roman Cabinet, because it is always ready to seize upon new opportunities. On the other hand, Italy has never ceased, even in past times, to show her predilection for the changes of the dance; but now there is no ballroom; there is instead a bloody battlefield in which Germany and Austria-Hungary fight for their lives against a world of enemies. The Italian statesmen have played against their own people the same game that they have played against us."

It is not likely that Herr Hitler has forgotten the words of the Chancellor. They are matters of record and Italy may well have reason to remember them, perhaps before the close of hostilities. Hitler will not have the slightest hesitation, when the necessity demands, to throw aside his axis partner if, by doing so, he may gain what he desires.

Mussolini's Words

MUSSOLINI, throwing in his lot with Germany, speaks of the sacredness of undertakings. "A nation is not really great if it does not regard its undertakings as sacred, and if it recoils from those supreme trials which decide the course of history. We are taking up arms, after having solved the problems of our land frontiers, to settle those of our sea frontiers . . . we have burned our bridges behind us." Therein Il Duce attempts to justify the entrance of his country into the war on the side of Hitler.

There was some justification for Italy's decision to renounce the Triple Alliance in 1915. Her quarrel then was with Austria-Hungary and her people knew, only too well, what might be expected of Austria should Italy remain neutral and the war be won by Germany and her ally. If put to the test Mussolini, if he places any respect in undertakings, might easily rid himself and his country of that alliance by assuming it was an alliance of convenience, or one of friendship as between the King of Italy, the Emperor of Austria-Hungary and the Emperor of Germany.

Secret alliances were fashionable in Europe and clandestine diplomacy flourished. As now, the people were in ignorance of the truth and it was not until Teutonic barbarism was revealed that they, the people of Italy, took matters into their own hands and forced a decision. The King feared a revolution and bowed to the weight of public opinion. It may have been distasteful to him, personally.

Premier Salandra

THE declarations of the Emperor and the German Chancellor did not remain long unanswered. On June 2, 1915, Prime Minister Salandra, in a discourse in the Hall of Horatii in the Campidoglio at Rome, attempted to defend his country's honor. He said:

"The fundamental argument of the statesmen of Central Europe is summed up in the words "treachery and surprise" addressed to Italy—treachery and surprise towards her "faithful allies." It would be easy enough to ask a man if he has the right to speak of alliances and of respect for treaties who, representing with far less genius, but with equal indifference to moral considerations the traditions of Frederick the Great, Prince Otto von Bismarck, has dared to proclaim that "necessity knows no law" and has consented to his country's trampling underfoot, burning and burying in the depths of the ocean every document and every civilized practice of public international right . . . an atavistic reversion to primitive barbarism is more difficult to us Italians who are twenty centuries removed from it." Germany has not changed her basic principles under Hitler. Has Italy under Mussolini? An atavistic reversion to primitive barbarism may yet be revolting "to the Italian people."

Luigi Carnovale, in his book, "Why Italy Entered the Great War," published in Chicago in 1917 (Carnovale was in exile), discloses the true reason why Italy gave up her role of neutrality and joined with France and Britain. Carnovale was speaking of irredentism. It was, he said, a question with the Italians how to liberate thousands of their consanguinous relations who were oppressed in their own homes (that is, ground geopraphically, historically and morally Italian) by a stranger tyranny that the Italians themselves knew only too well.

Fighting Tyranny

"IT was a question with the Italians how to liberate thousands of their brothers of the same blood who were fighting, fighting, fighting against such tyranny and had always been longing and imploring to be returned to the breast of their promigenious Latin mother.

"It was a question with the Italians how to perform a duty of love and honor too long delayed.

"It was a question with the Italians how to complete their national unity in the northeastern division of their peninsula . . .

"Italy unsupported had never been able (without risk of her own territorial integrity or worse) to attack Austria alone, as that country was superior to her in number of inhabitants, of wealth, in her army, in the natural fortifications and because she was sure of the support of Germany.

"Italy was obliged to attack the enemy at the opportune moment; and that moment came when the enemy was engulfed in the Great War and when the historic fates seemed to will that her martyrology, synsethized in the binomial Trent-Trieste, should finally enter the last phase. Who would dare say that the Italian people were in the wrong?" asks Carnovale.

The Same Course

AND so, twenty-five years later, Italy finds herself—not Imperial Italy but Dictator Italy—following the identical same course. Il Duce may vision a new order in Europe, but he knows not what part his country will play in the last analysis. Could Italy tame the barbarian without sacrificing her "territorial integrity or worse" if Hitler should win? Or does Il Duce think he can play on the love of justice and honor of the British conqueror and still maintain his country's integrity? It may be worth his while to lose to win. But Mussolini will wait and see.

Carnovale also discusses that phase of Italy's future, for he says: "If the Central Empires (Germany and Austria) should conquer, Italy would remain at the mercy of those two nations made bolder by their recent victories. She would have suffered the vendetta which the Teutons had sworn because she had not drawn up in battle at their side. She would have been invaded and conquered." It is fair to add that Carnovale was speaking of Italy's position had she remained neutral, but there was then the fear of reprisal and that fear is still in the mind of Mussolini. The people of Italy dare not express their thoughts. Mussolini chose to speak for them and he misjudged the moment. France was broken, but he did not count on the courage of the British Empire, with whom he will have to reckon. Mussolini may yet have to change his course.

Seeker of Booty

WE have reviewed briefly Italy's entry into the last war, given some aspects of her national character and glimpsed her admitted callousness in dealing with friend or foe. Allowing Italy every ounce of fairness to balance some of the misdeeds of her former statesmen, only one conclusion can be reached—Italy is after booty. Are the Italian people willing to pay the price?

Will the Italian people be awakened from the lethargy into which they have been cast—for only a short time—and view their leader in the light of one bowing to the will of a ruthless destroyer of civilization and liberty, a leader ready to lick the hand once armed for their destruction?

Italy's pledged words in the month of May, 1915, which glared from placards on the walls of the cities were sinister things and the statements those placards contained are as true today as they were then. Italians cried: "We must never forget: Belgium, the cut throats of babies, the aged who were massacred, the violated women, the devastated countries, the bombarded hospitals for the sole mania of destruction by the army of His Majesty William II."

Italy, politically, has changed her method of administration, but the spots of the leopard remain. Sly, slinking Italy, the marauder of the night, making her kill when the wounded prey is no longer able to defend itself. If, in this war, the mortal blow is struck at culture and results in harm for real human progress, the censure of the world (civilized) must be accepted by the people of Italy and with that censure must come remorse and shame forever. The future will tell. Mussolini marches with Hitler. Italy will march where there are no enemy soldiers; the Italian fleet will ply waters safe for its ships. Il Duce dare not face a defeat on land or sea for fear there will be an awakening of the Italian people—an echo of the human conscience, the cringe of cowardice.

If Britain Is Invaded

"Stay Put" is the command of the War Office to civilians in Britain. The following statement was issued by the British Ministry of Information and contains instructions to the population on how to behave if such a thing as an invasion were attempted by Germany

THE Germans threaten to invade Great Britain. If they do so they will be driven out by our navy, our army and our air force. Yet the ordinary men and women of the civilian population will also have their part to play. Hitler's invasions of Poland, Holland, and Belgium were greatly helped by the fact that the civilian population was taken by surprise. They did not know what to do when the moment came. You must not be taken by surprise. This leaflet tells you what general line you should take. More detailed instructions will be given you when the danger comes nearer. Meanwhile, read these instructions carefully and be prepared to carry them out.

I

When Holland and Belgium were invaded the civilian population fled from their homes. They crowded on the roads, in cars, in carts, on bicycles, and on foot, and so helped the enemy by preventing their own armies from advancing against the invaders. You must not allow that to happen here. Your first rule, therefore, is:

(1) If the Germans come, by parachute, airplane, or ship, you must remain where you are. The order is "Stay put."

If the commander-in-chief decides that the place where you live must be evacuated, he will tell you when and how to leave. Until you receive such orders you must remain where you are. If you run away you will be exposed to far greater danger because you will be machine-gunned from the air as were civilians in Holland and Belgium, and you will also block the roads by which our own armies will advance to turn the Germans out.

II

There is another method which the Germans adopt in their invasion. They make use of the civilian population in order to create confusion and panic. They spread fake rumors and issue false instructions. In order to prevent this you should obey the second rule, which is as follows:

(2) Do not believe rumors and do not spread them. When you receive an order make quite sure that it is a true order and not a faked order. Most of you know policemen and your A.R.P. wardens by sight; you can also tell whether a military officer is really British or only pretending to be so. If in doubt ask the policeman or the A.R.P. warden. Use your common sense.

III

The army, the air force, and the local defence volunteers cannot be everywhere at once. The ordinary man and woman must be on the watch. If you see anything suspicious, do not rush round telling your neighbors all about it. Go at once to the nearest policeman, police station, or military officer and tell them exactly what you saw. Train yourself to notice the exact time and place where you saw anything suspicious, and try to give exact information. Try to check your facts. The sort of report which a military or police officer wants from you is something like this:

"At 5.30 p.m. tonight I saw twenty cyclists come into Little Squashborough from the direction of Great Mudtown. They carried some sort of automatic rifle or gun. I did not see anything like artillery. They were in grey uniforms."

Be calm, quick and exact. The third rule, therefore, is as follows:

(3) Keep watch. If you see anything suspicious, note it carefully and go at once to the nearest police officer or station, or to the nearest military officer. Do not rush about spreading vague rumors. Go quickly to the nearest authority and give him the facts.

IV

Remember that if parachutists come down near your home, they will not be feeling at all brave. They will not know where they are, they will have no food, they will not know where their companions are. They will want you to give them food, means of transport and maps. They will want you to tell them where they have landed, where their comrades are, and where our own soldiers are. The fourth rule, therefore, is as follows:

(4) Do not give any German anything. Do not tell him anything. Hide your food and your bicycles. Hide your maps. See that the enemy gets no petrol. If you have a car or motorbicycle, put it out of action when not in use. It is not enough to remove the ignition key; you must make it useless to anyone except yourself.

If you are a garage proprietor, you must work out a plan to protect your stock of petrol and your customers' gas. Remember that transport and petrol will be the invaders' main difficulties. Make sure that no invader will be able to get hold of your cars, petrol, maps, or bicycles.

V

You may be asked by army and air force officers to help in many ways. For instance, the time may come when you will receive orders to block roads or streets in order to prevent the enemy from advancing. Never block a road unless you are told which one you must block. Then you can help by felling trees, wiring them together or blocking the roads with cars. Here, therefore, is the fifth rule.

(5) Be ready to help the military in any way. But do not block roads until ordered to do so by the military or L.D.U. authorities.

VI

If you are in charge of a factory, store, or other works organize its defence at once. If you are a worker, make sure that you understand the system of defence that has been organized and know what part you have to play in it. Remember always that parachutists and fifth column men are powerless against any organized resistance. They can only succeed if they can create disorganization. Make certain that no suspicious strangers enter your premises.

You must know in advance who is to take command, who is to be second in command, and how orders are to be transmitted. This chain of command must be built up and you will probably find that ex-officers or n.c.o.'s, who have been in emergencies before, are the best people to undertake such command. The sixth rule is, therefore, as follows:

(6) In factories and shops, all managers and workmen should organize some system now by which a sudden attack can be resisted.

VII

The six rules which you have now read give you a general idea of what to do in the event of invasion. More detailed instructions may, when the time comes, be given you by the military and police authorities and by the local defence volunteers; they will not be given over the wireless, as that might convey information to the enemy. These instructions must be obeyed at once.

Remember always that the best defence of Great Britain is the courage of her men and women. Here is your seventh rule:

(7) Think before you act. But think always of your country before you think of yourself.

in the fact that one scarcely expects to see soldiers making handsome filing cabinets, desks, stools, tables, benches, and even bedside tables for the military hospital. This is one of the busiest shops in the depot these days when rapid mobilization calls for more and more equipment.

Next we come to a shop that looks more like a sail loft of the days of wind ships. It is the textile refitter's shop, where men skilled in the use of needle and palm and electric sewing-machines repair tents, packs and all other canvas equipment the army uses. In contrast to the hum and clatter of other departments of the depot, there's a quiet peace in this shop as the refitters ply their needles much like the cross-legged sailmakers on the decks of square-riggers.

Upstairs in one of the main buildings the armorers are at work. Theirs is the job of inspecting and maintaining all rifles, revolvers, machine-guns and automatic rifles—and bicycles. Ever since bicycles first were put into use by the army their maintenance has been the responsibility of the armorers. On a testing range these experts give all arms a thorough work-out, firing so many rounds through each, before passing them for service. In the workshop cases and cases of rifles are stacked up, waiting to be examined and corrected. There are bayonets to be sharpened, sights to be lined up, and scores of details to be attended to before new arms just received, or used weapons in for repairs and overhaul, are issued to the troops.

Tailors and Shoemakers

THERE'S a tailor's shop, where a staff of tailors repair and alter uniforms. And the shoe repair shop keeps one soldier and six civilain shoemakers constantly employed resoling and otherwise putting in good shape the thousands of pairs of boots that pound the parade ground.

In a spacious, well-lighted building the mechanics of the motor vehicle fitters' shop look after the smooth running of all the army's mobile equipment, except the vehicles used by the Army Service Corps, which maintains a repair shop of its own. In these days of wholesale mechanization, the motor mechanic is one of the most important men in the service, for even the best of gasoline-driven equipment needs constant attention if breakdowns costly in lives and material are to be avoided. The expert mechanics in the fitters' shop swarm over the vehicles as fast as they come in for overhaul and repairs, and will tear them right down to the ground, if necessary, attending to every detail, even to the replacement of cushions and canvas tops.

Busiest and noisiest of all the workshops, and actually the hub of the whole District Depot system, are the blacksmith and machine shops with their forges, lathes and power drill presses. These are the shops where all iron and steel equipment and fittings are made, and which specialize in replacement parts for guns and gun mountings. As in all branches of the depot, it takes a good man to qualify for service in this vitally important department.

Mobile Workshops

THESE are just a few glimpses of the work of the District Ordnance Depot here. Many of the men trained in the depot are transferred to other units, or called overseas to carry on their important duties in the field. In the theatre of war the Ordnance Corps is the breakdown crew—and a lot of other things besides. It must rescue bogged-dow, damaged or mechanically defective motorized units, guns and other equipment, and for that purpose it has to operate mobile workshops in the field. It must look after the maintenance and inspection of all ordnance stores and attend to all kinds of mechanical and technical details.

The Ordnance Corps is a unit of skilled artisans, tradesmen and technicians, and the Ordnance Depot is a concentration of these experts. But in modern warfare every active service unit—infantry, artillery, engineers—must number in its ranks a large body of qualified mechanics and other tradesmen. The Ordnance Corps undertakes the jobs too big for the tradesmen attached to the other units to do.

So it can be understood that the army's demand for skilled men is based upon a very real need. Tradesmen who register at the District Recruiting Depot in the Bay Street Armoury are very carefully catalogued according to their qualifications, for the army has no wish to put a good tradesman into the wrong field of service. These tradesmen, when qualified, receive higher pay. There has been a good response to the calls for such men, and the recruiting officers are now becoming a little "choosey," taking only the best.

Spain and Gibraltar

WHATEVER the future of Gibraltar in war and peace may be, one fact is worth remembering about it, particularly in view of the claims of exuberant Spanish Falangists. We hold Gibraltar today not as a mere prize of war, but as part of a bargain in which we gave good value for what we got. It is quite true that Sir George Rooke took the Rock in 1704, in the War of the Spanish Succession, and that Sir George Elliot held it during the famous siege from 1779 to 1783, when the Spaniards attacked it as allies of the American colonists in the War of Independence. But by the Treaty of Paris, which ended that war—in which Spain was on the winning side—Spain agreed to our retention of Gibraltar in return for her acquisition of Florida and Minorca. She sold Florida twenty years later to the United States. If, therefore, Spain desires to regain Gibraltar the equitable procedure would appear to be for her to purchase Florida from the United States and cede it to us in return for the Rock, together with Minorca. It is a proposal we might well consider.—From The Spectator.

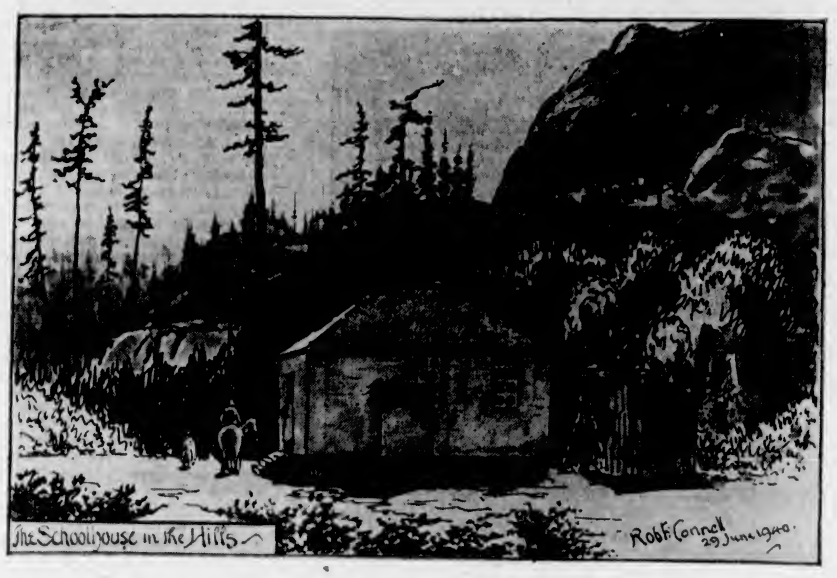

Fresh Aspects of an Old Road

By Robert Connell

BYRON begins one of the stanzas in "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage" with these words to which I think every Nature-lover will set his hand as true:

"Dear Nature is the kindest mother still,
Though always changing in her aspect mild."

Nature indeed shares with Truth the property of being at once both old and new. I have a book on my shelves with the title "Changed Aspects of Unchanged Truths," and we might call some of our old books on Nature "Changing Aspects of Unchanging Nature." Gilbert White rambling about his little parish of Selborne for a lifetime would have liked it and so would Thoreau by the shores of Walden Pond, for both "Selborne" and "Walden" are old scenes always seen afresh because looked at understandingly. In one of old Dr. John Brown's essays—he was the author of "Rab and His Friends," perhaps best of all dog stories—he speaks of the difference between seeing and observing. I don't remember the exact words and cannot put my hand on the place; but he says that in observation a man is not content with seeing passively, but "comes to the window to look out." It is when we do this that Mother Nature is discovered to the full of change and new interest. The merit of White's "Selborne" lies not only in its simple straightforward record of experience, but in its long-proved power to send readers young and old to the window to look out for themselves. And the measure of usefulness for all writing about Nature is just the degree in which it has this effect on its readers.

By this time you will have made up your mind that I am going to take you along familiar ways. And indeed you, my readers, and I went this way last Spring—in March, I think—and again about a year ago. Since my first visit just thirty-nine years ago I have gone over it driving, motoring and walking more times than I can remember. Every yard of it almost has some association that roots it in the past: old friends now "gone into the world of light" are chief of these. Rambles in high Summer, in tender Spring, in blushing Autumn, and particularly one in Winter when the streams were frozen on the cliffs and our feet crunched over the frosty ground. Scene and sound suggested the lines in "Morte d'Arthur," where Sir Bedivere bears the dying king to the border of the lake:

And barren chasms, and all to left and right
The bare black cliff clanged round him, as he based
His feet on juts of slippery crag that rang

Uphill to Humpback

IN the warm Summer weather and not a drop of rain for weeks the old road from Goldstream station climbs a particularly dry and gravelly way. After the early and the latter rains the walking is easier, and what is more the eye is refreshed by the glistening of the moist pebbles. But now all is grey and dusty under foot. Refreshment comes from the greenery of the banks and the overhanging bushes. The latter are in the prime of Summer verdancy, the rich color that follows the tenderer hues of Spring. Here among the young alders and firs the hazels are conspicuous by their clear green and by the peculiar flattening of their sprays which with the pliable stems gives the shrub its graceful appearance. Today we notice that some of the bushes are more plentifully blessed with fruit than usual, and that some of the clusters instead of having only one perfect nut have two or even three. With the rosy tips of the long leaf-like beak which terminates the nut's sheath the fruit clusters are striking objects.

History by the Way

YEARS ago the sides of the road and the ground enclosed by the old fences were not covered with shrubbery and young trees as now, and I remember very well the late John Tolmie pointing out to me the pyrolas in flower on the floor of the open woods just above the railway. Meanwhile we content ourselves with the very plentiful little flowers of the yerba buena, Micromeria douglasii. Botanically this is a find of Menzies, but the Spanish fathers had already found it in California and made use of its aromatic leaves, giving it the pretty Spanish name it still bears. Another plant that is still blooming and thus adding a pleasant touch of color to the wayside landscape is the Nootka lupine, another of Menzies' finds. Like the Nootka rose our lupine by the Humpback road has a distinct historical interest, taking us back a century and a half to the controversy that centred in the Indian village at the entrance to Nootka Sound and had such a world-wide consequences. Thus as we tramp laboriously up the hill our thoughts travel away from the loose gravel that makes our steps unsteady and we are with Captains Cook and Vancouver and the officers from Mexico, all of whom contributed to the historical setting of our Island home.

This historical significance of our wild flowers and native shrubs and trees is of importance in connection with such an interesting undertaking as Mrs. Beavan has set on foot in the wild flower park on Beach Drive. Here gathered together in a varied piece of ground are already to be seen plants from a wide range and the visitor is able, in proportion to his existing knowledge, to learn something of our aboriginal vegetation and in proportion to his power of imagination to go back through the years to the discoverers and pioneers who came and saw our shores. The historical field is even wider in its plant relations, for as I have often pointed out many of our plants have an extension far to the south and east as well as away to the northwest around the Pacific to the Asiatic coasts. Thus the historical associations of plants like the science of botany know no national boundaries.

Here by our way is a dash of gold, a handsome composite plant with flat-topped clusters of flower heads of a very deep yellow bordering on orange. This is the native groundsel so often met with on our more open hillsides, for example, above Shawnigan Lake on the slopes of Mount Wood. Botanically it is known as Senecio fastigiatus, the clustered senecio. We have still another handsome native groundsel, Senecio triangularis, the triangular senecio, so called because of its conspicuously triangular leaves. It will be found now in bloom up our gravely stream-beds from Sooke River west. It grows three or four feet high. One of the most plentiful of the wayside flowers up here just now is one that appears to have been introduced during the past twenty-five years. Henry's "Flora of Southern B.C." does not mention it, but the Museum Catalogue of 1921 gives it as collected by the late J. R. Anderson at Waugh Creek and reported from Shawnigan Lake. I first saw it about Kirby Creek, but since then it has spread widely, particularly in the Goldstream valley and river flats. It does not appear to be a troublesome weed to farmer or gardener, and in some situations it loves it is quite an attractive plant. It likes moist, shady places and when seen as we look down on it in this deep, dark ditch where it grows luxuriously, its compound flowers are like golden stars in the purple mist of its slender stems. Its name, which I have kept to the last, is Lactuca muralis, the wall or ivy-leaved lettuce. It does actually belong to the genus of our common salad vegetable. It has two distinctive features. One is that it has five strap or ray flowers in each head, and so the head looks like a single five-petalled flower. The other is the beautiful pattern of its delicate leaves, which is like that of delicate ivy in the outermost lobe.

Schoolhouse in the Valley

AFTER passing the city waterworks plant the road winds up and then drops into a little valley where one of our most primitive schoolhouses stands. I once said that a school in such a position offered exceptional opportunities for budding geologists. Now as we wander along we notice that it affords something more attractive to growing youth. Blackberries, salmonberries and wineberries all grow along the roadside and the first-named in particular abundance. In places the wineberries (or red huckleberries) overhang the blackberries, and you may vary your dessert or mix it as you please. Close by the blackberries is a handsome fruiting plant of the red-fruited baneberry, Actaea arguta, but just what is the literal meaning of "arguta" authorities disagree. It is one of those words that has a plenitude of uses. "Clear, sharp, or pungent; neat, graceful, quick; melodious, noisy, creaking; wise, witty, sly"; these are some. I think the last perhaps gives us the clue to its use as a name for this plant in the sense of "deceptive," because the bright red fruits might suggest to the young that they were edible; this they certainly are not, and that is why in English we call it "baneberry" or poison berry. It is, however, very handsome today with its long slender spike-like cluster of berries rising above the lower herbage.

In the neighborhood of the old school paths run up the steep flank of Humpback Hill. Some of them are undoubtedly the work of generations of active feet in play hours, but further up they lose themselves in sheep tracks and deer tracks. Up one of these we go, no easy business because the dry ground and the dry grass are alike extremely slippery and the steep angle of the hillside still further increases the difficulty. However, by the aid of branch and stem we work our way up and arrive below the cliffs. The gay beds of Spring flowers are all gone, most of them leaving not a trace behind except an empty seed vessel, sere and brown. The mosses that in Spring and Winter make so great a part of the beauty of the cliffs and ledges are dried up. The licorice ferns have disappeared till the Autumn rains come. The sword ferns are still green, but the parsley fern has lost its native verdure and is harsh and greyish green. At this season we find numbers of small habenarias or rein orchids. Their leaves are brown, but their long slender greenish white flower spikes flourish with the moisture from their ample tubers. The flowers are sweet-scented. The species is the common Habenaria (Piperia) elegans or elegent rein orchid. Here it flourishes in the thickly moss-covered soil of the ledges. The nodding onion, Allium cernuum, is plentiful on the grassy slopes with its pink flowers. Scattered specimens of the narrow-leaved Indian paint brush, Castelleia angustifolia, still remain, showing brilliant scarlet flowers, or, rather, bracts, for like our flowering dogwood the paint brush attracts chiefly by colors of the leaves that surround the flowers proper, their green giving way at the tip to the characteristic hue of the species.

Under the Cliffs

WHAT could be a more delightful resting-place for a Summer hour than this where we rest on the thick, dry moss? Opposite us rise the walls of Mount Macdonald, layer upon layer of stony lava all tipped to the right. Just above its left shoulder is the horn of the waning moon. Seen through the leaves of the arbutus that arches above us the clear sky takes on an intenser blue. From where we sit we face the profile of the lower part of the cliffs against the sky, massive but softened by the shadow of the leaves and branches. The dry moss is little removed in color from the rock, but its texture marks the difference. At one place where the covering has fallen away the newly exposed surface shows narrow grey streaks that tell of the original fluidity of the cold, hard stone.

"The solid earth whereon we tread
In tracts of fluent heat began."

As we sit and look a movement attracts the eye. Presently the movement becomes an object, the object resolves itself into a bird's head, and the head takes to itself a body. It is a grouse. Now we can hear it as it moves slowly among the dry fallen leaves of the arbutus, and presently only the sound is left, becoming fainter and fainter.

Elderberry Variation

NOW we pick our way gingerly down the slope, for the descent is likely to be more precipitate than pleasant. The scream of an unseen hawk comes up the valley with the light breeze. Soon we are on the road again. On the way back a dry ditch that in Winter carries a considerable stream tempts to exploration. Lady ferns and purple hedge nettle, white wafer parsley and yellow musk brighten the shady trench. From the bank the pink flowers of the bleeding heart peep out and the golden fruit of the salmonberry hang down from the slender branches. Resuming the road we see the common golden-rod, Solidago canadensis, in full flower; we missed it in our blackberrying as we did also the few plants of the handsome fireweed or willow herb, to give it its British name. Patches of ox-eye daisy are in flower, a bad thing in the field, but an ornament to the roadside.

In the little valley by the waterworks we hear the song of birds and watch the flight of a western flycatcher as it sallies forth from a fence in pursuit of its prey. It is a capital place for birds with the abundance of water and the variety of trees, native and exotic. While chatting with Mr. Roskelly over his garden fence, he asks if we have ever seen a yellow-fruited elderberry, and when we confess we have not, he goes up to a red-fruited one on the slops above the garden and from its neighbor brings a beautiful cluster of bright yellow fruit. It is quite obvious from the leaf and the character of the fruit cluster that the yellow is a color phase of the scarlet Sambuca racemosa, and since returning home we find that Sudbury in his "Trees of the Pacific Coast" says that it sometimes has yellow berries. He calls it, by the way, Sambucus callocarpa, but it is the same species. Neither Anderson nor Henry mention the yellow form, so I take it that this Humpback Reservoir tree is really a rarity here.

Before catching the train we take a look at a patch of a very pretty and rather uncommon flower, Collomia grandiflora. Its leafy clusters, glandular and scented, bear very pretty pale salmon-pink tubular flowers, sufficiently striking, I think, to attract the notice of the most casual passer-by. For many years I have looked on these plants as they come into bloom at midsummer and always with admiration. But here comes the train!

An Attic Guest Room Curtails a Suburban Week-End

A Helen and Warren Story

(Copyright, 1940, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

But not consulted by her sister-in-law. Rushed upstairs to admire the redecorated bedroom.

"Huh, if they don't keep you awake—that wallpaper'll give you a nightmare!" scoffed Warren.

"Your idea of humor!" snapped his sister. "Careful, this woodwork's not dry. Everyone says I should've been a professional decorator."

Her frequent redecorating urges. Every current fad—the time and expense!

"The trouble I've had with the paperhangers! They could've put on that border today. Just won't work Saturday."

"Where did you put the furniture?" Helen's polite show of interest.

"In the back hall and the guest room. We've moved in there. This week-end you'll be upstairs."

Upstairs! A dread premonition. That slant-roofed attic room——

"Why don't we move up?" suggested Lawrence. "Give them the guest room."

But no bath up there. Having to go down to the guest bathroom.

A rich, heavy dinner. Carrie's appetite made no concessions to the weather.

Helen's dutiful murmurs of interest. But thinking of that attic room.

Why hadn't Carrie phoned that the paperhangers weren't through? Why have them come if they must sleep in the attic?

After dinner, all settled on the porch in overfed lethargy. The reluctant Bobbie sent protesting to bed.

And the incessant drone of Carrie's voice! Now on her endless maid topic. Her most frequent complaint—they never understood Bobbie. So high-strung——

With the deepening dusk, a squadron of mosquitoes. The terrace porch unscreened.

"Slaughtered that one," Warren slapped his ankle. "Guess we'll have to go in."

"Dear, not yet!" pleadingly. "The fireflies—I love to watch them."

"Ever hear about the Irishman—when the mosquitoes came after him with lanterns?"

Talking on about the tiny insects with their self-generated glow. If only some way to reproduce their wireless, no-battery light!

"Quarter of twelve." The score settled in her favor. "Time we all went up."

But Helen's postponing dread. That attic room!

"Oh, I think I'll sit up a while. I notice you've that new book on Brazil."

"No you don't!" Warren ground out his cigar. "All day tomorrow to read."

"Now I think we'd better change rooms," Lawrence folding the bridge chairs.

Up to the attic, ghostly in the dim light. Shadowy forms, some sheeted. The repository of unused furniture, boxes, trunks.

Only two small dormer windows. Yes, open—but not a breath of air!

"None anywhere tonight," grumped Warren. "It'll cool off later."

"I'm sure I won't sleep! Oh, I know that's the wrong attitude. But Carrie might've phoned us the men weren't through——"

"Guess she thought those birds would work Saturday. Hello, this thing's handy," hanging his linen coat on the dressmaker's form.

But always his sister expected them to put up with any inconvenience. Grimly determined to have them out every other week-end.

Often Helen wondered why. Because she dreaded to come—and Carrie knew it?

"Dear, if it were our home—you think we'd send anyone up here?"

"Guess not, Kitten. Well, no use kicking," he yawned. "Try to get some sleep."

"But we must have air!" unpacking her batiste nightgown. "Open the screens—won't be so many mosquitoes up here."

Her resentment forced back. Not make it worse by complaints—only two nights.

Turning down the featherweight blanket. In this suffocating oppression, even the sheet too heavy! And cooler without any pillow.

"Dear, it must be after one—and not a bit cooler!"

"It's this confounded roof!" he growled. "Instead of that fool wallpaper—should've put the money in insulation."

As the night dragged on, his disgust more vehement. No longer so tolerant of his sister's foibles.

"And be eaten by mosquitoes?"

"Better than being suffocated!" reaching for her robe.

"Hold on, Kitten," he pulled the light chain. "Where're my slippers? Might as well go with you. Can't sleep here."

A moment later, with bundled sheets, stealthily down the stairs. The eerie quiet of a sleeping house.

The halls permeated with paint. Stronger as they passed the open bedroom.

"Dear, you take the glider. I'll curl up in this big chair. Oh, this is wonderful—air!"

"And mosquitoes!" A vicious slap.

"I don't care!" tucking the sheet around her. "At least we can breathe——"

The night noises of the country. A symphony of tree-frogs and crickets.

Her hand stretched out. Something warm—alive——

"Eh?" at her startled cry. "What's wrong?"

"I hope not! But it was startling—touching warm fur."

Again Helen snuggling down. The kitten an added warmth, yet its contented purr soporific. Perhaps she could sleep now——

The creak of the screen door. A flashlight swept the porch!

"Get that blamed thing out of my eyes!" Warren's irate growl.

"Oh, I'm sorry if I woke you. I felt Jet against my hand——"

"I suppose this was your idea—you're the fresh-air fiend. But you don't expect to sleep with these mosquitoes?"

"I'd rather have mosquitoes than no air!"

"Well, you can't stay out here," her curt ultimatum. "In the morning you'll be seen from the road! And what will the neighbors think?"

"Hot-box?" she bristled. "Others have slept up there very comfortably."

"Must've been in the Winter—not a night like this. Or else too polite to kick. But I'm not!"

"I'm sorry, Warren, but it's hot everywhere tonight. Tomorrow we'll make some other arrangements."

"I've already made 'em!" he exploded. "Tomorrow night we sleep at home!"

"Know darn well it will in ours! And no bloodthirsty insects, either."

Helen's heart-leaping relief. The week-end curtailed—home tomorrow! Visions of their cool breeze-swept bedroom.

"Now you beat it back to bed, Carrie," jerking up his sheet. "And whatever the neighbors think, you're not to wake us early. We'll get what sleep we can—between the heat and the mosquitoes!"

Forestry—A War Appeal

CANADA today, along with the other countries of the British Empire, is engaged in what may well be the most devastating war of all time. Many things are necessary in order to win this conflict: efficient armaments, trained men, courage and initiative—these are essentials, but they are not enough. Behind the men in the firing line the Empire must give support with all its great economic resources.

At the same time it is essential to keep in mind the reconstruction period to come, after the war is over. Thousands of men will be returning to Canada seeking employment, seeking to resume their normal lives, quick to be disillusioned if they find inefficiency, distress and poverty at home. On the battlefields, on the seas and in the air they will have won the right to a greater Canada of the future.

As part of its war contribution and as part of its contribution to the greater nation of tomorrow, Canada has immense tracts of forests. While this conflict goes on, these forests are of tremendous value. With the disruption of wood and pulp production in the Scandinavian countries and Finland, the Empire is dependent upon Canada for forest products. Exports to the United States will greatly increase, bringing to Canada much-needed foreign exchange.

There will be, in brief, a rapidly-mounting pressure upon the woodlands of the Dominion. And unless that pressure is kept under control, unless a sane policy of forest conservation is followed, Canada will pay a price far too severe for any patriot to contemplate.

No one in Canada, no matter what his job or profession, can afford to allow Canada's forests to be wasted. Three out of every five workmen in manufacturing industries are dependent upon wood products for their livelihoods. Depletion of Canada's forest lands would injure irreparably this nation's tourist industry, which the Dominion is this year spending $500,000 to cultivate, and from which two or three hundred million dollars of revenue should result.

The Canadian Forestry Association is pledged to protect Canada's forests. It will need the help of every public-spirited Canadian.—(From Forest and Outdoors.)

To His Mother

"My Mission Fulfilled"

Among the personal belongings of a young R A F pilot in a bomber squadron who was recently reported "missing, believed killed," was a letter to his mother—to be sent to her if he were killed. The letter has been widely published in England and was recently on a radio broadcast. The original letter, is is understood, is to be preserved in one of the British museums.

"THIS letter was perhaps the most amazing one I have ever read; simple and direct in its wording but splended and uplifting in its outlook," says the young officer's station commander. "It was inevitable that I should read it—in fact he must have intended this, for it was left open in order that I might be certain that no prohibited information was disclosed.

"I sent the letter to the bereaved mother, and asked her whether I might publish it anonymously, as I feel its contents may bring comfort to other mothers, and that every one in our country may feel proud to read of the sentiments which support 'an average airman' in the execution of his present arduous duties. I have received the mother's permission, and I hope this letter may be read by the greatest possible number of our countrymen at home and abroad."

Text of the Letter

DEAREST Mother—Though I feel no premonition at all, events are moving rapidly, and I have instructed that this letter be forwarded to you should I fail to return from one of the raids which we shall shortly be called upon to undertake. You must hope on for a month, but at the end of that time you must accept the fact that I have handed my task over to the extreme capable hands of my comrades of the Royal Air Force, as so many splendid fellows have already done.

First, it will comfort you to know that my role in this war has been of the greatest importance. Our patrols far out over the North Sea have helped to keep the trade routes clear for our convoys and supply ships, and on one occasion our information was instrumental in saving the lives of the men in a crippled lighthouse relief ship. Though it will be difficult for you, you will disappoint me if you do not at least try to accept the facts dispassionately, for I shall have done my duty to the utmost of my ability. No man can do more, and no one calling himself a man could do less.

I have always admired your amazing courage in the face of continual setbacks; in the way you have given me as good an education and background as anyone in the country; and always kept up appearances without ever losing faith in the future. My death would not mean that your struggle has been in main. Far from it. It means that your sacrifice is as great as mine. Those who serve England must expect nothing from her; we debase ourselves if we regard our country as merely a place in which to eat and sleep.

History resounds with illustrious names who have given all, yet their sacrifice has resulted in the British Empire, where there is a measure of peace, justice, and freedom for all, and where a higher standard of civilization has evolved, and is still evolving, than anywhere else. But, this is not only concerning our own land. Today we are faced with the greatest organized challenge to Christianity and civilization that the world has ever seen, and I count myself lucky and honored to be the right age and fully trained to throw my full weight into the scale. For this I have to thank you. Yet there is more work for you to do. The home front will still have to stand united for years after the war is won. For all that can be said against it, I still maintain that this war is a very good thing; every individual is having the chance to give and dare all for his principle like the martyrs of old. However long the time may be, one thing can never be altered—I shall have lived and died an Englishman. Nothing else matters one jot nor can anything ever change it.

You must not grieve for me, for if you really believe in religion and all that it entails that would be hyprocrisy. I have no fear of death; only a queer elation. . . . I would have it no other way. The universe is so vast and so ageless that the life of one man can only be justified by the measure of his sacrifice. We are set to the world to acquire a personality and a character to take with us that can never be taken from us. Those who just eat and sleep, prosper and procreate, are no better than animals if all their lives thay are at peace.

I firmly and absolutely believe that evil things are sent into the world to try us; they are sent deliberately by our Creator to test our metal because He knows what is good for us. The Bible is full of cases where the easy way out has been discarded for moral principles.

I count myself fortunate in that I have seen the whole country and known men of every calling. But with the final test of war I consider my character fully dedeveloped. Thus at my early age my earthly mission is already fulfilled and I am prepared to die with just one regret, and one only—that I could not devote myself to making your declining years more happy by being with you; but you will live in peace and freedom and I shall have directly contributed to that, so here again my life will not have been in vain. Your loving son ——

PREMIER PASSES THROUGH BARBED WIRE BARRICADE

Mr. Winston Churchill, the Prime Minister, With General Sir Edmund Ironside Leaving the Admiralty. General Ironside Is Saluting the Guard.

Ultimate Liberty

THAT a nation or body of people can be the special object of God's care is taught in the Bible and is a truth full of encouragement. Words such as "Israel," "the Remnant," "the Church," the Elect," are used with definite reference to the overshadowing providence of God. By worldly standards of power none of these societies would be very highly esteemed; yet to each may be applied the words of St. Paul, "God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that were mighty, and things which were despised hath God chosen." He has chosen them out of the world, and whatever may happen to them because they are still in the world, yet with Him they are secure, and from Him they shall receive such good things as the world can neither give nor take away.

In all this can be seen a profound truth. Minorities, though, as was once said, they must suffer, are the salt of the earth. Again and again in their suffering has lain their savour. Leonidas at Thermopylae, Judas Maccabaeus in that last battle where for the first time he knew defeat, Sir Richard Grenville in the Revenge, the defenders of Calais fighting to the end under the banner of "No Surrender," are select souls of whom, following the author of "Hebrews," we may say that "the world was not worthy." They are the glory of their times, but how far do they surpass the common measure of their times?

Yet this is not the whole substance of the faith of the Bible. Now and then it is as though an ampler vision were made possible of a saved world and a restored creation. Then we catch a glimpse of the world which God has made, rescued from the evil that has invaded it by that more wonderful work of His love and grace whereby He makes all things new in the new heavens and the new earth. What that means in detail, what it involves in each individual life, is beyond man's power to say. But it is certain that frustration and futility are not the final verdict to be passed upon creation. The verses from Romans manifest a very different expectation. Of this great passage a modern commentator has said that St. Paul "views the universe with an 'eye that hath watch o'er man's mortality.'" The Apostle knows that nothing can escape rain and decay; but he knows also that as the creation is one in its agony and bondage so shall it be one in its liberty and glory. Evil and its signs are abundant enough, but the future does not belong to them. It is he who believes in the triumph of evil who is deluded, not he whose hope is stayed upon a final redemption.

But for that redemption, for that last and greatest Day of the Lord, we must wait. Meanwhile the struggles and sufferings mark a crisis in the world's history. The battle is joined with evil which has shown the more clearly the viciousness of its poisonous and tyrannical nature. Here and now creation moves either away from or towards the freedom of the children of God. Here and now men stand in jeopardy every hour, their sufferings a glory, their death a sacrifice. They stand for the promise of a better world in which the marks of its Creator's purpose shall be rescued from distortion and destruction. They witness to a destiny in which freedom shall be at last achieved. Day by day they inspire us with renewed courage as we wait in faith and patience for the ultimate deliverance.

Unhappy Italians

THERE has been consternation in Soho and the Charing Cross Road and Saffron Hill since Italy entered the war against the Allies. These are the Italian quarters in London, inhabited, up to June 10, by 17,000 Italians, some of them naturalized British citizens of Italian origin. These latter are safe, though their businesses will suffer through Mussolini's act, and so are a large proportion of those designated "friendly Italians." But there were a large proportion of Fascists in London, many of them waiters and restaurateurs. These are now in internment camps. Their restaurants are closed or their places as waiters filled by Englishmen.

Headquarters of Italians in London was in Charing Cross Road, offices of "Italia Nostra," a weekly publication with a circulation of 5,000, and headquarters of the Italian Youth organization, the Association of Wounded ex-Soldiers, of the Italian school, and of the Association of ex-Servicemen. Also in this building were housed the Italian Co-operative Club, the ex-Alpini Association, the Culinary Exchange, and the After Hours Sporting Club. It was one of the first places raided by the police.

Here, as in Italy, the Fascist Party held the key positions and, although compulsion was impossible, those who wanted to get on had to join it. The Italian school was staffed by Fascist teachers from Rome.

Now only the Italian Hospital and the Italian church, a dingy brick building with a square tower that even on a dull day reminds one of the Sunny South, remain. Many Italians have been given the choice of returning to Italy in exchange for Britishers, or being interned for the duration.

But Italy's entry into the war is hardest on the little men, the ice cream vendors and proprietors of little food shops in poor districts. Many of them have lived here for twenty years or more. Some fought the Germans in the last war. Mussolini's quarrel is not theirs. There is a little man I know who brings his fruit barrow to Fleet Street. Always smiling he was, and generous in giving you over-weight. He is still there with his barrow, but he does not smile any more. Times are hard, he says. In this war, perhaps more than ever before, the innocent must suffer for the sins of the guilty.

The Decisive Hour—The Difference Between Churchill and Hitler

"When Power Is Given It Is Not Measured. When Power Is Seized Let the World Beware"

The events of the past weeks have stirred the nation, and The Round Table and The Lancet, two great journals, publish two steadying contributions on the fundamental issues of the situation.

"IT is the spirit of the civil population, it is the Home Front, that Hitler in the last resort must break if he is to achieve his swift decision. He will do what he can without any of those scruples or instincts which distinguish men from beasts of prey," says The Round Table.

"The face of this England we love so well may be scarred. Our English homes may have to suffer worse things than any they have suffered in all their mellow history since the Saxons swept slaying and burning over the land. By day and night the unarmed men and women of our cities may have to endure what the Poles and the Finns endured, and, maybe, for a longer time.

"Though the sea still serves as 'a moat defensive to a house,' invasion may descend on Shakespeare's country in a manner even he could never have conceived. All this may happen to 'this land of such dear souls'; but, if it does, those souls will keep faith to the bitter end with England's past and the hopes of England's future.

"We know we are ill prepared, especially in ald power. But the time is past for lamenting that or disputing about it. We must fight as we are, with all such strength as we have got. We know, too, that, save for indomitable France, we must fight alone.

"Joyfully as we greeted the arrival of troops from the Dominions, they were but the vanguard of armies that cannot be here in time. The sympathy of India—even at heart, we believe, of Congress India—is on our side; and there and in other countries of the sun multitudes of our fellow subjects are doing all that labor and goodwill can do to add to our material resources for the campaign of 1941—but not for that of 1940.

"And, lastly, for reasons we will understand—remembering the 'great flood' of the Atlantic, remembering, too, how slow we have been ourselves to recognize the threat to our own existence—the great people, whose freedom springs from the same roots as our own, are ready to offer everything to a cause they know to be theirs as much as ours, everything except the one thing needed in these coming weeks, their fighting strength. So England and France, the two makers of liberty in modern Europe, must fight alone to save it.

"More than once in our history we have faced a similar ordeal and seen it through. But never before have the foes of freedom been armed with such powers of destruction, and never before has so much been at stake. If the Spanish Armada had succeeded in its purpose, if Trafalgar had been lost, the cause of liberty would have been set back, but not irreparably, not for very long.

Blackest Catastrophe

"BUT from Hitler's victory there would be no recovery as far ahead as we can see. For science has put such weapons in a tyrant's hands that, once disarmed, the bravest of his opponents are helpless and the only limits to the duration of his tyranny are the limits of his ruthlessness. It is the simple truth, therefore, that a victory for Hitler would be far the blackest catastrophe in the annals of the world. All over Europe the lights would be put out—and far beyond Europe. The fate of Asia would be sealed. The safety of America would be in peril.

"The plain man may not be able to discern the full depth and breadth of the disaster to humanity which such a downfall of Christendom would involve. But he sees quite clearly enough and in solid shape the danger that threatens him and his and all he cares for.

"He has been startled to observe the gifted German people becoming the 'living tools' of men like Hitler, Goering, Ribbentrop, Himmler, Goebbels. He knows that Englishmen can never yield their necks to such a yoke. He felt that Lord Halifax spoke for all England when he said a few months ago, 'I would a hundred times sooner be dead than live in a world under the heel of Nazi dominance.' And the sudden onset of the danger, which had seemed vague and half unreal, has not weakened that conviction, it has stiffened it.

"In that stubborn temper the British people, all of them, men and women in their homes as much as those who fight abroad, will face an ordeal which may test our national character more sternly than anything in all our eventful past. Where the weight of it will fall, how heavy it will be, and how long it will last may be determined by the upshot of the desperate battle now raging beyond the Channel. But this much is certain now.

Outstanding Weakness

"A FULL-SCALE assault on England cannot be indefinitely prolonged. Hitler has used the gifts of science to make a hell on earth; he has tried to humble manhood with machinery; and that may prove his undoing in the end. For the time must come when mechanized warfare has consumed his last reserves of petrol and he will be unable to replenish them—the one outstanding, and, it may be, fatal weakness in all his great design.

"Till that time comes, then, we must hold on, whatever the odds against us, whatever we may have to suffer. Every week that postpones the decision makes it harder for Hitler to obtain it in his favor, till at last, if we still stand firm, the fury of attack will slacken and die down.

"If and when that happens, it is generally agreed, the decisive hour will have struck, but to sound the knell of Hitler and his 'evil things,' not of justice, truth and freedom. For then, provided always that throughout the weeks or months of strain and suffering we have maintained our output of war material to the utmost of our strength, the grim anxieties of 1940 will begin to fade before the brighter prospects of 1941.

Two Ways of Life

"THIS struggle between two ways of life that express themselves as totalitarianism or democracy will not be finished, nor did it begin in Flanders," says The Lancet in replying to its own question. "The question, 'How does a nation get into the state of mind of the present Germany?' cannot be answered without considering how we Western people have developed our present culture. It is not enough to say that the German enjoys the experience of submission, particularly if his ruler is playing the bully to someone else; there is in addition a pleasure in having the whole of his life organized for him down to the last detail.

A Short Cut

"IF all Germans are at any given moment doing the same things and thinking in the same way it gives him the illusion that everything in his own mind is being conducted in an orderly way; doubt is quenched, anxiety is diminished, he is untroubled by his inner feelings, guilt is allayed. The exact ordering of external life is a kind of occupational therapy which reduces the painful apprehensions arising from internal stress.

"By his deification of the leader and the state, and his contempt for all other people, the German tries a short cut to the solution of the problem of evil. Differing opinions held between fellow nationals is felt to be dangerous because mutual confidence, which springs from tolerance of difference, is lacking.

"But the strength which comes from the crude dichotomy of good within and evil without is brittle because it is based on a denial of the truth, though for a time it may be strong in deeds. It breaks when its action is delayed or frustrated, because the whole structure of belief is based on the leader and the state.

"Even temporary failure is a menace to that peace of mind—that armistice of inner conflict—which denies humanity and human rights to foreigners, for delay in the attainment of success may show that fate is an avenger of wrong. It is idle to think that the enemy is exempt from guilt because he is so barbarous; on the contrary, he must continue his barbarity lest he be overtaken with painful misgiving and even remorse; these feelings which he stigmatises as decadent must be kept from his consciousness and their influence on his life denied.

"Our adversaries have chosen a way of resolving their own difficulties which has plunged the world into misery, and their evil designs are furthered by traitors who criminologists tell us are never people with an easy mind.

"Liberty can only be bought at the price of vigilance. The concentration of aggressive power in the hands of a few men, which science has made possible, favors the totalitarian countries in the first phases of warfare. A few men can spring a surprise, a multitude never can. What is remarkable is that the people in the democracies were so blind to the danger . . .

For Our Children

"BUT the savage stab at England which the enemy intends and has already begun puts past confusions and mistakes into the background. This island and our generous and easy tradition of life are objects of the enemy's desire and of his hate. We, too, are forced to be a military nation and to focus all power in the hands of a few men.

"Some view this act with foreboding, saying that we turned totalitarian to fight totalitarianism. This is a confusion of thought which we and the neutral countries should be clear about.

"To us Churchill is a man, not a god; we gave him great power the better to fight for the freedom of a country and a tradition that we and he love. He does not mould our way of life, but we let him guide such of our actions as will serve our common ends.

"Germany has devised the weapon of total war, and in the process has become a destroyer of much that gives life value. Our aim will not be achieved unless we can assure to ourselves and to our children a victory in the all-in struggle for a 'total peace'; a way of life in which the common man can live his life fully, devoting himself to his own good purposes in the service of those he loves."—From Public Opinion.

No Direction

Familiar Names Gone

Throughout the British Isles all place names on signs and places of business have been removed to prevent direction being given to possible invaders. The London Times, London, comments editorially in the matter.

"MASTER young gentleman, I pray you which is the way to Master Jew's?" "Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marry at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down directly to the Jew's house." Launcelot Gobbo's directions to his true-begotten father would make a good model for the right answer to a stranger of ingratiating manner, dressed perhaps as a clergyman or a police inspector, who should ask the way to the Grysdal Ballace of the fillage of Liddle Vallop. We have been warned by authority that there will be many such dangers ahead, now that signposts and milestones have been taken away of obliterated all over the country; and dangers much greater than the bear that lurks to right or left or the Major Road who truculently orders the motorist to respect his rank. The man who knows where he is and which is the way to Walsingham, or wherever it may be, must be very chary of imparting his knowledge.

A Comic Side

EVEN the indignation aroused by the thought of all the enemy spies and the native fifth columnists, crawling all over the country on their nauseous activities, cannot drive out all enjoyment of the comic side of it—the thought of an honest Briton, for instance, on his lawful business, completely lost and unable to persuade a soul to tell him where he is. But, as a road official has said, it is better that a hundred people should be inconvenienced than that one should be supplied with information that he should not have. It might even be thought wise to obliterate the names of streets in towns. Cavillers might say that in some London boroughs it would not be worth while because there are so few street names on the walls already; and even under stress of war it is impossible not to think what a glorious time the London County Council would have if it were given a free hand at its favorite game of changing street names, and were bidden to change the name of every street in London. But these are thoughts to indulge in lighter times than these; and the Germans know London so well that they would never be taken in. They would be more puzzled by the proposed removal of all railway station names, including presumably those lovingly laid out in white stone or clipped box in the station garden. It would certainly puzzle the British traveler now that so many stations are made to look exactly like each other, and none is lighted at night, and few railway porters have had lessons in elocution.

Long Memories

SOME there are with long memories who will regret that loss of the road signs for other than practical reasons. Most of the fingerposts (they were always called fingerposts in those days) were scarcely legible by daylight, still less by the light of an uplifted carriage lamp. They were tall, because they were meant to be read from horseback or the box of a carriage or the driving seat of a high dog-cart; and the paint had not been renewed for years, and as often as not the arm was rotting out of the socket in the post. Nobody minded much, because, before the motor car came in, all long journeys were made by train, and everyone knew the roads about his own neighborhood, and the lost hunting man could always find a blue-goggled stone-breaker by the roadside or someone else to put him on his way. The touring bicyclist first revived the demand for the fingerpost, and everyone knows how, in the motoring era, it soared in importance and dwindled in height, and the very milestones were cleaned and whitewashed and restored, until no one less blind than Old Gobbo had any difficulty in finding his way. Now milestones and fingerposts alike are hidden, lest infamous eyes should pry at them. The day when they can all be put back and all the sandbags taken away is a day for which it is worth while to hope and to work and to suffer.

Jumping Goldfish

BEACONSFIELD, Eng. (CP).—Mrs. Kathleen Bishop was looking for a goldfish when she showed a light during the blackout here. When she appeared in court she claimed the fish had jumped out of its bowl. She was fined 10s ($2.22).

Then, as Now!

The last that dare to struggle with the Foe.
'Tis well! from this day forward we shall know
That in ourselves our safety must be sought;
That by our own right hands it must be wrought;
That we must stand unpropped, or be laid low.
We shall exult, if they who rule the land
Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band,
Who are to judge of danger which they fear,

Suburb and Country

AGRICULTURE IS A FIRST PRINCIPLE: ON IT RESTS THE LIFE AND HAPPINESS OF MANKIND—Julian A. Dimock

Flowers That Will Thrive Through Drought and Heat

DURING the periods of drought, the calculating gardener not only observes the flowers which are faring well in his own garden; he also views his neighbors' borders in an effort to learn which plants survive much sun and little rain, writes Julian R. Meade in The New York Times. If he waits until Spring, when showers may be frequent, it is easy to forget that moist, friable land may become parched and baked by July or August.

A number of excellent dry-weather plants are available; some should be set out now, and at least a note should be made of the others, since they may be forgotten in the Spring, when Summer droughts are not given much forethought.

Of perennials, Nepeta Souvenir de Andre Chardon seems to thrive in the driest earth. It is an upright growing plant, not to be confused with the smaller Nepeta mussini. Attaining a height of eighteen inches, its silvery grey foliage lends contrast to a mixed border and its large, dark blue flowers defy the most blistering weather.

The familiar Sedum spectabile has handsome flowers of a soft rose and effective light green leaves. It is one of the best of the erect-growing species of sedums, often reaching eighteen inches in height. It thrives in rock gardens, slopes and borders when other flowers may wilt for lack of rain.

Combining Species

ANTHEMIS tinctoria is another perennial which withstands the most adverse conditions of the Summer months. Its large, golden, daisy-like blossoms may be cut for the house or left to brighten borders to equal advantage. The foliage of this anthemis, or yellow camomile, is ferny and finely cut. It can be effectively combined with groups of Artemisia Silver King, the variety of southernwood best suited to places lacking moisture.

Betony—especially the type Stachys grandiflora—is a perennial attaining a height of three feet, being slightly taller than Anthemis tinctoria, with rose-purple flowers on long stems. It is recommended because of its profusion of blooms and its resistance to drought.

Almost everyone wants at least one variety of hardy garden pinks for Summer. A member of the pink family for hot, dry places is Dianthus arenarius, sometimes termed Sand-loving Pink. From July to September it has fragrant white or light pink flowers with a carmine ring.

A prostrate plant particularly valuable for very dry and sunny spots in rockeries is the poppy mallow, Callirhoe involucrata. This trailing plant is free-flowering with saucer-shaped blossoms, bright crimson with white centres. Fall planting is done early to be safe; otherwise Spring planting is advisable.

Foliage Interest

SEVERAL dry-weather perennials have unusually interesting foliage. Lavender Cotton, Santolina chamaecyparissus, with its aromatic, delicate, silver-white foliage and heads of rounded yellow flowers, thrives in a very dry corner of the writer's rockery. Certain thymes withstand considerable ordinary drought: Thymus citriodorus (Lemon Thyme) or Thymus lanuginosus appreciate some charcoal strewn about them to absorb any possible moisture. Geranium argenteum, Silver-leaved Cranesbill, seems to delight in being baked and dried.

Besides the perennials already mentioned, attention is called to the dwarf bushy evergreen plant or small shrub, Daphne cneorum. The Rose Daphne, or Garland-flower, often dies where it receives any overhead watering or even watering from a hose along the ground; it is the despair of many gardeners who keep trying it because of its lovely pink flowers and amazing fragrance. It blossoms appear not only in the Spring, but again in the Fall.

If some of these plants are planted either now or in early Spring (when they can be edged with such drought-resistant annuals as portulaca or vinca) in hot, dry places, they will be ready to flower through the next droughts.

SWEET PEAS OVER NINE FEET HIGH

Mrs. Sydney Wormald, of 516 Rithet Street, Victoria, points with justifiable pride to the row of sweet peas in her garden which exceed the nine-foot six-inch mark as indicated on the marker at the back of the garden. On Mrs. Wormald's shoulder is perched "Poll," her thirty-eight-year-old parrot, which travels about the house and garden with its mistress at every opportunity.

Care of Sweet Peas for Sustained Production of Healthy Flowers

SWEET Peas are now beginning to make one of the features of the flower garden. The haulm is carrying a good covering of flowers. But the plants must be helped if they are to produce the first-class blooms.

They need water in dry weather, of course, but three evenings a week will suffice for that. On each occasion give two gallons per yard run of clump or row.

And, of course, you must keep the soil stirred amongst the plants and twelve inches on either side of the main stems. On warm, dry evenings a spraying with clear water on the lower, unflowered parts of the haulm will assist to prolong flowering by keeping the haulm supple and green.

If you are growing cordon, or single-stemmed plants, tendrils at the lead-ends and side-shoots are superfluous. Clip off the former as they develop, and remove the latter when they are an inch long with the point of a penknife blade.

Should you be growing for a plenteous display, without too much regard to the quality of the individual bloom, all outward-growing side-shoots may be retained. Remove the inward-growing ones, however.

Feeding is very important. It doesn't consist in giving so many doses of liquid manure. That's a fattening, but not a healthy programme. You have to study maintenance of haulm, vigor, color, and stability and size of bloom.

Good Feeding Mixture

THIS you do by feeding on the following lines. Every week from now until the end of the flowering period dress with a mixture of superphosphate of lime five parts, sulphate of ammonia two parts, sulphate of magnesia (Epsom salts) and sulphate of lime (gypsum) one part each. The parts are by weight.

Save time by mixing a six or eight weeks' supply at once, storing the mixture in a cool, dry place.

At each application give one ounce per yard run of clump or row, watering the dressing in if the soil is dry, stirring should it be moist.

In addition to feeding, give lime water (two ounces of freshly-slaked lime to the gallon, and half gallon per yard run), every three weeks, to correct soil-souring.

The weekly removal of faded flowers is a duty the neglect of which can mean almost total cessation of bud development. It is helpful also when the plants are at the height of their beauty, to cut plenty of fresh bloom, thereby relieving the great strain on the roots.

Now that midsummer is here, mildew, that wrecker of hopes, may break out any time. The mealy white film with which it covers leaves, buds, and bloom quickly takes the life out of the plants. If you see signs of this fungus, dust the affected portions with green sulphur powder.

Deep Drinking Vessels for the Ducklings

DUCKLINGS are usually fed on wet mash, and a common trouble encountered is that their bills and nostrils get stuck up with mash.

If you watch ducklings eating you will see that every now and again they go to the water vessel and dip their bills into the liquid in an endeavor to clean them.

Frequent filling of the water containers is essential; otherwise there is soon an accumulation of sticky mash at the bottom and it is this which adheres to the bills, clogs up the nostrils and gets into the eyes.

So that the ducklings cannot reach the layer of sticky mash in the bottom of the vessels they should be of considerable depth.

Another method of preventing this common trouble is to have a small pan containing an inch or so of damp sand next to the food and water vessels. The ducklings, if they get mash on their bills, dig about in the wet sand and this removes it.

Should Never Be Wasted

LAWN mowings need never be wasted. Any that have stood all Winter make excellent manure under beans or tomatoes. An inch layer in the bottoms of seed boxes gives seedlings a good start.

Decayed lawn mowings also make a splendid mulch. Used for this purpose they are almost preferable to manure, because the black nature of the substance greatly aids the retention of precious moisture.

Lawn mowings, too, dried immediately after cutting, make a good substitute for bran in the poultry feed. When intended for this purpose the clippings should be short, and they should be spread out on clean sacking to dry. When dry, the clippings are best stored in sacks in a dry, airy shed.

Succession crops in the vegetable garden are planted as rapidly as early ones are cleaned up; by planting between old rows they can often be got in a week or ten days earlier.

Saanich Loganberry Growers Faced With Serious Plight

By C. B. FAHRNI

THE loss of the British market due to the war is a serious thing for Island fruit growers, and as yet Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture have done nothing to lighten the burden thus saddled on the growers through no fault of their own.

Dry weather, wind and rain, the grower always has to contend with; and it is estimated that this year the crop is short 30 per cent from dry weather conditions. But going to war is no "act of God," and it would seem fitting that when conditions arising out of the war deprived fruit growers of their hard-earned market, the Government of this country should have interested itself in finding some way to utilize this valuable food that otherwise will be wasted.

But, we understand, the growers' emissary returned from Ottawa with the bad news that the Canadian Government had other things of greater concern to occupy their minds at this time than agricultural problems. We question this reasoning: with the influx of evacuee children, refugees and war prisoners to Canada, and the fighting forces being increased daily, Canada will require all the foodstuffs she can grow, particularly if she is to meet her obligations as one of the great granaries of the Empire. And the fact that British Columbia fruit is going to rot in the fields this year just doesn't fit in with a well-regulated Government.

Co-operative Endeavors

GROWERS in South Vancouver Island are very ready to admit that there are some things in their co-operative endeavors that need correcting: there is a spirit of competition between locals that is quite foreign to true co-operation, and these local problems will have eventually to be ironed out by the growers themselves. However, it costs so much to produce fruit for market, and when the price offered does not pay the grower for his expenses, this is a problem for the Government to solve.

There are four co-operatives in the Saanich Peninsula, and their problems are fairly identical. The Gordon Head Co-operative is one of the oldest and most firmly established. There are 109 members, not all of whom are active growers. This district has been famous for its fruit for the past forty years, and Gordon Head strawberries had a national reputation in the old "Hamsterley Farm" days. But today fruit growing is a precarious business in this well-established community, and real estate values are being enhanced by the fact that city residents are finding here ideal sites for suburban estates, rather than from the profits of these acres, as producers of grain and fruit, to the owners.

The strawberry acreage this year was not what it used to be, but of the crop produced a ready market was found in the local cannery for the surplus over local sales of fresh crates. A fair crop of raspberries was disposed of in this way also. All the gooseberries raised in Gordon Head were also sold at a good price on the local market. Black currants are grown quite extensively, and this year the entire crop was sold at Vancouver through the co-opcrative for a better price than last year. Boysenberries and youngberries are grown at Gordon Head, and as yet there is a fair local demand for all that are offered.

Loganberries Wasted

LOGANBERRIES are the main fruit crop, and with an assured British market every farmer has had his plantation of logans. But the picture is changed this year at Gordon Head. Of the tonnage of logans raised only forty tons have been sold to the wineries at the select price; about fifteen tons were used in the local cannery, and the growers have the choice of selling the remaining tonnage at a price below the cost of production, or leave them in the fields; and, we understand, this latter was the course taken. Last week about completed logan deliveries at the Gordon Head cannery.

Canada's greatest value to the Empire is its capacity for producing foodstuffs; in time of war it is particularly desirable to bring this production to a new high. But wars interfere with markets, and that is why wheat boards and produce boards are needed in war time to protect the growers as well as to conserve the food resources of the country. This is obviously a Federal problem, and when Premier King is revising his cabinet he should not fail to name a Food Controller, who could organize the whole nation for maximum production.

It is generally conceded that 1941 will be a very lean year in Europe. Agricultural production will be greatly reduced in every land by the presence of war. Great Britain will have little time to give to production of aught but war material. Here is Canada's opportunity to do a real Empire service, and incidentally it could easily be arranged that the prices paid the growers in Canada would pay them for their labors.

The Japanese Iris Should Be Planted Between July and September

THE great value of the Japanese iris in the garden is the fact that it blooms after the other iris types. The Tall Bearded and Siberian varieties flower in late May and early June, and are followed by the iris of the Southern United States and the Spurian group. The latter may overlap the blooming period of the Japanese iris, which come into flower in June.

Japanese iris prefer a moist situation, along the margin of a stream or pond, but they also do well in a rich, well-drained garden soil. Partial shade is desirable, and protection from hot, dry winds. An abundance of water is given in the early growing period in the Spring, otherwise the stems will be short and the flowers small.

Probably the best time for planting is July to September. Thus given ample time to become well established before Winter, the plants may be expected to produce good bloom in the following season. Planting in early Spring, however, has one advantage to the plant in that the foliage has not developed far enough to wilt and set the plant back. But plants set out in the Spring do not become established sufficiently to flower until the following year.

Prepare Soil With Care

SOIL for Japanese iris should be well prepared, with well-rotted manure dug in, prior to planting. Later, liberal applications of commercial fertilizer are very helpful in producing vigorous growth.

Unlike many other perennials, Japanese iris are best not divided into small divisions for transplanting. Fair-sized clumps, with several rhizomes, are important for successful starting, though the experienced gardener can divide his iris into single rhizomes and carry most of them through by special attention. In transplanting, care is taken not to allow the divisions to dry out.

In a favorable location, the plants may remain for several years, large clumps giving prolific bloom. In time, however, overcrowding may result in shorter stems and smaller flowers. When this occurs, the clumps are best lifted and divided into moderate-sized divisions and reset in a new location.

New Zealand Reclaims Lost Pasture Lands

WIDE areas of land, once considered unsuitable or useless for pasture, are being brought into use in New Zealand following the discovery that cobalt, in minute quantities, is necessary in soil to provide an adequate diet for stock.

The element is lacking in large areas. No one could understand why animals feeding on this land developed a wasting illness which made it impossible to carry them throughout the year. The disease was known merely as "bush sickness." Despite an abundance of feed, sheep and cattle went into a decline, with the result only a few head of stock were pastured on some tracts and other pastures were abandoned.

Government and scientific institutions carried on research work into the cause of bush sickness for a long time. They discovered, in collaboration with Australian scientists, that lack of cobalt was the real cause. The finding has made it possible to open up country once considered useless and stock abandoned areas with animals who are now thriving.

The cobalt is applied with superphosphate as top-dressing and in medicinal form at no great cost. Results often are striking. An emaciated cow, apparently in the last stages of tuberculosis, was given cobalt in the form of a drink, and in three weeks it recovered. Sheep on cobalt-treated land give a greatly increased wool yield and their lambs are heavier at birth.

Cobalt applied to the land is found to be present in grass, turnip and other stock crops. The amount is minute—0.15 parts per million of grass—but it is sufficient.

Make a note of this method of ascertaining the state of your goat's health. A goat in good health has red gums, and the vein in the corner of the eye is also a good red. This vein is discovered by raising the upper lid and pulling down the lower one. Offensive breath is always a bad sign. In good health a goat has sweet breath.

House plants, placed out of doors for Summer vacation, may advantageously be repotted now if they are crowding their old quarters.

PACKING CHERRIES FOR VICTORIA MARKET

This is the scene for the last two weeks in the packing shed at the Keating farm of E. P. Johnston, one of the largest cherry growers on the Saanich Peninsula. Due to the absence of rain, the crop this year has been of unusually high quality, the percentage of "seconds" being the lowest in years.

Young Poultry Should Have Adequate Shade

SUNLIGHT contains two important rays—the ultra-violet, which enables birds to obtain vitamin D for the benefit of general health, and the infra-red which produces heat. These rays are never separated in sunlight, and while the birds are benefiting from the good rays they are also apt to be harmed by the heat rays.

That is why it is so important to provide all growers, young or old, with liberal, deep, cool shade from June to September.

If this most important shade is not given the growers will lose appetite, slow down in development, ruffle in feather, weaken in bone and be unable to withstand attacks of diseases, such as worms and coccidiosis.

Natural shade is the best because it is cool. Thus every area shaded by a hedge, bushes, trees or even a wall should be made use of by moving the coops and growing-on houses near to them.

Where no natural shade is possible, plans must be made to build up artificial shade-screens.

Keeping Tethered Goats Happy in Summer

EXTREMES of heat are intensely disliked by goats, and, moreover, they have a very bad effect on health and milk yield. So, apart from cruelty, it is bad management to leave your milker tethered out in the blazing sun without any chance of obtaining some shelter.

One could, of course, bring the goat in while the day is at its hottest, but it is much simpler to rig up a portable type of shelter which can go out in the field.

This should be placed just within the goat's reach when the tether is run out—not where the animal can walk round it and get caught up.

The flies which can torment goats so much in the hot weather can be somewhat mitigated by the use of a shelter, but if they are still a worry the animals should be dressed with a suitable anti-fly preparation such as citronella.

A rock salt or mineral lick holder should be fixed in the shelter, and it is an advantage to fix a net or rack to the outside where an armful of clippings, greenfood or hay can be placed on occasion to give variety.

Is additional feeding necessary when a goat is tethered out all day? Normally during the months of April, May and June, good pasture will provide a goat with sufficient digestible nutrients to maintain her bodily requirements and produce three pounds of milk.

If, therefore, a goat is producing, or is capable of producing, more than three or four pounds of milk daily she must have additional food in the form of balanced concentrates—six ounces for every extra pound of milk she gives.

But it is most important to remember that the quality of the grass deteriorates as the Summer advances. During July and August a day's feeding will produce only one and a half to two pounds of milk. From September onwards the quality of outside feed cannot do more than just maintain the bodily needs of the animal.

Handling Bees That Are Unusually Wild

WHEN quietening supered stocks of bees or strange stocks whose behavior is uncertain, it is a good idea to use a carbolic cloth, in addition to the usual smoker.

The use of carbolic as a bee-quietener is no new idea. As long ago as 1890 its use was described and advice on how to use it, to help the bee-master to get through his work quickly and without crushing bees when handling surplus chambers, was given.

The recipe advised for use today in preparing the solution is to mix one and one-half ounces (or three tablespoonfuls) of carbolic acid with one pint of warm water and add a piece of soap to aid mixing. The mixture then becomes cloudy.

The solution is poured into a lever-lid tin, having a dozen or so holes in the lid. The tin is then used as a sprinkler for applying the solution to one or two pieces of unbleached calico (eighteen to twenty inches square), the number of cloths used depending, of course, on the number required for the particular job.

A tin in which to carry the cloth when not in use should also be provided.

In handling double-story stocks, lay one cloth over the lower frames, leaving the lugs uncovered. Next, place the second story in a hinged position over the cloth so that any bees along the edges are driven upwards. Now withdraw the cloth and lower into position.

To clear the frame-tops, preparatory to putting on the excluder, lay the cloth over for a moment. This again avoids crushing bees under the metal sheet.

"The most useful source of organic matter for soils is barnyard manure, which is also a valuable source of plant food elements."—C. H. Robinson, Dominion Agricultural Chemist.

All Balled Up!

"SEVENTY-EIGHT! Seventy-nine!" As Jibbering Jerry called out each number, he made a mark on the big bracket fungus that stood in front of him.

"Eighty!" he cried. "Enough for that row!"

Betty dropped her knitting and with a great sigh said, "Well, I'll soon have this scarf finished. It seems funny to be making scarves in the warmest part of Summer, but they are for the Red Cross and they will help to keep our soldier boys warm this Winter. Do you know that every girl in Happy Valley is doing some little thing to help in these troubled times?"

Jerry stretched himself out in the shade, thought for a moment, and then said, "Then I'm doing my bit, too. If I help you to keep track of the stitches, it saves your time and you can get more knitting finished. So, perhaps even a scaredy-cat like myself is of some use after all."

The little girl laughed at the odd remarks of her tiny elfin companion. She was glad to see that Jerry was gradually overcoming his fears. You see, Jibbering Jerry was the most easily frightened sprite in all Fairyland—the slightest noise or the tiniest rustle would set his legs trembling with the fear that a witch was coming to carry him away. That is why Betty was glad to notice that he wasn't nearly so jumpy when he was working with her as she knitted on her scarf. It might be that in time Jerry would conquer all his fear and become a normal sprite like the others in Happy Valley.

As the two sat talking in the cool shade, a voice hailed them from across the clearing, "Hello, Betty! Come with me for a few minutes. I want you to settle an argument between Enrico and myself."

It was Tiko, the bearded painter sprite, who was calling. He seemed greatly concerned about something and Betty hurried to find the cause of his excitement.

"That Enrico!" he fairly exploded, as the girl came near. "He insists that we are to put stripes on the tiger lilies again. Didn't we settle that matter last year after we discovered the baby cougar was not a tiger? I was sure that we had decided to go on dotting the lilies whether tigers were striped or not. Do come with me and tell Enrico that he is wrong."

"Flowers and more flowers," groaned Jibbering Jerry, as Betty went off through the woods with the bearded elfman. "You would think that flowers were the only thing in the wide world to hear old Fuzzy Beard talk."

With a sigh of disgust, Jerry settled himself down on some soft moss and was soon fast asleep.

As the sprite slept, who should pass that way but Youngest Fairy, the mischievous son of the Tree Master. Youngest Fairy had been trying so hard to keep himself from doing any mischief, but when he saw Jerry sleeping so peacefully, he just couldn't resist playing a little joke upon him.

Yes, the moment that Youngest Fairy saw his sleeping friend and the ball of wool with which Betty had been doing her knitting, the urge to play a practical joke overcame all his good resolutions.

Quickly crawling into the ball of olive-brown yarn, Youngest Fairy kicked and worked his way toward the centre. In a few seconds the only part of the sprite that could be seen were his long, pointed shoes.

"Now to frighten Jibbering Jerry," thought the prankster, as he moved toward the sleeping fairy.

But, just as he was about to awaken Jerry, down from the trees overhead there swooped a great fat robin.

"Ah-ha!" thought Red-Breast, as she spied the soft fleecy wool. "This is just the thing with which to line my new nest. My, how soft and comfortable it will be."

But at that very instant, Jerry awoke and saw the red-breasted bird make her sudden grab at the woolen mass. He sprang to his feet and shouted angrily at the would-be robber.

"Go away! That belongs to Betty! You can't take that away with you!"

But it was too late. Red-Breast was off with Betty's wool and poor Youngest Fairy was inside, kicking and spluttering and wishing that he had never thought of the mean prank he had planned on playing.

Calling to Betty and Tiko to help him, Jibbering Jerry ran through the woods in the direction the robin had flown. As they hurried along the wooded trail suddenly Tiko spied a long woolen thread.

"The ball has begun to unravel," Betty explained. "If we follow it, perhaps we will be led to the robber's nest."

And as it happened, the long piece of yarn did lead them to the very spot where Red-Breast had started her new home. But, what a sight met their startled eyes as they looked upward into the tree that was to shelter the robin's eggs!

There among the twigs was the ball of yarn, but it was moving! Yes, dancing up and down as though it were alive.

And a voice was coming from the middle of that mysterious bouncing bit of wool—a voice that sounded like that of a fairy!

"Help me, someone!" it was crying. "Don't let the robin make me into a nest!"

"By the great jumping toads!" cried Tiko, "I think that's Youngest Fairy."

But Jibbering Jerry was the only one that kept cool, and turning to the others, he said, "If we pull the long thread that is hanging from the tree, maybe the ball will fall to the ground. Then, whatever is making the ball move so queerly can be rescued."

A sudden tug! The woolen mass came tumbling to the ground with a light thud and a few seconds later Youngest Fairy was standing beside the other three.

"Whew!" he breathed with relief. "That was a close call! I thought I was going to be made into a robin's roosting place."

"Robin's roosting place, indeed!" thundered Tiko. "Just why were you inside that ball of yarn?"

"Oh," replied the rescued sprite, a little shamefacedly, "I was planning to frighten Jerry. I thought he would be startled if the ball of wool suddenly jumped at him."

"Me—startled?" said Jerry, "why, you should know that I'm one of the bravest fairies in all of Happy Valley. Didn't I go after the robin when I saw her steal Betty's wool?" But when Betty started to giggle at this proud boasting, Jerry held up his hand for silence and made the remark, "Now, everyone be quiet. I feel a poem coming on—a poem that will tell of the bravery of one, Jibbering Jerry, and the plight of one, Youngest Fairy. Listen carefully."

"In spite of all they say,
Jibbering Jerry saved the day!
His bravery unsurpassed
Can never be outclassed,
While Youngest Fairy, I am sure,
Will never make an a-via-tor!"

Even the crestfallen prankster had to laugh merrily at this funny bit of verse. Indeed, he went as far as to say that he was sure that he didn't want another trip with Red-Breast and that he would be careful not to get his next practical joke "all balled up!"

To a Spitz

I lost my heart to you
The day your mistress brought you, decked
In bow of crimson hue.

Your puppy heart soon understood
That you had come to stay,
And you endeared yourself to me
A thousand times each day.

The do's and dont's of dogdom, too,
You had to learn from me;
And who can say which suffered more
At punishment's decree?

Then came those pain-filled days that found
Your fever raging high,
And as you gasped through tortured lungs,
I prayed that you might die.

But you had come of sturdy stock—
God bless your fighting heart!
Perhaps your very love of man
Forbade that life depart.

Devoted, quivering bit of life,
What lessons you could teach!
Your love and loyalty and faith
All human traits outreach.

Dear full-fledged guardian of my home,
I lose my heart anew
Each time I look into your eyes
And see the soul of you.

—Betty L. Labadie.

But It Is a Fact!

Technicolor Potatoes—Just as though they were trying to imitate the popular natural-color movies, scientists have now developed potatoes in color. You can choose such shades as yellow, purple, red, pink and blue. And if these shades don't match the wallpaper or the dinner plates, try the white potatoes with red or blue eyes.

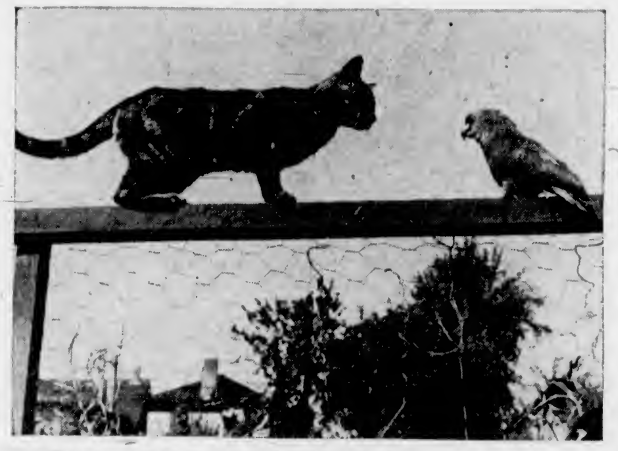

And Mousies, Too!—At one time, white mice were great rarities, but English scientists have produced prize specimens in black and white, red, chocolate, blue, fawn and even lilac.

Flies Really Fly—The common house fly travels more than five miles in the course of a single day.

So, Swat That Fly!—Over one million germs are carried on the legs and body parts of the house fly, although they have been known to carry as many as 40,000,000 germs. No other insect plays so great a part in the spread of disease, for doctors report that cholera, typhoid and possibly infantile paralysis are spread by this filthy insect.

No Twins Here—Those who have made studies of the shapes of snowflakes report that they have a common characteristic with human finger-prints—no two are alike.

Are You a Lefty?—After examining over over 89,000 children, an American scientist announced that only about 3 per cent of the population was left-handed.

"Jimmy," the cat, and "Poll," the parrot, are the living example of the exception to the rule. Pets of Mrs. Sid Wormald, of 516 Rithet Avenue, they get on together quite amicably, Poll solemnly following Jimmy about the yard when he is freed from his cage. Thirty-eight years of age, Poll's vocabulary includes some fifty or sixty words, which he uses without discretion.

Random Jottings From Here and There in the World of Nature

An Upside-Down Walker

HAVEN'T you often wished, as you lay on your back in bed, that you were able to walk on the ceiling? Spiders have this ability, but it does not come from wishful thinking. A spider's foot is provided with special pads of hair that secrete the sticky substance which enables the creature to cling upside-down to even the smoothest of ceilings.

Web-Walking

THE jointed legs of many spiders are covered with a plentiful growth of hair. Were this hair not present, the creature might have great difficulty in walking along the slender silken strands of its own web. Web-walking is further aided by two or three claws at the end of each of the eight legs. These claws help the spider to grip the surface along which it is walking, as well as to cling to the web.

Here's Your Comb, Mr. Spider!

MOST of us carry a comb in our pocket or purse with which to keep our hair neat and tidy, but Mr. Spider has two combs on the end of each leg for quite a different purpose. These combs are placed on the claws, and each has about fourteen small teeth. It is believed that the combs are used to joggle the long radial strands of the web, causing the tiny beads of sticky substance on the circular strands to collect in droplets. Those droplets help the spider to snare the insects that venture in the web.

Combron Spider's Foot

Lightning Speed

BECAUSE the tiny threads of silk dry as soon as the strand comes into contact with air, spiders are able to work on their webs with lightning speed. In fact, a spider takes less than an hour to complete the beautiful circular web so often seen stretched from twig to twig of low bushes.

Splits Spider's Threads

A GERMAN-BORN American, Hans Bock, of Philadelphia, Pa., splits the threads of a spider's web for a living. The split spider threads are used as the cross-hairs in telescopic sights for guns and in precision instruments. Bock collects his own spiders.

A Silk-Making Machine

THE spinnerets, or silk-making machine of the spider, are located on the creature's abdomen. From a group of tiny openings, which are grouped into six projecting spinnerets, is poured the sticky substance which hardens instantly on contact with the air into the familiar web. Each of the tiny spinnerets have hundreds of little openings through which the fluid flows. The little threads from the holes unite into larger strands and these larger strands join with others to form a single strand of the web. Spiders have remarkable control of the silk-spinning machine, for they can produce threads of different sizes, and some spiders can, at will, produce strands coated with a gluey substance.

Games for Beach and Garden

RUGGER touch is an exciting team game. Any equal number of players can participate. Divide the players into two teams, and ask someone to umpire.

Boundaries are arranged according to the number of players and a line drawn across both ends of the ground makes the goal-lines.

The game is played with a net-ball, and the object is to place the ball on or over your opponents' goal-line. The only rule is that a player must pass as soon as she is touched by an opponent. Obviously there is scope for good combination and tactics in this game, and a captain will divide her team into forwards and backs. The backs keep near the goal-line ready to touch any opponent who may have broken through the attack line and be about to "touch down." The game starts with the umpire spinning a coin, and the centre player of the team winning the toss takes the ball. Thereafter centre players take it alternately after each goal.

Attacks, when their side has the ball, should back each other up, and, as in net-ball, strive to get into a space ready for a pass. Frequent accurate passing pays better than rushing forward yourself with the ball and passing only when you are touched. The team which is not in possession of the ball is, of course, endeavoring to intercept the ball as well as to touch an opponent who has it and to pounce on the ball if it goes on the ground.

The ball may not be snatched from an opponent's hands, but if a player is slow in passing when she is touched, the umpire will blow her whistle and give a free throw to the opposing team.

To score a goal the ball must be placed on the ground or beyond the goal-line. It may not be thrown or bounced in that direction. If it goes out of bounds or rolls over the goal-line, the umpire blows her whistle and bounces the ball between the player who last held it before it went out and the nearest opponent.

Nature Notes

Original Distribution of Beaver

THE original distribution of the beaver in North America may be said to have extended to the margin of the distribution of the Aspen poplar, its principal food tree. This broadly covered all of the Dominion of Canada south of the Arctic tundras and most of the United States, including the Territory of Alaska.

The Cat Family in North America

THE members of the cat family native to North America are the cougar, jaguar, ocelot, jaguarundi, lynx and bobcat. The jaguar, ocelot and jaguarundi are found only in the extreme southern and southwestern parts of the United States.

Why Wolverine Fur Is Preferred

THE fur of the wolverine is the only fur known to the writer on which moisture will not congeal at low temperatures. For this reason it is much prized in the North country for trimming parka hoods and other garments which come in contact with the face. It is said, however, that the same qualities are attributed to the fur of the Arctic wolf, but as to the correctness of the statement the writer is unable to say.

Do Wings of the Swift Beat Alternately?

ALTHOUGH it was believed for many years that the wings of the swift beat alternately rather than in unison like other birds, it has recently been proved by slow-motion photography that such is not the case, and what seems to be a fact is merely an optical illusion.

Can Any Animal Run Backwards?

THE habit of running backwards is attributed to the pocket gopher, who, it is said, moves in reverse in its burrow with the same ease that it travels forward. For backward motion, sensitive hairs at the end of its tail act as a guide to negotiate junctions and turns and give warning of obstacles and obstructions.

Old Matt and "Buddy"

BY MARY AGNES COLVILLE

THERE are many, even among lovers of both dogs and cats, who are of the opinion that it is not in the feline character to be as truly affectionate or as constant as the canine. But this story, which I heard recently, provides a touching contradiction of the usual opinion.

To the people in the neighborhood where he lived for years, he was known simply as Old Matt. Whatever his last name, no one ever seemed to use it. Crippled from arthritis, Old Matt, an elderly bachelor without kin, was unable to work for a long period. But carefully budgeted savings from his previous earnings kept him in humble comfort and provided for the care of "Buddy," his beloved cat.

For five years Buddy, who had come to live with Old Matt when little more than a kitten, was the crippled man's inseparable companion. Where Matt hobbled, there Buddy followed, as solicitiously and faithfully as any loyal dog. The cat's singular devotion was commented on for blocks around.

Then came the day when one of the banks where Old Matt's savings were, failed, and his already dwindling resources were cut suddenly in less than half. Not being able to work complicated the tragic circumstances. Old Matt, however, did not mind nearly as much for himself as he did for Buddy. He could no longer afford to keep his pet. The right thing to do, the old man told himself, was to find a good home for Buddy.

So he inserted an advertisement in the Personal Column of the newspaper, offering Buddy to the one who would take care of him for the rest of his life.

There were several answers to his ad, and the big, quiet grey cat was finally entrusted to a friendly family who lived in the suburbs. There would be children to play with and large grounds to explore and the best of meat and drink and personal care.

"He won't miss me so much out there," Old Matt told the new owners in a voice he tried to make sound casual, but failed.

The next-door neighbor said Old Matt hugged the cat, and brushed his dusty coat, and shared his breakfast with him, laughing and crying the while.

Buddy slept at Old Matt's feet that night and was allowed to stay until the following afternoon when a scribbled postal card sent by the old man brought the new owners in their car to get the cat.

The next Sunday, in a heavy downpour of rain, Buddy was back again at the door of his old home, asking plaintively to be let in.

Five times more in all, in the ensuing weeks, Buddy tramped long, tedious miles to visit his old master, to implore, with all the pathos in his large, expressive eyes, not to be sent back ever again.

But each time, Old Matt, feeling the wrench of parting more and more, yet thinking of Buddy's ultimate welfare and knowing how kind the new owners really were, sent word conscientiously to them to come for him.

That is, each time, but the last Old Matt did so. The last time the good-natured, understanding people who had taken Buddy, came without waiting for the anticipated postal card message, only to find Buddy crying piteously beside Old Matt's lifeless body. The old man had been stricken with a sudden heart attack.

Old Matt died without knowing that Buddy's new owners had been going to give the cat back to him that day and provide the money for his keep into the bargain, so that they need not be separated.

After Matt's death, no one could pry the disconsolate feline from the room where the old man lay. The big, usually placid cat had little interest in food or drink and became a veritable clawing, scratching antagonist if anyone so much as attempted to remove him from the presence of his dead master.

But after the funeral, Buddy was his docile self once more, and with a gentle apathy that was more like a human's reasoning resignation, he went back with his new friends and remained with them until his own passing two years later.

"Benny" Woodchuck Grows Fast

SOMEWHERE "Benny" Woodchuck had lost his parents. Whatever happened to them no one knew, but Ellen Brown and Harry Foster, who discovered Benny wandering through the forest, felt sorry for him. He was such a little fellow to be without any mother or father.

"Wouldn't it be terrible not to have any mother or daddy around all the time? How lonesome Benny must be, out here all by himself," they thought.

At first Benny was so frightened he could not eat. But Ellen and Harry were very kind to him. Soon he began to nibble bits of food from their hands.

Benny liked milk best of all. It was as good for him as for boys and girls. At first he was fed with a medicine dropper. He would put his chubby little paws on the milk-filled glass and drink all he could hold.

Within two weeks after they brought him in from the forest Benny nearly doubled in size. Then he became a full-grown woodchuck, able to take care of himself. Knowing he would be happier if allowed to roam at will, Ellen and Harry liberated him. But Benny never went far from the ranch and wanted to be their friend always, because they had been so kind to him.—Henry H. Graham.

"I'm so pleased to see you, Jimmy," Peggy's mother said. "I heard you were an excellent musician. I'm disappointed. I was hoping to see you arrive with an instrument under your arm. What instrument do you play?"

"The piano," replied Jimmy.

The Wonder Bird of the Sea

THE ocean is the kingdom of the beautiful albatross. They are the great fliers of all sea birds, dependent on land only for nesting. They have a light body, narrow wings, but with those great living sails ten or twelve feet or even more from tip to tip, they are the wonder of the ocean.

They will fly unwearedly day after day, night after night, hundreds and hundreds of miles with fastest ships, sailing round and round them with marvelous skill of wing. For ages the secret of their flight has been much debated. Many scientists have thought that the sailing is effected with stationary wings on unperceived currents of favoring air. But the truth is that the albatross adjusts its great wings to match its needs in the air just as an aviator maintains his balance in an airplane. Nature has given it a mastery of the art of conserving energy, and its flight is the despair of every man who tries to fly.

If you ever take a trip around the Cape of Good Hope you will meet immense flocks of them in the early part of the Summer, attracted thither by the vast shoals of fish, whose migrations they follow. There is a story of a sailor who fell overboard in those waters, and even though it was only a few minutes until he was rescued, a number of these birds almost made away with him. So you can see they can be very formidable enemies.

The flesh is not good to eat, so they survive in great numbers. Their cry is like that of a pelican, but they also emit a noise like the braying of a donkey. The female bird heaps up a rude nest of earth not far from the sea or deposits its solitary egg in a slight hollow which it makes in the dry ground. The egg weighs a pound and is about four inches long.

The albatross is one of the great objects of interest to voyagers far away from land, particularly when in the southern seas. It is seen sweeping the surface of the ocean. It seems to float and glide in the air rather than fly like other birds, and, except when rising from the water, the motion of its long wings is scarcely to be perceived. Maybe a motion picture of its flight will sometime yield up its secret. Already we know that a flicker, a swift rise or down beat are among the bird's master strokes in aviation.

Sailors have a superstition that to kill an albatross brings them the worst possible luck, leading to all kinds of misfortune. You are all, no doubt, familiar with Coleridge's poem, "The Ancient Mariner," which deals with such a catastrophe—Helen R. Bissell.

Dad—All wrong? Well, I'm sorry, son.

Great Britain and the Dominions Overseas

Duel of Boomerangs Followed by Murder For Love of Woman

Australian Native Fights With Relative of the Girl He Wants to Marry—Veneer of Civilization Quickly Penetrated

BRISBANE, Australia (BUP).—A duel with boomerangs preceded a strange case of murder which will come before the Cairns (Queensland) Circuit Court soon. This is the story as told by the police:

Tommy Springcart, an aborigine of the Tully District, wanted to marry Julia, a young black-woman, but Julia did not want Tommy, and her uncle, Mick Birdwood, upheld her in her refusal.

So Mick and Tommy fought a duel with boomerangs but neither was hurt.

Afterwards Tommy is alleged to have burrowed a tommyhawk from other aborigines and stated openly that he was going to kill Mick Birdwood. Other natives have told the police that Tommy found Mick riding in a cart with several other blackfellows, knocked him off it and smashed his skull with the tomahawk.

REVERTS TO SAVAGERY

Tommy is then alleged to have cut Mick's body open, and sucked blood from the kidneys, which the aborigines believed to be the seat of a man's bravery. He called on other blacks to join him in this ceremony, and one or two followed his example. Then he is said to have cut a piece of flesh from Mick's thigh and to have thrown the body into the river, where it was found some days later by Julia, her mother and an aborigine called Johnny Kangaroo.

The police were informed and now Tommy Springcart, and two other natives called Spider and Moseley, have been committed for trial.

All these aborigines are comparatively civilized, can speak good English and wear European clothes, but civilization has not prevented them from reverting to their old customs.

ECONOMIC WAR WORKS SURELY

Germany Rapidly Consuming Accumulating Stocks Of Vital Necessities

LONDON (BUP). — Britain's economic war against Germany is working slowly but surely, it is stated in authoritative circles in London, who are of the opinion that Hitler's desperate thrust has been stimulated by the realization that his people cannot face another Winter.

Although Germany accumulated large stocks of essential commodities before the war she has not been able to replenish them, and meanwhile has been consuming them at high speed. Even now she has insufficient supplies of petroleum products, textile materials, soap, fodder, fats, leathers, rubber and non-ferrous metals.

Her situation has been complicated by her invasion of the Low Countries, for these areas have been damaged. She is unlikely to leave these countries to starve, experts believe, for fear of producing diseases which the army of occupation might catch.

A HEAVY BLOW

Danish grain crop is reported as poor and dairying and bacon production have received a heavy blow from the shortage of feedings stuffs on which Denmark is dependent. According to a recent estimate by the United States Department of Agriculture, Denmark's three million hogs may be exported to Germany and most of her cattle killed.

Germany's harvest is expected to be much below that of last year owing to a hard Winter and flood damage. Crop prospects in Southeastern Europe are not favorable. Foot-and-mouth disease, serious all over Germany, is aggravated by the lack of vaccine, which cannot now be obtained. Operations on mechanized farms have been curtailed by the shortage of fuel oils.

SUPPLIES CUT OFF

Germany's invasion of Holland and Belgium has cut off her supplies of raw materials from the Dutch East Indies and the Belgian Congo. The addition of these resources has raised to a very high level the proportion of the world's production of many essential commodities which is controlled by Britain.

TAKE THEM ALL IN

LONDON (CP).—The Officers' (Merchant Navy) Federation has taken over the affairs of Belgian and Dutch merchant navy officers' organizations, and has established official contact with Dutch shipowners' offices here.

POLICE DOG IS OF GREAT USE

Splendid Work in Crime Detection Done in South Africa

CAPETOWN, South Africa (BUP).—Thrilling stories of the exploits of police dogs in the detection of crime are given in the annual report of the South African Commissioner of Police, Colonel I. P. de Villiers.

In one case a dog called Echo tracked down a thief who subsequently admitted that he had wrapped his feet in sacking to escape detection. In another instance a dog followed a trail one and a half miles to a hut in the middle of a compound of thirty-eight huts with one hundred and thirty-five inhabitants and pointed out the native.

In a murder case last September a police dog called Christie performed a fine feat by finding the body of a missing sixteen-year-old girl and also leading the police to the murderer.

MARVELOUS TRAILING

The scent was taken from a footprint believed to be hers. It was followed along a street, across two other streets into the veldt, through a cattle camp and along a valley.

Here a book belonging to the girl was found and a little farther on her mirror. Here the dog lost the scent, but the body of the girl was found 120 yards away. From that point the dog took up the trail from an indistinct mark near the body and followed it back to town and to a stable and then to a dwelling house, where she scratched at the door. Later a native servant of the household was arrested and confessed to the crime.

The principal event of last year, states the report, was the dispatch of a force to Southwest Africa in April, 1939, "in order to assist in maintaining order in the mandated territory and prevent breaches of the peace arising out of the subversive propaganda which was rife through the whole area."

Meets His Family On Ship at Sea

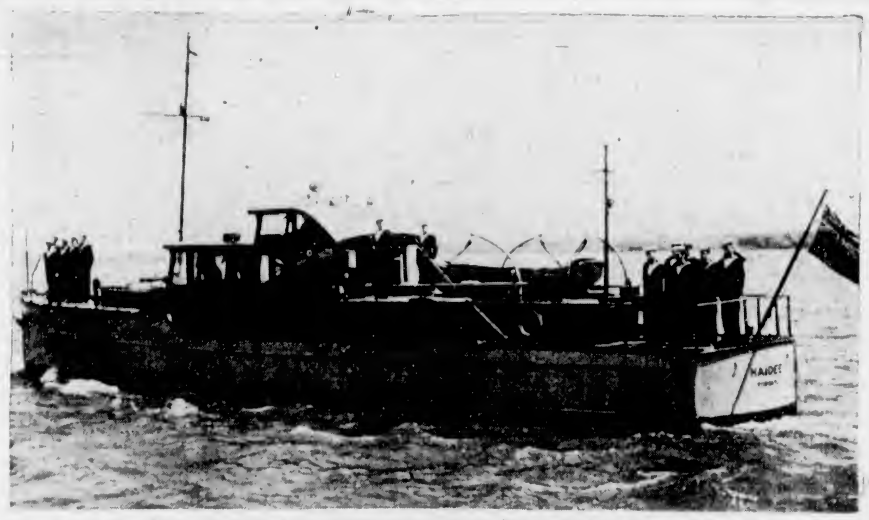

LONDON (BUP). — A Belgian ship's captain has been reunited by chance with his wife and children who escaped from their country before the Nazi invasion.

His ship was in a French port on the day of the invasion. He was not allowed to leave for several days and had no news of his family in Antwerp.

When his ship was released he set sail for his home port. On the way he met a ship and went on board for news.

Is Used for Sea Training on the Great Lakes

The good ship Haidee, training ship of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, will go to Port Stanley and Windsor shortly to take London and Windsor boys on instruction cruises. On a cruise recently into Lake Ontario, fifteen seamen from the Toronto barracks received instructions in heaving the lead, boat drill and steering.

Beauty Aids Are More Expensive

CAPETOWN, South Africa (BUP).—Beauty aids are costing South African women considerably more owing to the war.

The recent Budget imposed a 10 per cent tax on cosmetics, and wholesale prices are higher, so that face powder, lipstick and rouge have risen by about 20 per cent.

Supplies of perfume from Germany have ceased, and many essential oils were imported from Holland.

Finally, women are faced with the prospect of a shortage of hair nets, which come mostly from France, owing to difficulties in manufacture through war conditions.

ENCOUNTER WITH SHARK EXCITING

PAARL, Cape of Good Hope, South Africa (BUP).—An exciting encounter with a sjambok shark, which leapt out of the water, and fell into a boat full of men, is reported from Gansbaai (Cape of Good Hope).

Fortunately, the shark's seven-foot tail, which is like a sjambok whip and as dangerous, hung over the edge of the boat and away from the men.

One of the men seized his long fishing knife and sawed away at the tail with all his strength. The shark suddenly swung round and the man was knocked unconscious. He was falling out of the boat when an obstruction caught his clothes and he was saved.

In the meantime, another member of the crew had sized his knife and hacked away at the shark's tail, which was severed and dropped into the water.

This left the remaining portion of the shark, which was also about seven feet long, lying in the boat.

OLD TRAMMER

AFGHAN RECEIVES DIPLOMA

The Right Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canadian Minister of Justice, presented the diplomas to the graduating class of the Canadian Police College at Ottawa. In the picture, Mr. Lapointe is presenting a diploma to Special Constable Ahad Abdul, of Kabul, Afghanistan, who came to Canada to take the police course with R.C.M.P. officers. He will go back to his native country to reorganize the police there along modern lines.

Wounded Man Shows Amazing Courage in Making His Escape

Went Through Many Adventures Before Succeeding in Making His Way to French Troops—Swam Canal Under Enemy Fire

LONDON (BUP).—A wounded Tommy in a London hospital—the first wounded prisoner to escape from the Germans told a story of amazing grit and determination which enabled him to get back to safety.

When a unit of the Royal Army Ordnance Corps was attacked by German tanks it was forced to retreat into a wood and this man was left behind wounded in the shoulder. He was taken prisoner and returned to a German dressing station where he found a number of French wounded.

Next morning as the prisoners were being moved out, he took advantage of the guard's back being turned for a moment to leap a wall and hide behind a hedge. He was not missed at the moment.

MIND WAS BLUR

The next four days he hardly remembers. His wound and the difficulty of traveling made his mind a blur, but he remembered that at one farm they gave him civilian clothes and at another where he called at night, he got food.

On the fifth day he found himself in a village recently bombed and taken. He hid in a ditch for several hours to avoid a party of Germans nearby.

Finally he made a dash for a nearby canal and in spite of continued firing managed to reach the other side. He sheltered in the undergrowth until he had recovered and then moved on. Two miles further on he came across French troops who mistook him for a fifth columnist on account of his clothes.

He proved his integrity by his identity disc, which, fortuhately, had not been taken from him, and they took him to hospital. He eventually reached England.

"I never did fancy being a prisoner of war" said the Tommy laconically as he finished his story.

JUDGES MAY ACT WITHOUT A JURY

LONDON (BUP).—The "twelve good men and true" may disappear from trials for the duration of the war. With them will go one of Britain's oldest institutions.

Already, under a wartime act, the number is reduced to seven. Even these seven can sometimes ill be spared for the days and sometimes weeks attendance at court, when they have important war work to do.

If the new plan comes into force, the judges would sit alone at the assizes; at the Old Bailey the recorder and other judges would sit without juries; at County Court quarter sessions a bench of magistrates would undertake the trials, and at borough sessions the recorder would function alone.

IRISH MUST AGITATE

LONDON (CP).—Leftist speechmakers in Hyde Park's Sunday open forum are moderating their cries these days. Religious speakers are more numerous and the most riotous "soap box" is the platform occupied by Irish agitators.

OBSTACLES PUT IN THEIR PATH

Ministry of Food Hot on Trail of Racketeers In Britain

LONDON (BUP).—Food racketeers are finding a lot of obstacles in their path. The Ministry of Food is hot on their trail. And the police are chasing the housewives who in their Spring-cleaning enthusiasm have turned the blackout to grey.

The Ministry of Food are "after" the tradesmen who charge more than the fixed prices, and those who deal unfairly by letting their favorites have more than the rationed share.

The grocer who serves his pet customers with extra butter by giving it to the baker to deliver. The butcher who — against the rules laid down — slaughters stock on the premises and sells the food unknown to the officials. The housewives who get special sugar rations for marmalade that they never make.

The 170 inspectors employed by the Ministry as their watchdogs are doing a great deal more "poke-nosing" these days than the evaders of the rationing laws like.

TIGHTENING UP

The police are detailed to look after the blackout and there is a drive to tighten up the slackening that has occurred.

Most of it is unintentional. Housewives in their Spring cleaning have torn down the strips of black round the windows which kept out the chinks of light, and have put up fresh Spring curtains which are not thick enough. So broad chinks of light and a luminous glow through the curtains turn the blackout to grey and gold.

The police are sensibly explaining to householders who carelessly leave a lighted window uncurtained even for a few minutes, the fact that such a light can be seen by a plane five miles away and 10,000 feet up.

SAVED FROM DEATH BY SLENDER BRANCH

BRISBANE, Australia (BUP).—The branch of a slender sapling which caught him by the foot saved Roy Tapper, a twenty-three-year-old Queensland footballer, from a death fall down a 200-foot chasm.

Tapper was climbing a mountain when the rock on which he stepped broke away. He hung suspended head downwards with a dislocated shoulder until two other members of his party got him to safety at the risk of their own lives.

Millions of Women Can Help in War

LONDON (BUP). — From all parts of the country are coming forward women with offers of their services on war work, and the labor boards are working full time on plans for the best means of absorbing them.

The million and a half women war workers of the last war will be more than doubled before the end of this year and there are apparently unlimited "followers up."

At the annual meeting of the Central Council for Girl's and Woman's Welfare it was stated that there were five and a half million women normally employed at present who could do other jobs. In addition there were three million unmarried or widowed women, and seven million married women, a reserve of ten million women not normally in employment. Of that reserve between four and five million were available for war work.

QUEEN MARY HAS CHANGE FOR ALL

Finds New Shirts and Socks for Soldiers Billetted in Her Village

WEST COUNTRY, Eng. (BUP) —Queen Mary, hearing that 135 of the battle-stained soldiers had been billetted in her village, immediately reinforced her stock of shirts and socks, and presented each of the men with a clean shirt and a pair of socks.

The Queen Mother herself went into the nearest town and bought the material and got her band of workers going at top speed to turn the required number out in the shortest possible time, and she personally presented them.

As she left the billeting centre the whole village turned out to cheer her and present her with £89 they had hurriedly collected to provide further comforts for the men.

THUMBS UP!

This picture typifies the spirit of the British Expeditionary Force, which, twice forced to evacuate from Belgian and French soil because of the collapse of Belgian and French troops, nevertheless retains a marvellous spirit of cheerfulness and determination. The British Tommies are more anxious than ever to come to grips with the Nazis.

Worried But Not Frightened by News From War

Plain Courage May Have Something to Do With Feelings of the Community in Old Country—Atmosphere Changes, But Not the Will to See It Through

By GLANVILLE CAREW

LONDON (BUP).—Whether it be due to lack of imagination, or to mere obtuseness, or to a sort of vanity (now vanishing) of the "they-can't-touch-us" kind, we are not as a community frightened by the war news although, admittedly, we are worried; and that holds good for the rest of the country. Perhaps even plain courage may have something to do with it—but the fact remains.

Nevertheless, we do keep on reminding ourselves that this England has not been invaded since 1066.

Heaven knows, we do not suffer from absence of rumor. Just at present some fertile-minded person of overseas origin is assuring us that Germany has in readiness a great fleet of colossal flying tanks or rather tanks which will be flown here by airplanes—of a capacity hitherto undreamed of. These will be dropped upon the countryside in the dead of night—and so on and so on.

CHANGED ATMOSPHERE

It would be idle to say that there has been no change in the atmosphere here within the past few weeks. On the contrary, our tendency to case ourselves of the war burden by a shrug of the shoulders and an "Oh, well, there it is, let's talk of something else," has given place to an ever-present consciousness of war which cannot be shrugged away. But, again, it is not fear.

Take the little everyday matters of wartime. Our gas masks, for instance. We have now been enjoined rather earnestly by the authorities to take these things at once to the nearest air warden's post to be fitted with an additional gadget. This is an extra filter which is attached in a couple of minutes by adhesive tape to the snout of the mask. Instantly the yarn has run round that the enemy has just discovered a new and more than ever noxious gas the composition of which is a secret and which our best scientific chemists have sought vainly to discover. In fact, however, the purpose seems to be to render breathing less difficult in dense smoke.

Incidentally, one result of this addition to the masks is that many of the mask cases which we carry with us will not accommodate the extra inch or so of space which the new addition takes up. That shows signs of leading to a minor boom in the sale of a new and slightly larger case. Still, the mask which we had got into the habit of leaving at home is now being carried to the office and elsewhere. Many firms and all official places are now again insisting on their being at all times carried by their staffs.

BARBED WIRE COMMON

Yet another thing keeps the war before us. Most of our Government buildings — those in Whitehall in particular such as the Admiralty, for instance, are now surrounded by barbed wire, and armed sentries both at outer and inner barriers scan the credentials of everyone, without exception, who wishes to enter. This applies to everyone of whatever rank and however well known. Even the much derided Ministry of Information, though so far it boasts no sentries, has festooned its outer railings with wire and padlocked some of its gates. Possibly, say the disrespectful public, the object in this instance is not so much to prevent anyone getting into the building as to prevent any information getting out.

Another thing which is being done and is an evidence of wartime, is the removal of many of the iron railings which are such a feature of London. Whenever these can be dispensed with they are uprooted and presumably will ultimately find their way to the Continent of the coast in the form of shot or shell or tanks. From the aesthetic point of view the disappearance of these railings will in some instances be a loss. Many of them are of artistic merit and probably some of the most noted will be spared. The railings around some of the great West End squares are seldom less than 150 years old. Even much of the railing around Hyde Park will go; these in the course of years have been the centre of much political controversy and from time to time of disturbance. Possibly they "never will be missed." The little "shin" railings which serve in the London parks rather to define paths than as barriers will vanish, too.

ATTITUDE TO ENEMY

The most noticeable recent change in London is in the attitude of the individual to the Germans. Hitherto, truth to tell, there has been very little sense of personal animosity by the individual here against the Germans. Today there is a growing and bitter anger among the people not only against all Germany, but all Germans.

One thing is very noticeable. Such neighborhoods as Hampstead and Golders Green are, in normal times, simply packed with resident Germans and Austrians. Indeed it was said, more or less good humoredly, that an Englishman who desired to live there should apply to the British Consul in those localities for permission to do so and be prepared to produce his passport at any time. Relatively few of these aliens have been interned, yet from the moment that general internment peeped around the corner they have disappeared in great numbers from those neighborhoods. Where they have gone is a mystery to the public, though the police no doubt have their eye upon them. Anyhow, a newspaper remarked cynically the other day that the neighborhoods in question may now again be reckoned as parts of the British Empire.

PLENTY OF SHELTERS

A last note: More and more air raid shelters are springing up in London streets like magic. They are strongly built of greyish white brick and concrete; the bricks at present cost fivepence (ten cents) apiece. And as an instance of what is general, a watchman setting the red lamps around a half completed shelter told me recently that within a radius of a quarter of a mile at most, thirty-six are being built. And for all London you may multiply that number by almost what you like.

SEVEN WEDDINGS WERE ARRANGED

YORK (BUP). — Seven weddings had been arranged in one battalion stationed in Yorkshire when the order "all leave cancelled" came through.

The C.O. and lieutenants got busy. Seven weddings were arranged to take place immediately, the C.O. himself acting as best man to one bridegroom, while other officers detailed themselves as best men to the bridegrooms, or "fathers" to give away the brides.

Men of the regiment provided the guard of honor for the seven lucky ones, and arranged the lightning wedding breakfast. To complete the "coup," the officers vacated the local hotel and "lent" it to the seven couples for an equally lightning honeymoon, and the battalion set off for overseas duty with seven happy husbands on the strength.
